Detective Chief to Take Witness Stand Today

Capt. Keck Heads Department Called 'Weakest Link' In Police Setup

By Robert De Vore.
Post Staff Writer

The present head of the detective bureau, "weakest link" in the Metropolitan Police Department, comes before the House Police Investigating Subcommittee today.

A subcommittee primed with questions suggested by testimony of detective jealousies and inefficiency and by disclosure that the bureau is to undergo a "top to bottom" shakeup, awaits Capt. Ira E. Keck, acting chief of Metropolitan detectives.

Keck, reached at his home last night, declined to discuss his testimony in advance.

From a welter of accusation and denial, the subcommittee also will attempt today to pluck the truth about an alleged policy of the department in waiting six hours before instituting a search for missing persons and whether this rule lost for it precious minutes in investigating the murder of Jessie Elizabeth Strieff.

The accusation was made again yesterday by Stanley Le Blanc, slight, dark-complexioned Farm Credit Administration clerk, who was Miss Strieff's fiance.

He told the subcommittee that not only was he informed by Private Edwin Grayson of the public relations bureau that the police do not consider a person to be missing until six hours after disappearance, but the same reply was made to Miss Strieff's roommate, Christine Tankersley.

Charges Policeman "Laughed"

Furthermore, said Le Blanc, the policeman whose beat covered Miss Strieff's apartment at 2110 Nineteenth Street Northwest, "laughed" when informed that the girl was missing.

The policeman, Le Blanc declared, "laughed and told us it would do no good to report that Betty was gone because the police didn't search for missing persons for six hours."

Le Blanc was satisfied, he said, that both he and Miss Tankersley talked on the telephone to the same headquarters policeman — Private Grayson. He timed Miss Tankersley's call at 4:25 o'clock and his own at 15 minutes later on the afternoon Miss Strieff vanished.

Grayson told the subcommittee Wednesday that he received the first call on the Strieff case at 7:40 p. m. He denied, without reservation, that he informed anyone it would not be possible to attempt to find Miss Strieff until six hours passed.

Six-Hour Rule Denied

A succession of police witnesses, topped by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, have declared before the subcommittee that they "never heard" of anything like a six-hour rule. Any officer who invoked such a rule in the Strieff case would be neglecting his duty, Brown asserted.

To make a start at establishing what happened in the Strieff case the subcommittee summoned for today Emmett P. Bateman, a clerk in the central bureau, which is the clearing house for all calls to police headquarters. Bateman is being called, said Representative Schulte, subcommittee chairman, because he could have received a call in the Strieff case, and because, over the telephone, Schulte believes, his name might have sounded like Grayson.

Le Blanc detailed for the subcommittee yesterday his actions when he came to Miss Strieff's apartment at 3:45 p. m. June 15 to learn from Miss Tankersley that his fiancee had disappeared. He searched every

Pledge Unfulfilled

Committee Kills Capper Plan To Give D. C. Resident a Vote

A year ago this month, the Democratic National Convention tacked this plank into its Presidential campaign platform:
". . . We also favor the extension of the right of suffrage to the people of the District of Columbia."

A subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary Committee yesterday voted unanimously in a half-hour closed session to kill the Capper-Sumners resolution.

That was a measure to amend the Constitution to authorize Congress, if it so desired, to give a voteless city of 700,000 inhabitants the right of self-government, to elect representatives in Congress and to vote for President and Vice President in national elections.

The subcommittee's decision was taken in the face of overwhelming civic demand for enfranchisement voiced in a city-wide referendum and despite virtually unanimous citizen indorsement at hearings the Senate body conducted this spring.

Was Campaign Pledge

The political line-up of the subcommittee membership is three Democrats, a Republican and an Independent. The Democratic members are Senators McCarran of Nevada, the chairman; Connally of Texas, and Kilgore of West Virginia. Senator Austin (Republican), of Vermont, and Senator Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, are the other members.

The subcommittee acted in executive session after each of its members had been furnished by Senator McCarran with a copy of printed hearings on the resolution and a summary of the proceedings.

In individual statements of reasons for their actions, members of the subcommittee indicated a willingness to see established in the District a semiautonomous form of government whose officials would be elected by the people.

Hold Amendment Unneeded

Senator McCarran and other subcommittee members declared that a constitutional amendment, as proposed by the Capper-Sumners resolution, is unnecessary for this purpose. Several of the Senators agreed with McCarran's interpretation of the resolution as giving the District the status of a State.

McCarran said that the subcommittee's report to the full committee next week would point out its view that no constitutional amendment is necessary for Congress to delegate to the District some of its governing powers over the Capital.

"I favor giving home rule to the District, reserving supreme control of the seat of Government to Congress," McCarran declared. "I am not in favor of giving the District the status of a State for these reasons:

"1. The Constitution ow provides how a State may be brought

D. C. Blonde, 11, Passes Muster For Defense With Hank of Hair

Eleven-year-old Jeanne Turner yesterday contributed to national defense something it had taken her four years to develop. A fistful of 32-inch golden tresses.

The hair is now an integral part of the defense program, or at least on the way to becoming such. Instead of being regimented in braids, her former locks from now on will expand and contract in meteorological instruments, testing relative humidity.

This is how it all came about.

Jeanne's mother, Mrs. Robert A. Turner, 4226 Seventh Street Northwest, read in The Post last Monday that the Government needs hair for defense purposes. When she inquired at the War Department, she was referred to the Washington Institute of Technology.

Then followed the explanation about the meteorological instruments. Eyeing Jeanne's golden tresses interestedly—only blond hair will do—officials posed a number of questions, such as:

"Has Jeanne ever had any serious illnesses?" She had not, they were told.

Her hair was measured to see if it was the necessary 22 inches. A strand was put under a micro-

WPA Cut Booms Nickel Milk; Many Needy Still Denied It

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

A nickel-milk boom was reported yesterday by David Miller, in charge of surplus commodity distribution for the Board of Public Welfare.

Nearly 800 applications for eligibility cards have been received since the 3,600 persons dropped from WPA this month were notified a week ago that they are now eligible for the 5-cent quarts, said Miller.

He added that applications are still coming in at the rate of 50 to 75 a day. Milk cards are being sent to the needy families as fast as their status is verified and the necessary forms made out.

Indications are that within another week daily sales of the low-priced quarts will be around the 5,000 mark, compared with the present average of 2,800. On Wednesday 2,975 bottles were sold at the 11 scattered milk depots. The total for yesterday will not be available until today.

Under the Agriculture Department's contract with Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase Dairy, which supplies the depots, there is a limit of 10,100 quarts daily which may be delivered and sold.

Since a certain number of the 3,600 separated from WPA have found or will find other jobs, thus losing relief status, and a larger percentage will not avail themselves of nickel quarts due to lack of funds or for other reasons, the present rush for application cards is not expected to tax the 10,100-quart limit.

When all of the ex-WPA workers now idle and ineligible for direct relief are taken care of, there probably will still remain an appreciable number of bottles which could be sold but won't be because of the rigid eligibility regulations.

These deny the low-cost quarts to all needy families except those on direct relief or certified for WPA employment and awaiting assignment. WPA workers and recipients of private charity are not permitted to buy the surplus milk, though in the great majority of cases they cannot afford to pay the standard market prices of 11 to 15 cents a quart.

Whistles Prove Thistles

Army Orders Lear to Explain Discipline of 'Yoo-Hoo' Troops

The War Department yesterday ordered Lieut. Gen. Ben Lear to make a full report on his action in disciplining a battalion of his troops for "yoo-hooing" at shorts-clad girls on a Memphis golf course.

The Army disclosed this action as demands were heard in the House for a Congressional investigation of the incident and Lear was both denounced and defended in speeches on the floor.

Representative Norrell (Democrat), of Arkansas, who urged a House investigation of the affair, indignantly attacked the Second Army commander as a "golfing general" and charged that one of the men who made a 15-mile discipline march in the blazing sun on Lear's orders was "lying postrate and near death."

[Col. S. G. Fairchild, commanding officer at Camp Robinson, was quoted by International News Service as denying that one of the soldiers who marched the 15 miles now is "lying prostrate and near death." He said casualties, as a result of the march, included one broken rib, one headache and three gastronomical disturbances.—Editor's note.]

Norrell pointed to newspaper reports that Gen. Lear was playing golf in mufti when he and golfers

U. S. Setting Up Ulster Outpost For England, Senate Is Told

A charge that the United States was constructing a naval air base for Great Britain in Northern Ireland yesterday precipitated an angry debate in the Senate.

The statement was made by Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, and echoed by Senator Danaher (Republican), of Connecticut, during a noninterventionist attack on occupation of Iceland and the President's foreign course.

Senate Majority Leader Barkley told reporters he had no knowledge of such a development and the Navy Department said it would have no comment.

Connally Is Roused

Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas took the floor to reply that Taft wanted the Navy "tied up in a fish pond."

"The only way to keep from fighting," shouted Connally, " is to let these hi-jackers and highwaymen and murderers and assassins and conquerors and dictators know that if we have to fight we will fight."

"Weeks ago," Taft said, "I heard on reliable authority that the United States was constructing a naval air base for Great Britain in Northern Ireland."

[The New York Herald-Tribune said that from independent sources in the Senate it was learned that the base is almost finished, that it will cost between $40,000,000 and $50,000,000, that it was constructed from lend-lease funds and that American civil engineers were given official status, possibly as naval attaches to the American Embassy in London, to supervise the work.

"For Our Use!"

[While it is nominally for the British, the informant said, it could readily be used by American forces when and if the United States should enter the war and would constitute a powerful garrison against a Hitler invasion of Northern Ireland, which is regarded as a first step to any attempt at the invasion of England itself.

[An added advantage of occupation of a base in Northern Ireland by American forces, the Senate source pointed out, would be the greater likelihood of cooperation by the people and government of Eire with these forces than with British forces, once the all-out German

Berlin Sums Up Past Successes, But Is Silent On the Present

By the Associated Press

Berlin, July 10.—Germany announced officially tonight the capture of 323,898 Red army prisoners in what it termed the "greatest material and encirclement battle in world history" on the Bialystok-Minsk front, but maintained almost complete silence on the great campaign now unfolding in the east.

Tonight's announcement recapitulated an entrapment first announced on June 29, seven days after the conflict began.

As for the current progress of the Russian campaign today was the third straight day of the high command's policy of "mystifying the enemy with silence." The high command communique merely said the campaign in the east was progressing relentlessly.

The special announcement also said the number of Red army soldiers captured since the Russo-German war began June 22 now totaled more than 400,000.

Booty Is Colossal

It said the greatest amount of war material ever taken in a campaign had been captured in the double battles of Bialystok and Minsk, now lying behind German front lines.

Besides several generals and divisional commanders captured, the high command said the booty included 3,332 tanks, 1,809 guns and an enormous quantity of other war material.

The total material captured or destroyed since June 22, the command added, thus stood at 7,615 tanks and 4,423 guns, while the Soviet air force so far has lost 6,233 planes.

It was on June 29 that the high command announced in one of a series of special communiques that two Russian armies were surrounded in the Bialystok-Minsk sectors of the central front.

The Germans then asserted the armies "either will capitulate or be destroyed."

Tried to Break Out

Later Nazi reports told of unsuccessful efforts by the trapped armies to break through the Germans as they closed in and some reports said as many as 500,000 Russians were encircled.

While officially reporting the cleanup of the two armies beyond which the tide of battle has swept,

To the first 100 such complaints, The Post wrote a lovely letter suggesting they take up knitting.

The last report shows 99 replies stating, in round numbers: "Phooey on you, grandpa!"

To 167 indignant letter writing wives and sweethearts protesting the pictures of Powers models wound around the necks of Marines, The Post replied counseling not to worry because these boys had been sent to Iceland where they would soon cool off.

Another protested: "Am I an old razor blade; dangerous to discard but no earthly good?"

Tariffs to Be Eased

Britain to Pay for Lease Aid With Concessions, More Bases

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

Great Britain has offered the United States payment in full for lend-lease help, the payments to include a rich share of the empire's vast wealth, The Washington Post has learned.

The State Department and British representatives have been studying terms of a repayment agreement for four months and now have it in near-final shape. One plan which may be followed is to make public the agreement in connection with President Roosevelt's forthcoming request to Congress for a huge new lend-lease appropriation which may double the original $7,000,000,000 fund.

Besides agreeing to return to the United States all the lend-lease equipment still usable when the war is over, the British have discussed a list of other concessions to the United States, which includes:

1. Bases in the Pacific Ocean on such strategic sites as Canton and Enderbury Islands, Christmas Island, the Gilbert Islands and other tiny but key dots across Japan's path of empire.

2. Easier access to raw materials that this country needs and that do not compete with American products, such as Malayan tin and rubber.

3. Tariff concessions so that the United States can send its goods at less cost over the tariff walls that have been built around British Empire countries.

4. Additional bases in the Atlantic Ocean, to supplement the eight obtained last year in exchange for 50 destroyers.

Just which of these concessions will be included in the final agreement has not yet been decided. But the United States is assured, however, of receiving rich additions to its national wealth in return for lend-lease help to the British.

The first step, it was learned, will probably be to publish the text of an agreement of repayment, phrased in general language, stat-

Senate Gets Bills to Lift Limits on Army

Reynolds Submits Changes Favored By War Department

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Sweeping legislation to repeal all present restrictions on the size, use and tenure of service in the Army was put before the Senate yesterday by Chairman Reynolds of the Senate Military Affairs Committee.

The bills, prepared by the War Department and introduced after a closed session of the Military Committee with Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff, would eliminate virtually every limitation written into the Selective Service Act last year during the long Congressional fight over the measure. Specifically, it would:

Remove all limits on the size of the Army, by permitting the President to induct an unlimited number of selectees into the Army during the emergency. The present laws bars more than 900,000 selects from serving at one time and acts as a practical top limit on the strength of the Army;

Repeal the present prohibition against sending selectees or National Guardsmen outside the Western Hemisphere or American possessions, which would permit all Army units to be prepared for service anywhere in the world;

Permit President Roosevelt to extend the services of selectees and National Guardsmen beyond the present year;

Grant him discretion to retain all members of the Army—three-year volunteers as well as selects, Guardsmen and Reservists—in uniform for the duration of the national emergency and six months beyond;

Extend the provisions of the Selective Service Act beyond May 15, 1945, its present expiration

Vichy Incensed, Vows to Fight On in Syria

Says British Ignored Truce Plea; Beirut Reported Occupied

By the Associated Press

Vichy, France, July 10.—The Petain government, protesting that Britain had ignored a request to cease firing in Syria and Lebanon, disavowed responsibility tonight for continued "violence and devastation" there and proclaimed a last-ditch resistance.

Late reports said the British were shelling Beirut from sea, and with massed field guns, and that Australian troops were on the outskirts of the city.

Amid the puzzling tangle of contradiction and talk of offended honor which had snared Vichy's own proposal of an armistice, Gen. Maxime Weygand, supreme commander in North Africa, arrived in Vichy by plane tonight.

He drove from the air field to the Parc Hotel—residence of Chief of State Petain—presumably for immediate conference with the old marshal.

The situation over hostilities in the Levant did not preclude the possibility that armistice negotiations might be under way even while the

House Deletes Strike Curbs, Passes Lower Draft Age Bill

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

The House yesterday, in a pro-labor demonstration, stripped all restrictions on defense strikes from a Selective Service bill lowering the age limit for conscription from 35 to 28.

Two complete sections, empowering the President to resume operation of a struck plant and protect defense workmen returning to their jobs, were ripped from the bill by votes of 218 to 151 and 220 to 150.

Only draft limit provisions of the bill remained and these were amended to abolish secrecy by local draft boards in classification of selectees. By a 345 to 17 roll call vote, members passed the riddled measure.

The bill now goes to conference, where Senate conferees will wage a fight to send back to the House the Senate-passed Connally bill, authorizing the President when mediation fails to take over a struck plant with the Army.

Lull in the Storm

By the Associated Press

Moscow (Friday), July 11.—A lull descended on the Russian-German front early today for the first time after 18 days of titanic battles in which the Red army appears to have fought the Reichswehr to a standstill.

Tonight's communique said "nothing of consequence occurred" Thursday—an Eastern Front revival of the last war's historic phrase: "All quiet on the Western Front."

The communique, however, gave a graphic description of the destruction of a German division in earlier fighting, indicating the fierceness of the Red army resistance which the Soviets say has squelched the blitzkrieg.

Leave 3,500 Casualties

The German mechanized division, attempting to break through the right flank of a Russian position far west of Moscow was routed, the Red army communique said, leaving 3,500 dead and wounded Germans on the field.

Furthermore, about 2,400 Germans were captured.

The Russians said they also captured powerful Nazi batteries, numerous machine guns and automatic arms, 150 motorcycles, and other equipment in good condition.

The German division failed on its first try to dent the Soviet lines, then threw in more reserves and succeeded in piercing the Russian ranks temporarily, the communique said.

Arrival of Soviet reinforcements, however, trapped and routed the Germans in the salient in a bloody battle.

Scores of burned out German tanks also were reported left on the field.

Presumably Near Lepel

Presumably this was the German division earlier reported to have been annihilated in the Lepel region, at the head of the Berezina River in the general vicinity of where the Germans are trying to smash through toward Moscow.

The Russian communique added

Germans Blast England After Losing 6 Ships

By the Associated Press

London (Friday), July 11.—German night raiders struck hard at Britain early today in furious answer to the R. A. F.'s sustained aerial offensive which yesterday netted Britain 1 German fighters and six Nazi coastal ships at a cost of 11 British planes.

The heaviest effects of the Luftwaffe were felt on northeast coast towns, where high-flying Nazis dropped a number of high explosive bombs and caused some casualties. Antiaircraft guns drove the raiders out to sea.

German planes also were reported over East Anglia and in the vicinity of a Midlands town.

The R. A. F.'s big Blenheim bombers and their fighter escorts fought the hardest air battles in weeks over France, the air ministry said last night.

These fierce engagements followed those Wednesday night in which the R. A. F. carried the war back to Italy with an attack on the Naples area. Other night squadrons attacked Aachen, important German industrial city near the Dutch border, and the pilots said factories were set ablaze and the railway junction was torn by 12 explosions.

Another large force bombed Osnabruck; still others raided Bielefeld, Muenster and the Ostend docks on the Belgian coast.

Four night bombers were acknowledged lost.

Cherbourg, Havre Blasted

The daylight squadrons swept Cherbourg and Le Havre, and attacked a chemical plant and railway sidings near Bethune, France. In the ports, a communique said, "six ships totaling over 20,000 tons were hit by bombs and it is considered that each of the vessels is a total loss. Quays, dockside buildings and gun emplacements were also bombed."

The Blenheims hit four German ships with bombs in 25 seconds in the raid on Le Havre, the air ministry news service announced. A 6,000-ton vessel was hit directly on the stern, a heavily-laden 2,000-ton tanker was hit amidships, a 3,000-ton ship was set afire and a 7,000-ton vessel received two direct hits.

But the casualty list, as reported by the air ministry, was telltale of the fury of the Nazi defense: 14 German fighters downed, 9 British fighters and 2 bombers lost. (The Germans said 25 British planes were shot down Thursday, 25 Wednesday and Wednesday night.)

England Has Bombless Day

(Advices reaching Vichy from occupied France told of 19 deaths, more than 60 wounded and numerous buildings destroyed as the result of recent R. A. F. raids on the Lille area of Western France.)

Authorized sources confirmed Italian announcement that the Naples area was raided Wednesday night. (The Italians said 14 persons were killed and 30 wounded at Naples and that a low-level attack, which caused no casualties, was carried out in daylight Wednesday against Syracuse, in Sicily.)

There were no German bombers over England today, but Wednesday night scattered attacks were reported from coastal areas. (The Germans said their Wednesday night bombers sank five British merchantmen out of a convoy off the west coast.)

Blitz at Standstill, Moscow Claims that the Russian air force dealt blows at German motorized and mechanized forces throughout the day in the direction of Ostrov, in the Baltic area, and Novograd Volynski, in the path of the German drive toward Kiev, in the Ukraine.

Enemy units were said to have been destroyed at crossings of the Western Dvina River, which flows northwestward into the Baltic.

The communique reported that the Russian air force had attacked enemy airports and destroyed 28 German planes in air battles and raids on airdromes while losing six itself.

The Russians also claimed to have killed and wounded 350 Finns in an engagement in which Russian naval forces participated.

An earlier communique told of the destruction of the German division near Lepel and of the pushing back of another German division, with heavy casualties, south of Borisov, which lies just south of Lepel.

Everywhere else along the central front, about Polotsk and Bobruisk specifically, Soviet troops were pictured as not giving an inch and as intermittently on the counter-attack.

The implication was that the German thrust at the center had passed its peak for the present and that its power was being fast expended by the enormous losses inflicted for six days.

As to the Ukrainian fronts the Soviet armies were said to be checking German advances both from the vicinity of Novograd-Volynski and from the Bessarabian frontier region to the south.

In the North, German thrusts from the Ostrov vicinity toward Leningrad were said to have been "beaten off" with heavy losses for the invaders.

The Soviet command's day communique made no mention of the far northern fighting areas, presumably including them among those where there were "no major operations" to report.

Red aerial activity was again stressed, particularly as to the central front, where it was said that heavy squadrons of warplanes had helped throw the Germans back.

The government newspaper Izvestia asserted that during the whole course of the invasion "there has not been a single time when German fliers have sought battle."

R.A.F. Will Make a Shambles Of Berlin, Britain Is Promised

By the Associated Press

London, July 10.—The British government replied today to bitter complaints of a shortage of weapons and disuse of American planes by promising to blast Berlin with the increasing flow of U. S. and British bombers until the worst Nazi raids on London seem "like child's play."

This statement came from Lieut. Col. J. T. C. Moore-Brabazon, new minister for aircraft production, on the second day of a debate led by soldier members of the House of Commons.

Moore-Brabazon pledged the fullest use of the American bombers which, he said, soon would all be coming across the Atlantic by air, and declared it would not be many months before Berlin hears the sirens that will signal their attacks.

"Those famous Wednesday and Saturday nights (of London raids) will be child's play, compared to the raids we will be able to make on Berlin," he declared.

Already, he said, the D-24 Liberator bomber "is doing great service across the Atlantic."

Before the minister spoke, however, Artillery Capt. James Henderson Stewart, a Scottish government member, had declared in the Middle East thousands upon thousands of British Tommies and Australasians were left to die or fall into Nazi hands "because those men were denied weapons with which to defend themselves."

Stewart stood squarely back of yesterday's charges by Lieut. Rupert Arnold Brabner, of the fleet air arm, who escaped from Crete in a battered plane and, in his maiden Commons speech yesterday, charged there was a grave shortage of guns and tanks.

During eight months with the army, Stewart said, Middle Eastern cables every day "cried for weapons of any and every kind."

"It was a cry which pierced the hearts of every one of us," he said. "One had a vision of those men, comrades whom he knew, lying there battered, bleeding, parched and hungry."

Moore-Brabazon explained that some United States planes had to be altered before they were used so as to reduce their speed "for operational reasons," and he said the accumulation of some inoperative United States planes in Britain was due to the fact that the British had taken over planes ordered for France, which likewise required changes.

"We disclose everything to the Americans and they to us," he said. "We have now made a start with arrangements whereby no American machine ever arrives in this country without its godfather to look after it and see that it is treated with respect and affection."

However, he said, United States airmen arriving in Britain were amazed to find that Britain had "three models much bigger than anything that ever has been made in America," and he claimed that Britain's fighter planes now could rise to 37,000 feet and soon would go over 40,000.

He admitted, however, that some of Britain's biggest planes "have been grounded for trouble."

Details of these four-motored planes, Manchesters, Halifaxes and Sterlings, were withheld.

U. S. Occupation Is Approved By Vote of Icelandic Althing

By Arni Thorsteinsson
United Press Staff Correspondent.

Reykjavik, Iceland, July 10.—The Iceland Parliament today approved by a vote of 39 to 3 the government's agreement to permit United States armed forces to occupy Iceland in cooperation with the British forces already on the island.

The vote came after Premier Hermann Jonasson told the meeting that Britain had promised to remove all military forces from the island as soon as the United States could land enough men to offer the island sufficient protection.

A resolution adopted by the Parliament said:

"The joint session of the Althing (Parliament) has approved an agreement between the government and the President of the United States for American military protection of Iceland while the present war lasts."

The three members who opposed the resolution are Communists.

(Prime Minister Churchill told the British House of Commons Wednesday that Britain will retain her garrison off 80,000 men in Iceland and work in cooperation with the American occupation force. Previously it had been said in Washington that American forces were to replace the British and U. S. officials would make no further comment when asked about this in view of Churchill's statement to the contrary.)

Jonasson told the Parliament during a detailed discussion of the American occupation that the British government had replied to his note with a promise to acknowledge Iceland's sovereignty and independence and insure that Iceland's rights are respected in peace treaties.

Sailors from American warships and supply ships, aviators and khaki-clad troops thronged the streets of Reykjavik today and brought rushing business to stores, candy shops and ice cream parlors.

Despite a torrential morning rain, the Americans jammed the shops, seeking souvenirs to send home.

Six American officials, including Consul Bertel E. Kuniholm, paid a courtesy call on Jonasson and Foreign Minister Stefan Stefansson.

Jonasson told the Parliament that Britain has promised to increase rather than decrease her trade and support of Iceland's interests. He said, however, that changed conditions would make a revision of the British-Icelandic trade pact necessary.

Haifa Raided

Jerusalem (Friday), July 11 (AP). Unidentified aircraft raided Haifa, a port in British-mandated Palestine, early today for the third consecutive day, but no damage or casualties were reported.

The planes dropped bombs before they were driven away by antiaircraft guns after 15 minutes' fire.

Japanese See Blessing if U. S. Wars on Nazis

By Otto D. Tolischus
Copyright by New York Times

Tokyo, July 10.—The suggestion in American newspapers that the American fleet should be withdrawn from the Pacific into the Atlantic is heartily welcomed in Japan as the first step on a path that opens up possibilities of an American-Japanese rapprochment and removal of the threat of war in the Pacific.

Coming at a time when Germany's attack on Russia has shaken Japanese faith in the value of the triple alliance by cutting off Japan from her European allies, on one hand, and lengthening the German shadow over Asia, on the other, with the result that Japan faces the danger of a squeeze from all sides, the prospect of any alleviation of pressure in the Pacific is felt to be more than a boon.

The Japan Times Advertiser, as the foreign office organ, makes its approval subject to the proviso that the American move be made for purely "domestic reasons without in any way indicating an attack on Germany," but the newspaper Miyako frankly states, "American participation in the war against Germany is of no great importance to Japan."

And the latter statement is merely in line with the pronouncement of Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye, on the eve of the imperial conference's "momentous decision" on Japanese policy, to the effect that Japan must go her own way, irrespective of what other countries do, and must rely on her own power alone—which apparently replaced Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka's assertions prior to the Russo-German war that if the United States enters the European war Japan will fight without quibbling much about her legal obligations.

On the other hand, any hopes in America that Japan is ready to abandon her greater East Asia program for the sake of a rapprochement with the United States must be put down as wishful thinking, doomed to disappointment, as heretofore. On that program the army, navy, foreign office and every other element are agreed, whatever differences there may be regarding timing, speed and methods of its execution.

As announced at the time, the "momentous decision" of the imperial conference will be put into effect gradually, both at home and abroad, and all Japanese spokesmen have made plain since then that Japan is preparing for a "supreme emergency." In which direction the decision of the imperial conference will carry Japan is anybody's guess, and guesses in the Japanese press have ranged from the maritime provinces of Siberia to the South Seas.

Nazis Step Up Pressure On Japanese to Fight

Copyright by New York Times

New York, July 10.—According to advices received here today from the Far East, German pressure on Japan has increased at least tenfold since the outbreak of the Soviet-German hostilities. Hundreds of Germans are stranded in the Far East, whose plans to go home via Siberia were disrupted on the declaration of war.

The German plans call for an immediate attack involving the Siberian maritime provinces by Japanese forces, thereby causing a diversion and forcing Soviet Russia to fight on two fronts. German agents are bolstering their arguments by saying that more than 1,000,000 political prisoners in Siberia are eager to become guerrilla fighters against the Soviets.

the high command again limited its report on the present fighting to a single sentence for the third straight day.

Today it was "operations in the east are progressing relentlessly." Yesterday it was "the fights continue successful on the eastern front." Tuesday it was "operations on the eastern front are proceeding on schedule."

The high command, did report briefly action on the Finnish front, confirming an unofficial announcemet of the capture of Salla, fortified Russia town just within the Soviet frontier.

"A Soviet division which fought there was crushed," said the communique.

Regarding the Eastern Front, however, even annonymous spokesmen could not be provoked to discussion by various reports coming from military circles in Vichy, unoccupied France, alleging German reverses in Russia.

Recall Other Campaigns

This is an excellent time for silence, in the German view, and, it was asserted, this silence may last for several days more.

"Similar stories," said a spokesman of the Vichy reports, "were circulated by enemy propagandists in previous campaigns, notably in Poland, France and Greece. Then, when the high command finally chose to reveal the facts there was an entirely different picture."

This spokesman mentioned peculiarities of tactics in a new kind of warfare which he said makes it especially important for Germany to be silent now.

The great distances along the Russian front are proving less troublesome to the Germans than to the Soviet defenders, German military commentators reported tonight. The vast spaces of warfare stretching from the Arctic Ocean to the Black Sea are just as extensive for the Russians as for the Germans, but, it was stated, German mechanical equipment throws a definite advantage on the side of the Reich.

The result was said to be that the element of distance, which Russians since Napoleon have thought to be in their favor, is turning out to be a disadvantage to them.

One message which filtered through the silence stated that the German air force had destroyed 110 Russian planes yesterday. Another press report said that 123 Russian tanks were put out of action on one sector July 8 while in another region German and Finnish troops on the same day destroyed 40 tanks and three batteries.

German authorized sources were more communicative about the west front. It was claimed that 19 British planes were shot down over the Channel today and 25 yesterday and last night during British raids on the continent. The Germans said they lost two planes in today's actions.

There was no indication of German plane losses on the Russian front.

Axis to Attack Iceland-Bound Ships, U.S. Told

By the United Press

Rome, July 10.—Roberto Farinacci, extreme Fascist editor of the newspaper Regime Fascista of Cremona, warned the United States today that American ships sailing to Iceland will be attacked by Axis planes and warships.

"The die is cast and the consequences of Roosevelt's act won't be long in coming," he said in a front-page editorial commenting on United States occupation of Iceland.

"It is evident that Roosevelt is anxiously searching for a pretext to drag the United States into war despite the lack of desire by the American people to be involved in the conflict," he wrote.

The press continued to stress charges that the American occupation of Iceland was aggression in Europe which made the island a legitimate object for Axis attack.

Virginio Gayda wrote in the Giornale d'Italia that Iceland with its "confusion of American and British soldiers" now was a target for "legitimate German attack" and asserted that Wendell L. Willkie's suggestion for American bases in Northern Ireland and Scotland marked "the beginning of the race by the United States to inherit the British Empire."

The official Stefani News Agency said American occupation of Iceland was an admission that "England presently is being badly defeated in the Battle of the Atlantic and this is an attempt to remedy it."

Russians Using Two-Story Tank

With the German Army on the Eastern Front, July 10 (DNB)—Hitler's legions are using a new anti-tank gun which German officers claim is strong enough to puncture the rugged metal of a 65-ton tank.

But the Russians are using tanks bigger than that. Their newest, I am told, is a 120-ton two-storied monster. One of them was captured a little south of this sector.

The great machine carried a crew of 15 and knocked down telephone poles as if they were reeds.

Welles Brands Siberia 'Base' A Nazi Myth

Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles yesterday accused Germany, in effect, of trying to embroil the United States in a war with Japan.

He branded as German propaganda reports based on a radio broadcast from Tokyo which asserted that the United States was trying to secure military or naval bases in Siberia.

At the same time Welles flatly denied that this country has conducted any negotiations with Portugal for rights to bases in the Azores Islands.

Kamchatka Deal a Myth

The Tokyo broadcast on which Welles pinned a Nazi label said reports had appeared in Tokyo newspapers alleging that the United States, Great Britain, China and Soviet Russia planned an alliance under which a United States military base would be established on the Kamchatka Peninsula, an arm of Siberia that commands sealanes to Japan and Vladivostuk.

Such reports, which also appeared in Budapest newspapers, Welles said, are obviously German propaganda for the purpose of making trouble between the United States and Japan.

Propaganda stories of this type, he continued, are written for what he termed obvious purposes, namely to create dissension.

Base Never Discussed

The subject of an American base along the northern Pacific sealane has never been mentioned in any discussion between the United States and the Soviet Union, Welles declared.

Reports that the United States wanted a base in the Azores had been revived by President Roosevelt's explanation in occupying Iceland that the United States plans to beat Germany to the draw in safeguarding strategic sites in the Atlantic.

Nazis Bomb Suez Canal Area, Hit Destroyer

By the Associated Press

Berlin, July 10.—The high command announced today a sudden burst of activity by the German air force against the British in Africa, the Luftwaffe attacking the Suez Canal defense zone, hitting a destroyer and smashing a British tank thrust.

The German news agency D. N. B. said that more than 100 British planes were destroyed as German bombers blasted at the airport at Ismailia in the canal defense zone.

The high command reported the destroyer received bomb hits off Salum, in the Egyptian-Libyan frontier zone.

Local thrusts by British tanks from besieged Tobruk were repulsed, the high command said, and German planes on Tuesday and Wednesday effectively bombed military objectives at Tobruk and a fort and airport southeast of Matrun, Egyptian railhead for British supplies.

Soviet Envoy Sees President On 'Good News'

Constantine Oumansky, the Soviet Ambassador, declaring he brought "good news" of the Russian-German war, paid his first call in two years on President Roosevelt yesterday.

With Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles sitting in, they discussed "all the problems" presented by the conflict, said the Red envoy.

He declared that he had not submitted any new list of Russian needs to the President, but indicated he had pressed for prompt action on orders the Soviets have been trying to place here for some time.

"The American Government knows and has known for some time the particular orders we want to place," Oumansky told reporters after his 45-minute talk with the President.

Oumansky declined to discuss specific details of his conference, on the ground that such information might be helpful to Germany. It is known, however, that the Russians are anxious to secure machine tools, cotton and petroleum here, as well as many other supplies.

Oumansky declined to say whether his government would pay cash for the goods or receive them under the lend-lease law.

"I expressed to the President the appreciation of my government for the attitude taken by him personally and by the Government of the United States in our fight against Hitler aggression," said Oumansky. The conversation apparently was extremely cordial. Oumansky said he was "deeply impressed by the friendly and far-seeing approach of the President."

The Soviet envoy had visited Mr. Roosevelt only twice before. The first time was on June 6, 1939, when he presented his credentials. The second call was a month later merely to bid the President a formal goodby when Oumansky returned to Moscow for a short visit.

scope, magnifying it 430 times.

Finally, "perfect," came the official verdict.

That was two days ago and yesterday Mrs. Turner took Jeanne down to the institute again. A beauty operator was hustled in. And soon more weather instrument humidity-testing strands were in the making and Jeanne . . .

"Well, she feels a little lost," Mrs. Turner said, "but she's happy to do her bit for Uncle Sam."

And Mrs. Turner: "It was a sort of a blow; it looks terrible," she said with a chuckle, "but Jeanne's right. She's like her brother, Robert, now in the Marine Corps. She is doing her bit."

"Combing it has been a battle every day," she said. "But if it's going for the biggest battle in the world, I'm glad to see it go."

Sweden-to-Denmark Phone Calls Cut Off

Stockholm, July 10 (U.P.).—Telephone connections between Sweden and Denmark were cut late today for the first time since the German occupation of Denmark. Only state calls were permitted.

Three German planes flew over Swedish territory today, two over northern Sweden and one over the province of Skane.

Four Billions More Asked For Army

President Roosevelt yesterday asked Congress to appropriate an additional $4,770,085,558 for the Army, mostly for more tanks, guns, shells and weapons of all sorts.

Raising the total for the Army for the current year to more than $15,000,000,000, the new estimates carried $3,486,034,036 for ordnance and supplies. No details were given, but Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff, recently said that additional funds would soon be asked to provide "critical" arms for a 3,000,000-man Army.

Complete supplies for an Army of 1,850,000 officers and men, are also contemplated under the estimates, as the War Department plans to raise its forces to that total.

Meanwhile, authoritative sources said that an additional $10,000,000,000 to $11,000,000,000 in lend-lease, Navy and Maritime Commission funds will shortly be asked of Congress, raising the total defense program to about $60,000,000,000.

A House deficiency subcommittee will begin hearings on the Army funds this morning. Leaders hope to put it through the House early next week.

The total sought was made up of the following items:

Vichy to Fight On in Syria

Allies closed in on Beirut and continued other drives in Syria and Lebanon.

Twice today the French said they had received no answer to Gen. Henri Dentz's request of Tuesday for a truce pending negotiation of a Syrian settlement. Dentz is commander in chief in Syria and Lebanon as well as high commissioner.

First there was an official statement declaring that far from getting a British reply, Dentz "found himself faced with redoubled British attacks on all fronts and learned with sorrow that pamphlets offensive to his dignity and military honor were being distributed by British agents."

Second there was tonight's military communiques, introduced with these phrases:

"No answer has yet been received at Beirut to the request for cessation of fire drawn up the morning of July 8 by Gen. Dentz. Combats therefore are continuing with their accompaniment of violence and devastation—and, that being the case, the responsibility for it does not rest with France."

These statements were a contradiction of a general understanding among the French here—as well as a statement yesterday by the authoritative Telemondial News Agency—that the Vichy government already was studying British armistice terms.

Britain to Pay For Lease Aid With New Bases

ing the principles that will be followed.

Transfer of the material concessions would come later, perhaps not until after the war, except for any grant of Pacific bases which, if it is decided upon, would occur in the near future.

President Roosevelt is authorized by the lend-lease law to accept repayment on any terms he deems "satisfactory."

Up to President

The law says:

The terms and conditions upon which any such foreign government receives any aid authorized under subsection (a) (lend-lease aid) shall be those which the President deems satisfactory, and the benefit to the United States may be payment or repayment in kind or property, or any other direct or indirect benefit which the President deems satisfactory."

Despite the fact that the flow of goods has been all one way so far—to England—with nothing in return, the President's advisers say he is anxious to make public soon an agreement with the British that will provide for a quid pro quo.

The President, it was said, realizes that the destroyer-bases deal, in which he appeared in the role of a shrewd Yankee trader, was well accepted by the country. He plans to repeat this type of transaction in the near future, to demonstrate to the American people that they are getting something tangible in return for help to England, quite apart from the prospects of an eventual victory over Hitlerism.

John Maynard Keynes, British economist who is here on a special mission for the chancellor of the exchequer, has figured in the conversations with the State Department.

He plans to return soon to England, leading officials to believe that some announcement can be expected shortly on the repayment agreement.

Bills Would Lift Limits on Army

date, if the unlimited emergency continues beyond then.

Major Row Expected

Senator Reynolds said he had introduced the legislation "at the request of the members of the military committee" following their conference with Gen. Marshall. Marshall last week urged the repeal of the provisions restricting service of selectees and Guardsmen to one year and the Western Hemisphere.

Consideration of the bill is expected to provide another major struggle over foreign policy.

Maj. Gen. Robert C. Richardson, jr., director of the Army Public Relations Bureau, declared yesterday that Gen. Marshall's request last week "did not ask any A. E. F. at all."

"He was merely pointing out that we have men in three legal categories in most all units—selectees, Guardsmen and Regulars," Richardson said.

"Administrative Freedom"

"Suppose we get an order to send a unit somewhere, say, to Iceland, we would have to transfer out of that unit men who cannot be sent outside the Western Hemisphere or whose service is nearly up, and bring in other men from other units. This would deplete the cohesive training of them all.

"We're simply requestly administrative freedom. The decision as to where to send them is up to the President and Congress."

During the day the Senate passed a bill permitting all future volunteers in the Navy to be held in service for the duration of the unlimited national emergency.

Japanese Ships Haul Foodstuffs From Australia

Copyright by New York Times

Sydney, Australia, July 10.—The concentration of Japanese merchantment in the Pacific is interesting shipping circles here, which presume the objective is to build up supplies as rapidly as possible. Japanese ships regularly trading with Australia have been carrying heavy outward cargoes, including sheep and wheat. The Japanese have been seeking more wheat and have now arranged for regular shipments until the end of the year.

No additional cargo carriers have been assigned to Australia.

The Japanese community, which before the war numbered 2,000, has been reduced to the minimum necessary for essential business. The womenfolk began going home before the war, and probably fewer than 20 of the original 150 remain.

Norris, About to Become 80, Hopes U.S. Won't Have to Shoot

Nebraska Liberal Declares His Faith In Defeat of Hitler

By the United Press

Senator George W. Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, on the eve of his eightieth birthday, last night said he hoped that this nation could avoid a "shooting war" and had "deep faith that Hitler and the forces of darkness can be defeated."

The veteran liberal, who has spent 28 years of his life in the Senate, said in an interview that conditions confronting the nation are different than those which led to war in 1917. At that time, Norris incurred the wrath of the Wilson Administration by joining six other "williful" Senators in voting against a declaration of war.

"I believe I was right in opposing that war," Norris said. "At that time we did not have a world of dictators—and especially one arch dictator—who wished to rule the earth."

A Hitler victory would mean the "end of the world we cherish and our forefathers won for us," he declared. "Death would be preferable."

Norris, who was hung in effigy for his anti-war vote in 1917, warned against charges that isolationist and non-interventionist leaders are "pro-Hitler" or "Fascist stooges."

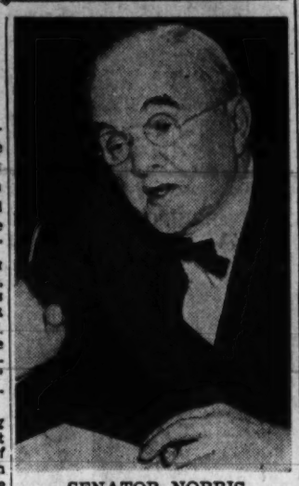
"I have no right to question the sincerity of any man," he said, "and I know the great majority of the isolationist leaders are honest. If this nation enters the war, I am confident they will fall behind the effort to bring the country to victory."

The war between Germany and Russia—"both of whom wish to rule the world"—holds out "some hope for the future of democracy and civilization," he said.

"I hope they fight each other to a standstill so that neither is able to fight afterwards."

Senate Democratic Leader Alben W. Barkley said yesterday on the floor of the Senate that there is "no man on either side of the chamber" who carries more respect from his colleagues than Senator Norris.

Part of his birthday plans include a "quiet visit with another man from Nebraska who is also celebrating his birthday—but he is 20 years older than I am. He will be 100 years old and I will be like a child going to see his father."



SENATOR NORRIS

The President's Day

By International News Service

OUT OF THE NIGHT: Out of a two-year diplomatic and social night came the dapper, keen-eyed U. S. S. R. Ambassador Constantin A. Oumansky yesterday for the highest official stamp of approval: A deskside conference with the President. Accompanied by Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles, the returned exile rolled up to the Executive offices in the Soviet Embassy Zic—a Russian version of a Packard limousine—emblazoned with a winged red radiator cap, an enameled red sickle and star shield, and a double line of red around the black tonneau.

THANKS, ANYHOW: Some of the drama of Soviet Ambassador Oumansky's reception unfortunately rubbed off in the 20 minute wait in the anteroom. Yugoslavian Minister Constantin Fotitch was thanking the President and the United States for their sympathetic interest and aid in his country's doomed battle against the Nazis and it took a little time.

MORE THANKS: Oumansky and Welles, exiting an hour and a half later, shook hands outside the President's door and Welles ducked across the street to the State Department for a very tardy press conference. Oumansky smilingly revealed as much of his conversation with the President as he deemed wise, smiled off embarrassing questions, revealed that he, too, had thanked the President for "his attitude and that of the United States in the present situation of our fight against Hitler." The President, Oumansky said, impressed him deeply with his "friendly and far-sighted approach." He also brought Mr. Roosevelt "good news" of the Russian war.

FREE LUNCH: Having been flagged down by Presidential secretaries, Attorney General Bob Jackson waited elsewhere, showed up at 2 p. m. for his 1 o'clock lunch with the President. Asked what his appointment with the chief was about, Jackson quipped that he was just lured to the White House by a free lunch."

THIRD TERM?: For the first time in many months Edward J. Flynn, chairman of the Democratic Party, showed up at the White House for a long talk with the boss—presumably to discuss pro and con a third term for Mayor LaGuardia in New York.

New Nazi Plane Shows Improvement

London, July 10 (AP).—A new type of German fighter plane, the Messerschmitt 109F2, was reported tonight to be in use against the British sweeps over northern France. British sources identified the plane as a considerable improvement over the Messerschmitt 109F. It has two machine-guns and a cannon.

Army Sets Up Autonomous Air Command

President Roosevelt went far down the Army list yesterday in selecting new commanders for the Nation's expanding field forces. Simultaneously, the War Department announced the establishment of an autonomous air staff.

Many of the 25 new brigadier generals are in their forties, an almost unheard of youthfulness for top commanders in pre-emergency days, while several of the 12 new major generals are in their early fifties.

The new air staff, together with other headquarters units set up at the same time, will assist Maj. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, chief of the newly formed Army Air Forces, in the administration and serving of that command.

Maj. Gen. Robert C. Richardson, jr., director of the War Department Bureau of Public Relations, said that the action was in line with the autonomy recently granted to the Army Air Corps. The Air Staff, he said, will coordinate and supervise the air force just as the General Staff operates for the ground forces.

Richardson said that while the General Staff will still consider such matters as coordination of ground and air, and that Gen. George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff, has final say on conclusions, "there is no intention that the General Staff will pass on or veto the Air Staff's plans."

Chief of the new Air Staff is Brig. Gen. Carl Spaatz, who will coordinate all activities of the Headquarters Army Air Forces, and act as executive, assistant and advisor to Gen. Arnold.

Dargue to Take Over

Brig. Gen. Herbert A. Dargue, who was on the list of those nominated for temporary appointment as major general sent to the Senate earlier in the day, will take over the newly created post of air inspector. He is now assistant chief of Air Corps.

Three Reserve and two National Guard colonels were on the list of new brigadier generals. The reservists were Col. Julius O. Adler, who was general manager of the New York Times before being called to active service as commander of the 113th Infantry at Fort Dix, N. J.; Col. Leonard P. Ayres, Cleveland banker, now chief War Department statistician, and Col. Frank E. Lowe, War Department executive for Reserve and R. O. T. C. affairs.

Col. Roy W. Easley, 40, one of the two guardsmen promoted, will be the Army's youngest general. A World War veteran, he is serving at Camp Shelby, Miss. The other is Col. Eugene O. Eversberg, serving at Camp Bowie, Tex.

Seven of the new temporary generalships went to the expanding armored force. Brig. Gen. Alvan C. Gillem, jr., and Brig. Gen. Henry W. Baird, commanding the new Third and Fourth Armored Divisions were promoted to major general, while Cols. Walton H. Walker, Alexander D. Surles, Lindsay McD. Silvester, Willis D. Crittenberger and Stephen G. Henry, of the new armored units, were made brigadiers. Surles is a former War Department press chief.

Other new major generals are:

Brig. Gen. John Millikin, commander of Second Cavalry Division.

Brig. Gen. John N. Greely, a native of Washington and son of the late Arctic explorer, Maj. Gen. Adolphus Greely, who commands the Second Division.

Brig. Gen. Robert L. Eichelberger, superintendent of the U. S. Military Academy.

Brig. Gen. Gerald C. Brant, commanding the Gulf Coast Air Training Center; Brig. Gen. Rush B. Lincoln, commander of the Mississippi Valley Technical Command, Rantoul, Ill.; Brig. Gen. Walter R. Weaver, commander, Southeast Air Training Center; Brig. Gen. Lewis H. Brereton, commander, Seventeenth Bombardment Wing, Savannah, and Brig. Gen. Millard F. Harmon, commander of the Interceptor Command of the Fourth Air Force.

The colonels promoted to brigadier general include:

Paul W. Baade, commanding Sixteenth Infantry, Fort Jay, N. Y.

Harold H. Bull, Infantry, Culver Military Academy, Culver, Ind.

Charles H. Gerhardt, Cavalry, general staff, general headquarters, Army War College.

Lloyd E. Jones, Field Artillery, chief of staff of the First Army Corps, Columbia, S. C.

Henry L. C. Jones, Field Artillery, First Division, Fort Devens, Mass.

Jonathan W. Anderson, Field Artillery, War Department general staff.

Edward A. Stockton, commanding the harbor defenses of San Francisco.

James H. Cunningham, commanding harbor defenses of Puget Sound, Wash.

Thomas H. Jones, commanding the harbor defenses of Long Island.

Edwin B. Lyon, commanding the West Coast Air Training Center.

Henry J. F. Miller, commanding Air Corps Maintenance Command, Patterson Field, Ohio.

Ralph P. Cousins, headquarters, Army Air Forces.

Julian S. Hatcher, commandant, Ordnance School, Aberdeen Proving Ground.

Roscoe C. Crawford, commandant, Engineer School, Fort Belvoir, Va.

House Group Hints Changes In Tax Bill

Possible further adjustments in the $3,503,400,000 tax bill were hinted yesterday as the House Ways and Means Committee decided to meet again Monday to take another look at the measure.

Among minor changes slated to be proposed was one to cut slightly the new excises on wines. Another would repeal the proposed tax on candy and substitute a tax on measuring instruments recommended by Price Administrator Leon Henderson.

Members said the tax on candy yields only $18,000,000 whereas the proposed excise on measuring instruments would produce about $25,000,000. A compromise wine schedule may be offered to scale some $9,000,000 from the new revenue asked from that quarter.

An effort to rescind the committee's proposed joint return income tax requirement for husband and wives appeared probable but one influential member expressed conviction that the committee would stand by its action. Although some members have received protests from persons whose taxes would be upped by the joint filing requirement, the provision produces $300,000,000 in new revenue and there are few other places the committee could go for that amount. Only alternative to the joint return requirement, one committeeman said, would be to impose new excises on gasoline, tobacco and beer or adopt the Treasury's income surtax schedules starting surtaxes at 11 per cent.

Members interpreted Secretary Morgenthau's statement that reexamination of tax schedules may be necessary in the light of new demands for appropriations as meaning another big tax bill will be necessary next year.

Ickes Warns D. C. To Conserve Gas Willingly—or Else

Secretary Ickes yesterday served Washingtonians a mild warning that unless they volunteer to conserve gasoline restrictions will certainly be imposed.

In a letter to Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, Ickes said he believes that voluntary cooperation by motorists would be vastly preferable to ration cards. Ickes declared:

"Unless we have full participation by the public in these efforts, it is practically certain that restrictions on the use of gasoline will have to be imposed. No matter how excellent a program is formulated, it becomes meaningless if not put into aggressive, effective action."

Ickes said the program adopted by the District of Columbia Petroleum Conservation Committee is a good one. He urged the Commissioners to continue a vigorous prosecution of the program.

Moon Interferes With Blackout Plans in Manila

Manila, July 10 (AP).—A bright tropical moon tonight upset plans for a complete blackout of this city and suburbs, the first practice of this kind the area has experienced.

United States Army planes roared over the city during the half hour's practice.

Reports indicated the blackout order had been obeyed generally but the moonlight reflected brightly from many white buildings, despite a slight haze. Army air observers reported it enabled them to pick out objectives in the Manila Bay area.

Numerous United States Army posts are situated in the blackout area.

House Removes Strike Curbs, Passes Lower Draft Age Bill

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

The National Defense Mediation Board, ending a debate carried on since the board was created last spring, yesterday declined to formulate a set of policy declarations covering its future recommendations on strikes and labor disputes, and determined, instead, to handle each case individually, on its own merits.

The decision, made in the form of a resolution adopted unanimously in a full board meeting, is in sharp contrast to the action of the World War Labor Board, which judged disputes on the basis of a predetermined policy pattern covering the principal issues which arose in labor controversies at that time.

Many Government and labor quarters had urged that the Mediation Board follow a similar procedure lest different panels make public recommendations haphazard and at variance with each other. In adopting an opposite course, however, the board hopes to prevent divergent decisions, a board official explained, by adopting a second resolution permitting any panel member to carry a case to the full board.

The reference of a case to the full board membership either for "advice or action," will probably take place, it was indicated, when an issue arises which is either new, unusual or likely to have a precedent-setting effect.

Executive Secretary Ralph T. Seward, who announced the resolutions at a press conference, explained that only one dispute, that involving the strike of metal-trades workers against the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Co. in San Francisco, had been formally referred to the full board prior to a panel decision.

The panel's proposed recommendation had the indirect effect of instructing the Bethlehem Co. to grant a closed shop, and was the first such recommendation of any board panel. It was ratified by the full board, but not unanimously, it was learned.

Seward explained that in deciding against drafting a set of policies governing what the board would and would not recommend in a labor dispute, the board also determined that it would not necessarily regard any prior decision as a precedent.

World War Decisions

He quoted Board Chairman William H. Davis as saying that "the only reason I want to know what we've done is so that we won't do it again."

The World War Labor Board, acting on the opposite principle, drafted a policy declaration on which its decisions were guided. Of most important current significance was a determination that in cases where both union and nonunion men worked in the same shop continuance of this condition should not be considered a labor grievance. The ruling had the effect of preventing recommendations for new closed shops.

Other policies adopted by the World War body upheld the right of collective bargaining, an eight-hour day, and a living wage. The board resolved against discharges of union men for union activity, and committed itself to consider regional custom in recommending wages and working conditions.

Seward discounted possibilities that different panels, consisting of different members, would hand down variant decisions on identical issues. He explained that in the past this has not happened, and that in cases containing a crucial issue, possible of being decided differently by various board members, the matter could be brought to the full board for decision.

No Appeal, He Says

He emphasized, however, that only members of the panel considering a specific case could refer it to the full board and that in all but the most unusual cases, the panel decision would be final. No case is subject to "appeal" to the board by either party to the dispute, he said.

Seward also announced that the board yesterday resolved to fill the post of vice chairman, left vacant by the elevation of Davis to the chairmanship, by rotating the public representatives on the panel for two months tours of duty as vice chairman.

It was also announced yesterday that a settlement had been reached by direct negotiation in panel conferences of the issues in the dispute of the Cheney Bros. Co., Manchester, Conn., and that an arbitration award had been made to end the dispute of 2,800 Pittsburgh truck drivers, who last month struck against 189 trucking concerns.

To Be Ratified by Union

Terms of the Cheney Bros. Co. settlement, which are subject to ratification by the C. I. O. Textile Workers Union local at a meeting called for next Monday, were not made public. Union employes of the company, which holds Army orders for parachute silk, had demanded a wage increase of 10 cents an hour and a closed shop.

The award in the Pittsburgh truckers case, which both sides previously agreed to accept, gave the workers a wage increase of 7½ cents an hour, or 1½ cents above that offered by the companies. The decision resolved in favor of the companies, however, in the matter of vacations. The case, involving the A. F. L. teamsters' union, was the first in which a board panel was asked to act in the role of arbiters.

Today, a board panel will meet to determine future action in the case of the Sealed Power Corporation, Muskegon, Mich., where the A. F. of L. Auto Workers Union rejected board proposals and went out on strike earlier this week. The company, which employes 1,163 workers, manufactures piston rings for motor vehicles and planes.

Another panel will meet today with labor and management representatives in a dispute at the Western Cartridge Co., Alton, Ill., after repeated breakdowns of direct negotiations. The A. F. L. Chemical Workers Union, certified by the National Labor Relations Board as bargaining agent for the plant's smokeless powder division, has claimed that the company refuses to bargain with it. Defense officials have discussed Government occupation of the plant unless a settlement is reached. The union has threatened a strike but has postponed it at the board's request.

Gen. Lear Ordered To Explain March

were "kidded" by the passing soldiers and that he was again on the links when he made a statement in the matter Wednesday.

Declaring that he had just been advised that the Second Army commander "is still on the golf links," the Congressman added:

"He is not the kind of general we need, standing on the bring of war. He apparently is engaged all the time in playing golf."

Representative Faddis (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, a colonel in the Army Reserve, opposed Norrell's suggestion of a House investigation. He demanded that Congress keep its hands out of the affair, as an efficient Army could not be built if Congress "undertakes to regulate what officers do to maintain discipline."

Reply to Be Made Public

Maj. Gen. Robert C. Richardson, jr., director of the War Department Bureau of Public Relations, disclosed that the Department had called upon Gen. Lear for a "statement of fact of his side of the case." He said the reply would be made public.

Representative Kilday (Democrat), of Texas, who wired Gen. Lear for an explanation of the episode Wednesday, termed the reply "stereotyped" and said that the "general will find that Congress will discharge its constitutional duty and protect the members of the Army from abuse at the hands of any high-tempered officers."

Mothers Voice Ire

Little Rock, Ark., July 10 (INS).—Indignant mothers of soldiers in training at Camp Robinson tonight vigorously criticized Lieut. Gen. Ben Lear, Second Army commander, termed him "downright tyrannical," and favored a Congressional investigation of the 15-mile "disciplinary hike" he imposed on 350 soldiers for "yoo-hooing" at a group of Memphis girls.

In a prepared statement issued after a long closed meeting, members of the United States Army Mothers' Club, Post No. 1, of Arkansas, declared that "we regard Gen. Lear's action as capricious and ostentatious of his authority."

The "yoo-hoo" battalion, the mothers said, were "exhibiting the natural exuberance of healthy young American men," when they whistled at the shorts-clad girls—who happened to be golfing near Gen. Lear.

Doubt Girls Were Offended

Said the statement, issued by Mrs. Tom Alvord, post commander:

"The American system requires that the law or regulation allegedly violated should be specified. The accused should have an opportunity to defend themselves against the allegations. This is the system which these boys are being conditioned to defend with their lives.

"Being of the feminine sex, we hazard the guess that the attention shown the girls was not half so offensive as indifference to their charms would have been."

The statement added:

"If Gen. Lear's action is a fair sample of what the American soldier may expect at the hands of superior military authorities in peace times, then what shall we tell our boys to fear under any other system?"

Joint Income Tax Plan Held Periling Homes

By Inez Robb
International News Service Staff Writer

New York, July 10.—The flood of public consternation over the proposed mandatory joint income tax return for husbands and wives, coupled with the realization that such a revenue measure places double harness in double jeopardy, is rapidly rising in every section of the Nation.

Innumerable inquiries from both men and women concerning the mandatory measure now being considered by the House Ways and Means Committee are pouring into the Women Investors in America, Cathrine Curtis, national director, said today.

The measure would so skyrocket taxes on joint incomes of husbands and wives, Miss Curtis believes, as to reduce the standard of living in many cases, handicap savings programs for old age security, reduce investments for a rainy day and even force many American couples to curtail educational programs planned for their children.

Men in even greater numbers than women have deluged Miss Curtis' organization with pleas for decisive action against it.

"Men are especially frantic over such a proposal to tax incomes jointly, as they realize that in many instances their respective wives' security is at stake," Miss Curtiss said.

"This is a tax proposal that hits the small income group far harder than those in the upper brackets. The vast majority of American women work and earn incomes because of economic necessity, not because of caprice or whim.

"Think of the thousands upon thousands of couples in American cities, where living is so costly, whose marriages were made possible because the wife's earned income helps maintain the home."

"As far as money goes, the measure would penalize a husband and wife equally, but legally, it places a woman in far more jeopardy. It reduces her once more to the status of her husband's chattel, a position from which she extricated herself only after centuries of effort.

"Really, the major issue involved in such a tax proposal is that it deprives a wife of her individual and personal rights, destroys her identity as a person and penalizes the fruit of her work.

"If you can merge a woman's earnings with those of her husband for tax purposes this year, what is to prevent a statute merging their capital or basic properties in another year?"

When the Ways and Means Committee started cogitating on the tax measure, there were proposals for stiff new taxes on beer and tobacco.

"But the beer and tobacco interests descended upon Washington en masse, and such provisions have been dropped. Apparently in the Congressional scheme of things, women don't count for as much as beer and tobacco. Anyway, the unfair provisions of the joint income tax proposal have not been dropped by any means!" Miss Curtis said.

Strike Called At Arms Dump

San Diego, Calif., July 10 (AP).—Sixty A. F. of L. building and construction trades union workers struck today at the $2,500,000 naval ammunition dump being built 50 miles north of San Diego at Fallbrook, K. G. Bitter, building trades council secretary, reported.

Bitter said the strike was called because the contractor violated a verbal agreement with the unions involving working conditions. He did not specify them. Wages and hours were not involved, he added.

Wheat Surplus Problem Near, Welles Warns

Sumner Welles, Acting Secretary of State, warned last night that within another year wheat surpluses totaling 1,500,000,000 bushels will hang over the international markets unless the world's wheat-growing nations take constructive measures to solve problems resulting from the war.

Welles spoke at the opening of the International Wheat Conference, at which the United States, Canada, Australia, Argentina and the United Kingdom are represented.

In calling the conference, Welles said, the United States had in mind that all wheat-producing nations "are faced with problems of a somewhat similar character, although of varying degrees of intensity.

"As producers and as holders of these surpluses, we have a common interest in the possibilities which may exist of providing for their orderly liquidation.

"We have a common interest in the conditions which will prevail in the international wheat markets when the war is over. We have a common interest in the restoration of the prosperity of the purchasers of our wheat and in the need for relief in devastated areas immediately after the war."

Welles cited the meeting as "a practical example of the constantly increasing collaboration which is taking place between the American republics and the countries of the British Commonwealth."

Mere discussion will not suffice, he said.

room on the second floor of the apartment house, Le Blanc testified, then inquired in the neighborhood and visited a delicatessen she sometimes patronized at Florida and Connecticut Avenues.

Roommate Calls Police

When he returned at 4:25 p. m. Le Blanc related, Miss Tankersley told him she had telephoned police a few minutes before and had been told by Grayson that the police did not consider a person to be missing until the person had been gone six hours.

Fifteen minutes later, Le Blanc said, he called and was told the same thing by Grayson. He quoted Grayson as asking him who would be responsible if the police broadcast the young woman as missing and it later developed that she was not.

"What right have you to be responsible?" Le Blanc quoted a voice he identified as Grayson's.

"I said I am her fiance," he said he replied.

"It was Grayson. I am positive."

"Are you absolutely sure?" asked Schulte.

"I am."

Name Written Out

Le Blanc then explained that Miss Tankersley had written out Grayson's name and that she spelled it out for him before he telephoned. He then told of reporting the disappearance to the policeman on the beat and the officer's response.

He exhibited a file card on which a woman he identified as Beulah Holden, of the Veterans' Administration, had written her recollection that Le Blanc called her at 6:30 p. m., June 15, and told her that he had called the police and had been told that "they could not come into the case for six hours."

"When I phoned at 10 or 10:15 p. m. you said the police had broadcast," Le Blanc read from the card, which was signed "Bott."

"There were two separate calls made?" queried Schulte.

Called Several Times

"And quite a few more after that," replied Le Blanc who later told the subcommittee he had called the police "six or seven times" during the evening.

"The voice was the same," Le Blanc said. "I called the policeman by name."

Between 7 and 9 p. m., Le Blanc testified, he called Grayson and informed him that he and friends had been denied admittance to the apartment basement by the janitor, "and this was the first time he showed any interest." A scout car was sent to the apartment and the janitor admitted the police, but refused to let them inspect his living quarters. Le Blanc said he reported this circumstance back to Grayson and was told:

"We have laws to observe."

It was "at least six hours" before the police acted, Le Blanc said, adding that his roommate was in the apartment and could verify the time at which the calls were made.

Le Blanc repeated that Miss Tankersley, who telephoned before he did, told him that "Grayson was the man to talk with when I called police."

Reporters Testified

Four Washington police reporters spent an hour and a half in executive session with the subcommittee describing what they believe to be the department's weaknesses. No record was made of the conference and members of the subcommittee were sworn to secrecy. Schulte described the information thus obtained as "very valuable."

Last night Schulte declared he hopes to finish the hearings and be ready to write a report in about ten days. On the basis of testimony thus far, he commented:

"It looks bad. We have men in the Washington Police Department capable of matching wits with anybody, men as good as any in the country.

"Then we have some who don't seem to know their way around Washington. They've come up through the civil service.

"Jealousies and factions within the department must be eliminated and promotions must be made on the basis of services rendered. Good men in the detective bureau should receive captain's pay, regardless of rank."

Lieut. Joseph Shimon, former head of the pickup squad, and Capt. George Little, head of the fugitive squad, also have been asked to be ready to testify today.

Hebert Blasts Detective Bureau

Representative Hebert (Democrat), of Louisiana, subchairman of the House committee investigating the Police Department, declared yesterday that the detective bureau is "rife with petty jealousies and ax-grinding."

"As far as I am concerned," he told a meeting of the Cosmopolitan Club at the Carlton Hotel, "the Congressional investigation can end right now. I have learned everything I want to know."

Describing the detective bureau as the department's "weakest link," he asserted:

"If my life is to be placed in charge of men like Lieut. Darnall (chief of the detective bureau's homicide squad) I want to take out more life insurance."

Hebert said Washington needed more patrolmen on certain beats and better-trained men in the detective bureau. He blamed the lack of centralized authority for the condition and advocated appointment of a city manager to direct the District's governmental affairs.

James E. Colliflower, former president of the Board of Trade, and other cosmopolites took exception to his remarks about the city as a whole, declaring that Congress was to blame for the situation.

C. J. Mack presided and Dr. Frank E. Gantz was sworn in as a new member.

Strike Curbs Lifted From Draft Bill

fense workers as "sabotage," were concertedly attacked by House labor forces led by Representative Healey (Democrat), of Massachusetts.

Healey, supported by floor leaders, charged the labor sections would force compulsory arbitration and endanger labor's rights.

Bitterly, Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, addressed the House as the last vestige of defense labor restrictions were swept away.

He charged that C. I. O. leaders sent "goon squads" divided into groups of three to call on and "intimidate" members individually.

Disgraceful, Says Smith

"No such disgraceful epicode has happened in the American Congress since the investigation took place over the death sentence in the utility bill," shouted Smith.

Replying to the Smith charge, Representative McKeough (Democrat), of Illinois, called it a "reflection on the patriotism and integrity of the membership of the entire House."

Leaving the floor in defeat, Chairman May, whose Military Committee wrote the labor curbs into the Selective Service bill, told reporters these provisions were beaten "because the White House, the floor leaders and the C. I. O. were set against them."

First to be defeated was a section permitting the President to take over a defense plant whose management refused to use Government mediation facilities to settle a dispute. This was rejected, 170 to 91, on a standing count and later 218 to 151 on roll call.

Meeting the same fate was a more sweeping section, empowering the President to order resumption of operation of a struck plant, affording protection to workers returning to their defense jobs, and punishing with heavy penalties any efforts to prevent "by force or violence or by threats thereof" workers from voluntarily entering or leaving defense jobs. This went down, 159 to 97, on a standing count, and 220 to 150, on a roll call.

Representative Robertson (Democrat), of Virginia, made a futile effort to write into the bill the Byrd amendment, already approved by the Senate, condemning defense strikes or lockouts as "contrary to sound public policy." It was rejected, 86 to 119.

Escaping major change were the Selective Service Act amendments, not in serious controversy. As passed by the House, these make mandatory deferment of men from induction into service who were 28 on July 1 of this year or in subsequent years. The Senate bills make deferment of men between 28 and 35 discretionary with the President.

Minor amendments by the House included an antisecrecy provision requiring posting and publication by each local draft board of names of men selected and deferred, together with the reason for their classification. Also approved was an amendment lowering from three years to two years and nine months the length of Regular Army service which would exempt a man from liability for Selective Service training.

Half a dozen other amendments were defeated. One of the rejected changes would have repealed the exemption given members of Congress. Others would have lowered the draft age to 25, denied deferment to single men without dependents between 28 and 35, and required discharge of men 29 years or older who already have been inducted.

Republicans teamed strongly with Democrats to defeat the labor restrictions.

After Smith took the floor to charge C. I. O. "intimidation" of House members, Representative Arends (Republican), of Illinois, charged Harry Bridges "was the moving genius" in defeating the legislation.

Auhagen Jury Told to Give Sealed Verdict

The question of whether Dr. Frederich Ernest Auhagen was a Nazi propagandist in this country was submitted to five women and seven men jurors in the District Court yesterday.

When they had debated more than three hours without agreement, the jurors were told to seal their verdict, if they reach one, for reading in court at 10 a. m. today.

Assistant District Attorneys George A. McNulty and Albert E. Arent asked the jury to convict Auhagen on three counts of failing to register with the State Department as a German propagandist. Each count carried a maximum penalty of $1,000 fine and two years in prison.

Defense counsel Alfred S. Holmes, of New York, contended that Auhagen was a legitimate writer and lecturer.

Federal Judge Charles G. Briggle, who is on loan duty here, gave the case to the jury at 3 p. m. yesterday after eight days of evidence and argument. An hour later the jurors filed into court and Foreman Paul H. Primm, 50, insurance man, of 3383 Stuyvesant Place Northwest, asked for additional instructions about the law.

The jurors returned again at 5:15 p. m. to ask whether they might convict on some counts and find Auhagen not guilty on others. Judge Briggle replied that each count was a separate charge and that each would require a separate verdict. Answering another question, the judge said the verdict on each count must be unanimous.

Congress Asks U. S. to Control Navigable Air

Reporting that confusion and congestion attend air traffic, a special House committee recommended yesterday that Congress assert Federal jurisdiction over the navigable air above the United States and create an authority to control all traffic moving through it and "missiles projecting into it."

Point was given to the reference to missiles by a committee observation that "There is multiple evidence of the lack of consideration for commercial aviation in the establishment by the Army and Navy of antiaircraft and gun emplacements which fire projectiles up, into and through designated airways used by commercial airlines."

In addition, the committee proposed legislation:

Setting up minimum requirements for lighting of airports and other landing areas, to be enforced by the Civil Aeronautics administrator.

Empowering the administrator to detail 25 employes of the CAA annually to training for professional duties at Government expense.

To provide for the training of control tower operators.

The committee, headed by Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, was created last spring to investigate commercial airplane accidents. The other members are Representatives Kleberg (Democrat), of Texas; Pearson (Democrat), of Tennessee; Derksen (Republican), of Illinois, and Hinshaw (Republican), of California.

Fifth Column To Seize City In Mock Raid

By the United Press

Anderson, S. C., July 10.—A band of 400 sturdy youths, "Fifth Columnists" simulating the infiltration of Nazi "tourists" ahead of German panzer units, tonight began sifting into this Southern city and prepared to execute a coup in which the local government, newspaper, radio station, power plants, communication and transportation facilities will be seized.

These "Fifth Columnists" were even freer from suspicion than the skiiers, hikers and other Nazi "vacationers" who thronged the Scandinavian countries immediately before German troops rolled through that section.

Just Joe College

Those getting ready to grab control over the 20,000 persons of Anderson were happy-go-lucky young men from 14 Southern colleges. They wore white shoes, slacks, linens, sports coats and polo shirts—the same as their classmates home for the summer. Of course, they were strangers here, but that didn't arouse any suspicions among the residents, because youths with a similar appearance often come from other cities and towns to court Anderson's pretty girls

The college boys were Reserve Officers Training Corps cadets from the encampment at Clemson, S. C., and were staging the first "Fifth Columnist" maneuver ever executed in this Nation. The tactical problem was conceived and being directed by Col. William L. Roberts, acting commander of the Fourth Corps Area R. O. T. C. Anderson officials and civic leaders were cooperating, and, to show that it was all in fun, it was planned to entertain the "Fifth Columnists" with a dance after completion of the maneuver.

The setup to the mock conflict between Clemson and Anderson was:

Clemson Monday served an ultimatum demanding that Anderson refrain from further border activities on Six-and-Thirty Creek and withdraw troops concentrated near Sandy Springs. Anderson did not answer the ultimatum.

Regular Troops to Come

Those entering the city tonight, making themselves as inconspicuous as possible, drifted to assigned posts—from where they tomorrow night will seize key public offices and establishments in preparation for entry of 800 motorized, armed and uniformed cadets. The invasion of the "tourists" reaches a peak in the predawn hours tomorrow.

Members of this mufti-clad advance guard of invaders planned, at the zero hour toorrow (7:30 p. m., E. S. T.), to put on special caps and belts—in the same manner that the Nazi "tourists" hastily added arm bands and military caps to their dress. The task of the "Fifth Columnists" then will be to effect a coup—simultaneously seizing key government offices, the newspaper, radio station, water works, power plant, communication and transportation services.

As the "Fifth Columnists" complete seizure of the key points controlling Anderson, the regular troops will roll into the city and establish a military dictatorship.

Ottamus' Goat No Longer Makes Goat of Police

By the Associated Press

Atlanta, July 10.—Ottamus and Bob were "visitors" at police headquarters again today.

Ottamus is a Negro—aged, woolyheaded, legless. Bob is Ottamus' goat that pulls the Negro around in a wooden cart.

For various reasons, police have held them in jail about seven times. Once they obstructed traffic. Once Ottamus was arrested for driving a goat while drunk and officers said Bob was drunk, too.

Ottamus' latest arrest was for vagrancy. Police had to take the goat to jail and there Bob's behavior was bad. Among other things, he butted and damaged police broadcasting equipment and was generally boisterous.

Police were helpless, it seemed. They couldn't just turn the goat loose, it would be illegal to kill him and there's no goat pound. The city zoo wouldn't have him.

In desperation, officers appealed to park authorities. For the time being, Bob is quartered in a city park stable. Otamus remained in jail and there the affair stands.

Argentina to Expand Embassy in D. C.

Buenos Aires, July 10 (AP).—The Argentine foreign office announced tonight it would expand its embassy in Washington to keep pace with increasing relations with the United States, adding ministers at large and ministerial counselors in connection with a general reorganization of embassies.

U. S. Building North Ireland Base, Taft Says

blitz started.—Editor's note.]

Replying to Connally, Danaher said:

"We are not being told what the facts are, and yet everyone of us who chooses to can know that American workmen by the hundreds have been constructing a naval base in Northern Ireland for weeks, just as they were preliminary to the Iceland situation weeks and weeks in negotiation that ultimately brought it about."

U. S. Firm Was Hired

Taft and Danaher did not say whether they referred to the recent announcement that Chapman & Scott, New York contracting firm, had been engaged by the British to do some construction work in the British Isles. The British had called this purely a contract between a private American firm and the British government.

Taft said he made the first draft of his speech before Wendell L. Willkie announced following his Wednesday call at the White House that in his opinion the United States should establish military bases both in Northern Ireland and Scotland.

Criticizing the Iceland occupation as "exactly equivalent to aggressive war" and outside the President's authority, Taft said "every argument that has been used for the occupation of Iceland applies to Ireland and England and Portugal."

"The occupation of Ireland would relieve perhaps a half-million British troops for service elsewhere and put a half-million American boys into the British Islands," Taft said. "A base in Ireland would be much more effective to protect shipping than a base in England."

Taft said that if Iceland was occupied for defense, "then any act the President cares to order is defense."

"If he can send troops to Iceland on this ground, he can certainly send troops to Ireland on this ground. He can send them to Scotland or England. He can send them to Portugal. These countries are no farther away than Iceland, and now we have to defend our troops in Iceland."

To Put Knox on Grid

The Senate Naval Affairs Committee, headed by noninterventionist Senator Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, meanwhile voted to call Secretary of the Navy Knox and Admiral Stark, chief of naval operations, for questioning in executive session.

Knox and Stark were called in connection with a resolution by Senator Wheeler to investigate whether United States warships have fired on German submarines. Knox already has denied such an occurrence. Committee members are expected to question both Knox and Stark on Atlantic naval policy in general.

To Taft's challenge of the President's authority to send troops to Iceland without approval of Congress, Connally retorted that nothing in the Constitution inhibits the President's powers as commander in chief over the Army or Navy. Connally maintained the President can "send the Army and Navy wherever the national interests of the United States require that the Army or Navy be sent."

Citing prior danger of the Axis making of Iceland a "nest" for attack on our shipping, Connally asked:

"When the government of Iceland invites us to come in and garrison that island, why shouldn't we go?"

Connally said the United States should not submit to the "cowardly and craven doctrine" that another nation can tell us not to send our ships on the seas.

Danaher followed Connally with a charge that Winston Churchill's statement in the British Parliament that American troops would be stationed in Iceland was "quite the contrary" of the President's statement.

"They are there to supplement the British, and they therefore are making the United States forces a garrison, a defending force of the outpost, in the defense of the British Empire, not of the United States," said Danaher.

Could Have Bases

Belfast, Northern Ireland, July 10 (U.P.).—Wendell L. Willkie's proposal that the United States establish bases in Northern Ireland was praised today by Prime Minister J. M. Andrews.

"I have no hesitation in stating that if the United States and Great Britain came to the conclusion that this would be helpful in winning the battle of the Atlantic, the Ulster government readily would agree and do everything possible to facilitate the proposals," he said.

Some commentators suggested that Londonderry with Lough Foyle might be suitable for a naval base while Eniskillen on Lough Herne might make a good air base for both land and sea planes.

4 D. C. Boards List Numbers Of Registrants

Serial numbers for 637 of Washington's 5,500 new 21-year-old Selective Service registrants were announced yesterday by four of the District's 25 local boards.

The serial numbers, officials explained, do not in themselves affect the order in which registrants will be called. However, these are the numbers for which registrants will be listening at the drawing of the Nation's second peacetime draft lottery on Thursday.

Numbers from 1 to 750 are now being assigned to individual registrants at all local boards throughout the country, they said. A corresponding set of numbers will be inserted in pink, nonflammable capsules and drawn from the fish bowl on Thursday. Thus as each number is read out it will represent about 1,000 individual holders of that serial number, one at each local board throughout the Nation.

The order in which the serial numbers are drawn will determine the order in which registrants will be liable for service.

Lists of the numbers assigned at the rest of the local boards here are expected today, District Selective Service headquarters said yesterday.

In the meantime, Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, Selective Service Director for the District, pointed out that under a few-weeks-old amendment to the Selective Training and Service Act, men who have satisfactorily served three or more years in the Regular Navy, Marine Corps or Coast Guard are not liable for Selective Service training.

He cited the amendment which also exempts, under certain conditions, men who have served in reserve components of these branches of the armed service.

The original Selective Training and Service Act provided such exemption only for men who had served in the Regular Army, National Guard or Reserve Army, Gen. Cox explained, and a number of registrants who now are exempted by the amendment have been inducted into the Army. These men, he said, may be discharged upon application made through their company commanders to the Adjutant General's office of the War Department.

Another announcement affecting men registered last September said that 67 new inductions would have to be made for the District's July quota of 700, since the new regulation exempting married men and men over 28 had released 42 white men and 25 Negroes from induction roles.

Virginia State Selective Service headquarters at Richmond transmitted to Gov. Price yesterday the resignation of Dr. William B. McIlwaine, chairman of the Alexandria Selective Service Board. Dr. McIlwaine, minister at the Second Presbyterian Church of Alexandria, said that he had given up the work because of the time lost from his pastorate. His successor will be recommended by the Governor, but officials were uncertain how soon the post would be filled.

R.O.T.C. Views Guns at Work At Fort Meade

By the Associated Press

Fort George G. Meade, Md., July 10.—Whistling bullets and the ring of rifle and machine gun fire mingled with the thud of the mortar here today as the 115th Infantry, commanded by Col. D. John Markey, staged a demonstration of four infantry weapons for 600 R. O. T. C. students undergoing summer training here.

A simultaneous discharge of all the weapons on a common target across a lake in the rear of the firing range closed the three-hour program. Tracer bullets flashed across the lake, and at times water splashed into the air showing where a shot had fallen short of its mark.

Before the fusillade eight picked riflemen gave a comparative demonstration of the Garand and Springfield rifles.

Four men firing the Springfield unofficially averaged 15 shots a minute; the men firing the semi-automatic Garand averaged nearly 27 shots. The highest Garand firing figure was 32, while Lieut. John C. Golden, in charge of the M-1, or Garand, demonstration, topped the Springfield scores with 18 shots in the minute he fired.

Other weapons demonstrated were the light machine gun, the 60-millimeter mortar and the 81-millimeter mortar.

Clothing, Equipage Repair Shop Opens

Fort George G. Meade, Md., July 10 (AP).—Col. Gilbert M. Allen, Fort Meade post commander, today announced the opening of a new post clothing and equipage repair shop.

Commonly referred to as the "C. and E. shop," it functions in four units—shoe repair, clothing repair, tentage and C. C. canvas overhauling and the rebuilding and renovation of mattresses and pillows.

In addition to the necessary administrative and supervisory personnel, the shop employs 29 shoe repairmen, 29 seamstresses, 4 tentage repairmen and 4 mattress makers.

Combat Teams Find Day Good for Sleep

Bowling Green, Va., July 10 (AP).—Soldiers of the Eighty-eighth Brigade were given a day's rest today and that's how most of the 8,000 officers and men spent it—resting.

Exhausted after nearly 24 hours of continuous "fighting" the men of the 116th and 117th Infantry combat teams found the somewhat cloudy day perfect for sleeping.

The 116th's problem yesterday was one of strategic withdrawal and didn't conclude until about 4:30 this morning while the 176th's attack on an imaginary Red force kept its men on the go until 7:30 a. m. The men were met at the destination of their forces by truck convoys and taken back to camp for their first hot meal since Tuesday morning.

Officers in command of the maneuvers here on the A. P. Hill Military Reservation said both movements went off well and said they were impressed particularly by the manner in which the men conducted their night operations.

Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, commander of the Twenty-ninth Division, was expected to be here tomorrow to greet Lieut. Gen. Hugh A. Drum, commander of the First Army and Maj. Gen. Henry C. Pratt, Second Army Corps commander, who will inspect Friday's operations.

CHANCE TO SEE A MESSERSCHMITT—Capt. W. J. Trott, repreeenting the Air Attache of the British Embassy in New York, explains the significance of five "trophy stripes" on the tail of a captured Nazi Messerschmitt fighting plane, which will be placed on exhibition today at the National Theater for British war relief. Each of the stripes means a victory by the German pilot over an Allied plane. The Messerschmitt is the only German fighter plane in the U. S.

Dies Blames Fifth Column, C. I. O. for Defeat in Texas

By The Associated Press

Orange, Tex., July 10.—Representative Martin Dies (Democrat), of Texas, charged today in a statement that "C. I. O. and Fifth Column organizations poured out hundreds of thousands of dollars" to defeat him in the recent Texas Senatorial election.

The chairman of the House Committee investigating un-American activities urged an investigation of the June 28 election, won by Gov. W. Lee O'Daniel. Dies finished fourth, Representative Lyndon Johnson, who claimed White House support, ran second in a close race with O'Daniel.

Dies said he would open a hearing Monday in Washington to receive evidence about subversive elements in America.

Dies asserted a fearless investigation would disclose "flagrant violations of the Hatch Act and the Federal statutes limiting campaign expenditures to $25,000."

"Not less than $500,000 was spent in this campaign contrary to the intentions of the Federl law," he continued. "Government employes throughout the State were written numerous letters and contacted by telephone and telegraph for the purpose of influencing their votes.

"As an example, a form letter sent to Government employes informed them that they would not be violating the Hatch Act by expressing their preference for a candidate."

Charlemagne's Burial Place Damaged in Raid

Berlin, July 10 (AP).—An authorized spokesman said tonight that the Aachen Cathedral, where Charlemagne is buried, suffered bomb damage in last night's British air raid. It was used for the coronation of German Kaisers from the ninth to the sixteenth centuries and is some times known as the Kaiserdom.

Steel Shortage Unlikely, Says Walter Tower

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 10.—Walter S. Tower, president of the American Iron and Steel Institute, declared today "there is no sound factual basis for expecting a shortage of steel supply for any essential use."

He said if any acute condition was to be experienced, it was close at hand because of the coincidence of pressing demands for early delivery.

"Like a river in flood, that sort of demand rises rapidly to the crest, but it does not rise forever," Tower said in an address prepared for the nineteenth annual meeting of the purchases and stores division of the Association of American Railroads.

Any real shortage of steel for nonmilitary uses, he said, seems "both unlikely and unnecessary," but if it should come it could be dealt with by rationing or curtailing the more dispensable uses and by a program of wholesale expansion. Tower drew this picture of steel demand and supply:

Rated steelmaking capacity today is more than 85,000,000 net tons of ingots in a year and next year will be substantially more.

The actual output for the first half of 1941 has been at the rate of about 82,000,000 tons.

For this calendar year, American defense program and British-Canadian needs represent an ingot equivalent of not more than 18,000,000 tons.

For 1942, the current estimate for the American program is a little larger, but the British need next year, still uncertain, is hardly likely to expand very much.

"Available facts, therefore," Tower asserted, "justify the belief that both in this year and in 1942 there will be fully 87,000,000 tons of steelmaking capacity which can be used for domestic civilian consumption and for whatever exports may seem desirable to countries other than Britain and Canada.

"So far there have been no figures offered by anyone to show that maximum defense requirements will amount to more than a minor fraction of total ability of the industry to produce steel."

Decatur Girl's Family Seeks Her in D. C.

Assistance in locating Miss Ruth Dahm, formerly of Decatur, Ill., was asked yesterday by her family, who said she was believed to be in Washington.

Her mother is seriously ill and is not expected to live, according to Miss Mary Jean Dahm, of 968 East North Street, Decatur, Ill.

OPM to Urge Still Larger TVA Increase

On the heels of Congressional approval yesterday of a $40,000,000 power expansion project for the Tennessee Valley Authority, it was learned that the OPM will soon recommend to President Roosevelt another TVA enlargement three times as large.

The new program, as well as that approved yesterday by the Senate to build four dams on the Hiwassee River and its tributaries, will be necessary to supply power to produce the additional 600,000,000 pounds of aluminum a year for the new bomber program, a high OPM official disclosed.

An OPM conference was held yesterday to determine which companies would operate the Government-owned plants which are proposed as suppliers of the new aluminum output. It was believed that about two-thirds of the total would go to the Aluminum Co. of America, the rest being shared among Government plants built and operated by the Reynolds Metal Co., Bohn Aluminum Co. and others.

The new TVA expansion program to be recommended, it was learned, contemplates construction of the Fontana Dam, in North Carolina, to produce 165,000 kilowatts of power; another hydroelectric plant on the North Broad or Holston River, and a new steam plant. The latter two, combined, are expected to have firm power capacity of about 185,000 kilowatts.

The Hiwassee appropriation, which had already passed the House, will be sent to conference for agreement on minor amendments. The funds are to permit construction of plants to produce 115,000 kilowatts of firm power.

An indication of the seriousness of the strictures on present aluminum production was revealed yesterday by an OPM announcement that one-fifth of all the employes of the aluminum cooking utensil industry have been laid off or quit their jobs as a result of the industry's inability to obtain the vital metal for nondefense products.

This information grew out of conferences with defense officials and industry and union representatives at which the possibilities of converting the "pots and pans" plants to defense work was discussed.

The manufacturers reported that the industry had 16,000 employes in 1940 and that more than 3,413 had lost or left their jobs.

Committee Kills Plan For D. C. Vote

into the Union and this resolution did not follow that course.

"2. It would not be for the best interests of a majority of District residents. As a State, the District could not look for a contribution from the Federal Government in consideration of the large amount of property owned here by the Federal Government. If it did, every municipality in the country would make a similar demand.

"3. The resolution provided that Congress could give up its power over the District in whole or in part. It would never do for Congress to give up its control. If it did, conditions might arise when the very convening of Congress would be a hardship or impossible. Washington should be the free and untrammeled seat of American Government."

Doesn't Bar New Plan

Senator Austin declared that, in his opinion, disapproval of the resolution does not "foreclose consideration of any other proposal." Austin suggested that, as a test of the District's interest in suffrage, the primary be tried out here. "Perhaps," he said, "we would find the municipality is now more ready to undertake the duties and responsibilities of the franchise than it was when it was tried before."

"The committee felt that the resolution is too drastic," said Senator Kilgore. "There are some inherent dangers. It would have established a new State, setting up a new form of government. I am in favor, and I believe all of the members of the committee are in favor, of giving Washington the vote."

Senator Connally declared that the resolution was "tantamount to giving the District statehood contrary to the original concept of the Constitution." He added, "We feel that the District is getting a pretty good government as it is; taxes are pretty low here."

"Much of the difficulties that exist here do not require a Constitutional amendment," said Senator Norris. "I don't want to destroy national control over the District.

Capper Absent

Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), of Kansas, Senate sponsor of the resolution, left for Topeka and his "birthday picnic," before the subcommittee's decision became known. Representative Sumners (Democrat), of Texas, House author, had gone to Duluth, Wis., to keep a speaking engagement.

Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee, long an advocate of District suffrage, commented:

"Those of us who believe in fundamental American principles will continue our efforts toward ultimate success."

Finch Disappointed

Wilbur Finch, president of the District of Columbia Suffrage Association and chairman of the local suffrage committee of the Federation of Citizens Associations, said:

"I am deeply disappointed by the action of the subcommittee. Yet, there is some consolation to be gained in knowing the door is left open for local suffrage. The Capper-Sumners resolution would not have made it necessary for Congress to extend suffrage either nationally or locally and I don't think it would have given the District the privileges of a State."

Harry N. Stull, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, was also disappointed.

"It is very unfortunate," he said, "that the resolution was rejected. Our federation has gone on record many times for the right of self-government. We want 100 per cent and full suffrage for all."

Miss Etta L. Taggart, chairman of the National Representation Committee for the Federation of Citizens Associations and chairman of the National Representation Committee for the Federation of Women's Clubs, also expressed disapproval of the subcommittee's action. She declared:

"It goes without saying that I am terribly disappointed. I have been working to secure national representation for the District for 18 years. There is a lot of talk these days about democracy, but now it seems that this is not a government of the people, for the people and by the people.

"I think that if we had a form of self-government here we would have less crime and a much better Police Department. Any deficiency of the police force can be placed right at the doors of Congress. But we are going to continue our fight for suffrage and, in time, I am sure we will win!"

District Now Has Broad Law On Vagrancy

Just how teeth will be put into the District's vagrancy law, as proposed by the Commissioners, seemed problematical yesterday when authorities disclosed that a statute of the broadest sort already was on the books.

"The law appears to cover every situation," said Capt. Ira Keck, acting chief of detectives. "But cases just don't hold up in court."

Under its terms a vagrant is "any idle persons not having visible means of support, who lives without lawful employment or who wanders abroad visiting tippling houses, houses of ill fame, or who lodges in public places" without giving a good account of himself.

The law also covers "all persons leading an idle, immoral or profligate life and who have no property to support them and who are able to work, and every person known to be a pickpocket, thief, burglar or confidence man, either by his own admission or by having been convicted in Washington or elsewhere."

Not Fair, Says Neilson

Police Court Judge George D. Neilson said he did not think it was fair nor did he intend to convict an individual "just on a prior record."

He cited a case last week where a detective sergeant brought before him four men, all known by the officer as shady characters. All had police records but no convictions were shown, said the judge.

"Under the law," he commented, "I couldn't convict the men nor could I have if their records showed convictions for offenses other than 'pocket picking, theft, burglary or confidence trick' as stated in the law."

Ordered by the Commissioners to draw up a vagrancy law with teeth in it following testimony before the House committee investigating the Police Department, Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech said he was reviewing the present law to see if it could be strengthened.

He said he intended also to look over the vagrancy laws of California and Florida, noted for their restrictions against vagrants, to see how those States handled the problem and how much success they had in getting court convictions.

Park Statute Used

Park Policeman Bernard J. Beckmann is the only local officer who has made much progress in curbing vagrancy, and he doesn't use the vagrancy law. He has arrested more than 150 and obtained convictions in about 90 per cent of the cases under United States park regulations which prohibit sleeping and loitering in the parks.

Many of the vagrants arrested by Beckmann have been found to be fugitives from other jurisdictions.

Roosevelt Signs Prison-Goods Bill

President Roosevelt yesterday signed a measure amending the statute prohibiting transportation of prison-made goods in interstate commerce so as to exclude the District government from its provisions.

The amendment was necessary so that goods manufactured in District penal institutions located outside the District limits may be transported within the District for Government use. The Federal Government already is exempt from certain limitations in the present law.

Bridegroom Loses Court Tilt to Police

Police had "their day in court" yesterday against Lisle T. Lipscomb, 24, of Chevy Chase, Md., who says he was assaulted after his arrest on traffic charges—and the man came out second best.

He was found guilty on four traffic counts and fined a total of $16. A fifth charge—disorderly conduct—was called into court, but continued until today after court remained in session until 7 p. m.

Whether Lipscomb, who is seeking a warrant charging three Tenth Precinct policemen with assaulting him, will have an opportunity to retaliate rests with District Attorney Edward M. Curran.

The latter has assigned three of his assistants to investigate Lipscomb's charges and last night they had made no recommendations.

Charges Hurled

Charges both pro and con grew out of Lipscomb's arrest about 3 a. m., June 26, when he drove the wrong way on a one-way street. He and two companions, George Elam, 5408 Thirteenth Street Northwest, and Graham Weigle, of Kensington, Md., were returning from a bachelor party in Lipscomb's honor.

Policeman Parke H. Sams, Tenth Precinct, who arrested the bridegroom-to-be, who became a husband two days after his arrest, testified the defendant drove the wrong way on Hobart Street Northwest, passed two stop signs and was exceeding the speed limit.

The youth, however, declared he inadvertently drove into the street, realized his mistake and backed out. The other charges, he told Judge John P. McMahon, were placed "to try to shut me up." His two companions corroborated his statements.

Judge McMahon, who repeatedly refused to hear any testimony concerning an alleged free-for-all in the Tenth Precinct station, and frequently warned prosecution and defense lawyers against their fiery bursts, decided:

False Charges Claimed

"There have been insinuations that the arresting officer witnessed only one violation, and because of the youth's objections, deliberately filed additional false charges.

"There is no evidence which impresses me that the officer deliberately filed false charges against the defendant.

"Considering the evidence, I am convinced beyond any doubt of the defendant's guilt and I so find him guilty."

Judge McMahon took Lipscomb's personal bond on the one-way street violation, fined him $10 for speeding and $3 each on two charges of passing stop signs.

At 2 p. m. yesterday, several hours after the traffic charges were heard, Lipscomb, Weigle and Elam were arraigned before Judge George D. Neilson on disorderly conduct charges.

All pleaded not guilty.

Tells of Melee

After hearing half-a-dozen character witnesses for the defendants, a move agreed to by Assistant Corporation Counsel Milton Korman, who is prosecuting the cases, Policeman Sams was called as the first witness.

He asserted the three defendants had been drinking and had made loud protestations against the charges placed against Lipscomb. While they were arguing, Sams said, Precinct Detective Harry Hamilton came into the station house to make a telephone call.

Hamilton turned to Lipscomb, it was stated, and asked him to quiet down. Lipscomb, Sams asserted, asked the detective "who the hell are you? I'll talk as long and loud as I please."

Private Calvin M. Green, also in plain clothes, admonished Lipscomb that he was in a station house under arrest and to answer the station clerk's questions.

Green placed his hands on the youth's shoulder and turned him toward the arrest book, Sams declared.

"When Green did this, Weigle leaped on Green's back and Lipscomb began to strike Green. Hamilton jumped over the rail and a general melee ensued," Sams said.

Sams said Lipscomb "threw punches as fast as he could" and that the shouting of the men could be heard half a block.

Sergt. A. S. Douglas, who was acting lieutenant at No. 10 that night, ordered the station clerk to place the disorderly conduct charges against the three men, Sams told the court. Five other policemen offered similar testimony.

The trial will be continued today. Defense Attorney Robert Lynch said yesterday he had no intention of appealing Lipscomb's conviction in Traffic Court.

Ecuador and Peru Emissaries Take Same Plane Here

Miami, Fla., July 10 (AP).—Diplomatic representatives of Peru and Ecuador arrived here on the same plane tonight en route to Washington, presumably to discuss mediation of their border dispute with the State Department.

Both Carlos Concha, of Peru, and Homero Viteri Lafronte, of Ecuador, declined to talk of the quarrel, which flared again recently.

"All I can say is that I am going to Washington on a diplomatic mission and I am hoping and hoping and hoping," said Concha, former Peruvian minister of foreign affairs.

Asked whether he believed Japanese or Nazi agents helped precipitate the dispute, Lafronte said:

"I think it is nonsense to say any outside influence is responsible. There have been boundary disputes between our countries for years, but they have never amounted to a great deal."

Canning Machines Placed on Priority

To insure maximum conservation of this year's fruit and vegetable crop and prevent threatened losses, the Office of Production Management granted priority preference yesterday to manufacturers of canning machinery. The action was taken, it was explained, because of fears that not enough machinery and equipment is available for getting the foodstuffs into the required containers.

Vatican Joins in Paderewski Rites

Rome, July 10.—The Holy See's refusal to acknowledge the German conquest of Poland was reaffirmed today at a requiem mass in St. Peter's for the late Ignace Jan Paderewski.

Not only the staff of the Polish Embassy to the Holy See, which is still recognized, was present, but there were also representatives from the Vatican secretariat of state.

Licenses Decreed For Large D. C. Rooming Houses

All Washington rooming houses having sleeping accommodations for 10 or more persons must get an annual license costing $5, the District Commissioners announced yesterday.

The order was designed to give the District inspection powers over such establishments and a check on their compliance with fire escape regulations. It is estimated that there are some 9,000 rooming houses here.

The order was adopted upon recommendation of Robert H. Davis, inspector of buildings and director of inspection, and Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech.

Recently the Commissioners placed before Congress a proposed new fire escape law. During its consideration by members of the House District Committee, it was suggested that the Commissioners adopt the rule promulgated today. Davis said the new fire escape proposal was needed since the present law was in a confused state and its enforcement was difficult.

The measure would require all rooming and boarding houses to be connected with the District fire alarm system and fire escape on all buildings having sleeping accommodation for 10 or more persons.

The new regulation is to be effective after 30 days.

Navy Mines 'Frisco Bay Area

The Navy advised shipping yesterday that mines had been laid in the approach to San Francisco Bay and to stay clear of an area about 3½ miles southwest of Mile Rocks Lighthouse.

There was no word whether or not the mine-laying was routine training, but the Navy Hydrographic Office said the mines would be in position "for an indefinite period."

Last Call

Four-fifths of the Washington quota toward the national chest which the United Service Organizations are collecting is in sight. The sum required is $250,000, and the next date line, or the day on which the local branch will meet to report progress, is July 17. Washington is abreast of other big communities in the march toward the goal, but it lags behind many of the smaller cities. This is a situation that calls for quick correction. Our city, the Capital of the Nation, should be in the lead in putting over the top a national campaign which should take primacy over all other campaigns of this nature. It is so worthy that the word charity is a misnomer. Duty is a more appropriate word; for the money which is being collected is destined to provide recreational facilities for our citizen army. As we think of them, so they will sacrifice for us. USO campaign headquarters are at 1419 F Street, and would-be contributors are asked not to wait for callers, of whom there are not too many, but to mail their money to that address.

Basic Bible

Among the pleasanter and more interesting coincidences of the past few months has been the appearance of three new English versions of the New Testament. They were prepared by scholars working from entirely different sources, but having the common purpose of rendering the Gospels in the everyday speech of modern English-speaking readers. Of these three versions perhaps the best known is the revision by a committee of American Catholic scholars of the translation published in 1582 by the English College at Rheims and revised in the early eighteenth century. Another is a translation by George M. Lamsa, directly from the Peshitta, or the ancient Aramaic Gospels, which, in the translator's belief, antedate even the earliest Greek texts. The third is a translation of the Testament, "from the original sources," meaning, presumably, the Greek, into Basic English. This translation is the work of a committee headed by Prof. S. H. Hooke of the University of London, in collaboration with the Orological Institute at Cambridge. This translation will be published shortly in America by Messrs. E. P. Dutton & Co.

Basic English is an idiom invented by Prof. C. K. Ogden, consisting of only 850 common words and a syntax which is quickly comprehended by foreigners. As one of the projected international languages, it has become a formidable rival to Esperanto and Ido. For the purposes of the New Testament the vocabulary has been extended to 1,000 words through the inclusion of certain indispensable Biblical terms. From the literary, aside from the philological or exegetical, point of view, the contrast between the Basic English Testament and that of the Authorized (King James) Version of 1611 is rather startling. Here, for instance, is a text from the familiar and well-beloved thirteenth chapter of I Corinthians:

> Love is never tired of waiting; love is kind; love has no envy; love has no pride; love's ways are ever fair, it takes no thought for itself; it is not quickly made angry, it has no thought of evil; it takes no pleasure in wrong-doing, but has joy in what is true; love has the power of undergoing all things, having faith in all things, hoping all things. Though the prophet's word may come to an end, tongues come to nothing and knowledge have no more value, love has no end.

We think that most of our readers will agree that, whatever the message of the Apostle has here gained in clarity, it has lost in poetry. Probably every religious person would say that the meaning of a text is more important than the emotional or esthetic quality of the words. At the same time, it is the incomparable poetry of the Authorized Version which probably explains the steady refusal of the great majority of Protestant Christians to abandon it, despite its alleged textual inaccuracies, for the Revised Version of 1895. It is impossible to imagine poetry written in Basic English—except, perhaps, unconsciously. These translators, as a matter of fact, make no such claim. The sponsors of the Basic English New Testament are careful to explain that it is not intended to supplant but to supplement the Authorized Version. And, poetry or no poetry, if they have succeeded in making plainer the Message which is so sorely needed in what the Pope recently called "the darkness of the storm," they deserve not only the praise but also the gratitude of us all.

Damp Squib

It remains to be seen whether Hitler has made a fatal miscalculation as to the number of men and women and the amount of time that will be required for the conquest of Russia. But it is already plain that he seriously miscalculated the influence that his Russian adventure might have on opinion in both Europe and America. The whole tenor of the propaganda emanating from Berlin and Rome in the first week of the Russian invasion was predicated upon an expectation or hope that the Christian world, or what is left of it, would rejoice at the eradication of the greater of the two great enemies of religion at the hands of the lesser enemy. Indeed, Hitler, with superb effrontery, made haste to identify his cause with that of Christian civilization, assuming that for the nonce no questions would be asked concerning the status of Christian civilization within the Reich and in the conquered countries.

All this was quite in accord with the famous axiom set forth in "Mein Kampf," that the bigger the lie the more readily and widely it will be believed. But for once Nazi cynicism appears to have overreached itself. To be sure, some guileless souls seem actually to have taken the "holy crusade" at its face value. But those who are in much better position to know what "Christian civilization" is like under Hitler's protection were not deceived. Foremost among these was Pope Pius XII. In the papal message to the world, broadcast June 29, Hitler could find nothing—not a word, not a phrase—which by any amount of twisting could be even remotely construed as indorsement or approval of his crusade. Indeed, it seemed obvious to many that the Pontiff's words had been carefully chosen to avoid all possibility of such construction. The Pope, however, did speak with great emotion of the indescribable suffering that Catholics are enduring "in some places," adding that his anxiety for them prevented him from describing these sufferings "in all their sad and moving details."

Almost as if to clarify the Pontiff's meaning came the pastoral letter of the German bishops, signed at Fulda, declaring that at last a point has been reached where the "existence or nonexistence of Christianity" within Germany is at stake. What a postscript for the Hitler crusade in Russia! Meanwhile, speaking here in Washington, Bishop Hurley, of St. Augustine, Fla., scornfully rebuked those of his coreligionists who have permitted themselves to be blinded to the truth that Hitler, rather than Stalin, is today their foremost and most formidable earthly enemy. Fortunately not many seem to have been taken in. This was Mr. Churchill's great fear, judging from the manner in which he jumped to the microphone as soon as the Russo-German war broke out, and the more than usual vigor of his language. It may also have accounted for our own departure from the continuity of our Atlantic policy, at last furnished with a case in point by the Robin Moor outrage, and our strange official anxiety to discover a sort of community with the Soviet Union. Whatever happens to Hitler's campaign against Russia, it is evident that his campaign to win Christian support for that campaign has already been defeated.

Help Wanted

Help wanted! was a sign that had almost disappeared a half dozen years ago, but now it has been run up by the Nation. It is increasingly evident that in our defense effort we have undertaken a job that is beyond our present resources of men as well as materials. Our shortage of workers is impressive. Sidney Hillman, head of OPM's Labor Division, estimates that over 1,400,000 additional men will be needed for defense work within the next 9 months, while anywhere from 2,500,000 to 3,000,000 more workers will be needed for all purposes. If the defense program is to go forward according to schedule it is, therefore, essential to locate and train many thousands of men for the defense industries. For, as the OPM states, "the best equipped plant, the most abundant supplies of materials, are meaningless without a competent operating personnel." Spurred to action by reports of labor shortages making it impossible to operate defense industries on an around-the-clock schedule, the President recently placed upon the OPM full responsibility for getting needed workers for defense plants. Accordingly Mr. Hillman has organized a new Labor Supply Branch of the OPM. It will bring together in Washington representatives of 12 Government agencies concerned with labor supply and training programs for consultation in regard to matters of policy. Paralleling this central organization are 12 regional supply committees on which labor and management as well as these same Government agencies will be represented.

The major responsibility for collecting information about number and location of idle workers will continue to devolve upon the United States Employment Service. This is a permanent agency, being concerned with the needs of both defense and nondefense industries. The new coordinated setup, however, lays the foundation for more effective handling of defense labor problems by bringing together representatives of Government units concerned with all phases of industry's needs and putting them in touch with representatives of labor and management. In the future, no doubt, increased pressure will be brought to bear upon employers and employes to follow suggestions in regard to hiring and shifting of workers from plant to plant or from industry to industry. If recommendations are disregarded, the use of labor priorities might be the next step, as Mr. Hillman hints. However, there is much less likelihood that such strong measures will become necessary if an adequate organization is established now to provide for the hiring, training and orderly transfer of workers from less to more essential jobs.

The labor recruitment program will be further assisted by the creation of defense labor advisory committees corresponding to the industry advisory committees set up a few weeks ago. These labor committees will consult with Government representatives in the various commodity sections of OPM in regard to those aspects of defense production which primarily concern labor. The creation of labor committees, coupled with labor representation in the regional supply committees, emphasizes the fact that labor has equal interest with management in problems connected with defense production. The new labor supply setup may be said to combine a greater degree of administrative centralization with increasing dependence upon advice and consultation with the industries and the labor groups affected by official decisions.

Max Rehabilitated

Lazarus rose from the dead, but Maxim Litvinoff only emerged from an enforced retirement, though that event was, in its way, no less miraculous a development. During that long, bleak period between the signing of the Ribbentrop-Molotoff pact and Hitler's sudden assault on the Soviet Union Litvinoff became a shadow figure of the rapidly retreating past. The policy of collective security which he had so long and so vainly preached in season and out had been unceremoniously thrown overboard by the Kremlin. The League of Nations which he had used as an effective sounding board had crumbled into desuetude. Litvinoff was the discredited apostle of an abandoned policy. But in the months between August 23, 1939, and June 22, 1941, he, nonetheless, managed to maintain a hold on life. And that, as the Abbe Sieyes pointed out of those who lived through the Reign of Terror, was in itself an accomplishment.

Now the whirligig of circumstance has turned full circle. Hitler, who has been responsible for the destruction of so many lives, has given renewed life and vigor to the one-time foreign commissar of the Soviet Union, helped restore him to eminence, and proved the soundness of the policy he had espoused. So even though Litvinoff's successor, Viachesleff Molotoff, continues to remain nominally as head of the Narkomindel, the Kremlin has put Litvinoff forward to expound Soviet policy to the people of the English-speaking nations. It must have given him a malign pleasure to declare as he did in his radio broadcast this week that: "No agreements or treaties, no undertaking signed by Hitler and his henchmen, no promises or assurances on their part, no declarations of neutrality, no relations with them whatsoever can provide guarantee against a sudden unprovoked attack." These words, addressed to the outside, apply with no less force to the policy which Russia herself had pursued up to the time of Hitler's attack. And while doubtless not so intended it is a biting commentary on the erstwhile party line of the Kremlin to point out, as Litvinoff did, that while "victory over the Soviet Union by Hitler would be fraught with innumerable disasters and catastrophes for the British Empire," "we no less recognize the menace which Hitler's victory in the west would constitute for us."

In any event he was on absolutely sound ground when he declared that "both the Soviet Union and Great Britain are fighting for integrity and independence of their states against enslavement, nay, the very extermination of their peoples." On this platform both Moscow and London can stand, however much they may differ, as they do, in other matters.

BRIDE

I too weep cool deep tears to find that I
Must give life part of my life by and by,

And tremble at the green elastic pod
Soon bursting, browning, fading up to God.

Frailer than these stretching things, I weep
To lose what I should soon despair to keep,

For what are life-filled veins that shun to bleed,
And what a flower that fears to bear a seed?

The years shall rob their brilliant tongues of taste
And send them up the sky, a windblown waste,

While, tender, I shall look down leagues of air
And cry, Look, love, our yester-bloom is there.

Pleasant Dream

The "dreaming" writer of today's piece, championing Maj. Ernest W. Brown, should be fed more Welsh rarebit and have someone take down in shorthand an account of his experiences while dreaming about this city of deficiencies.

The write-up today was perfect. It was worth pages of dignified editorials, statistics, pleadings and attention-callings to the difficulties in administering laws and orders in this District of Complexities.

Please consider putting the ingenious writer on a steady diet of whatever it takes to foment his dreaming up more "rare bits" exposing the crazy-quilt system extant in Washington.

A series of "eye-openers" on the general style of this first item might well focus the attention of statesmen and citizens alike on the ludicrous form of our local "demockracy."

MORRIS FRADIN.
Washington, July 6.

I read with great interest the front-page editorial in the Sunday paper, July 6, 1941. I don't know who is the author of "Only a Dream," but, in the words of a current expression, I would say that "he's got somethin' there."

REV. ARMAND T. EYLER.
Washington, July 6.

You had a fine editorial on the front page of The Post on Sunday morning with respect to Maj. Brown's "dream," which pleased me very much, and I am glad to tell you that I heartily indorse the sentiments expressed therein. For many years I have listened to Maj. Brown when he appeared before the Senate Appropriations Committee and told us of the needs of his department. He invariably stressed the need of more policemen. Too often the committee has ignored his recommendations. I will not claim that lack of policemen is responsible for all the troubles of the Police Department with respect to the crime situation in the National Capital, but to quite an extent the major has been right in his appeal for a larger force. I think the situation would have been different if his recommendations had been more generally approved.

ARTHUR CAPPER,
Senator from Kansas.
Washington, July 8.

Foreign Aid

If the present critics of our great President and the foreign policy of our Government are really patriotic Americans who are sincere in their efforts to keep us out of war, then why must it be necessary for the patriots to ignore or distort facts in order to gain followers to their various organizations?

On July 4, Senator Wheeler in an outburst of patriotic oratory said, in effect, that our country did not need the aid of foreign powers in our gallant fight for independence in 1776. Is it possible that this learned statesman has never heard or read of the Polish generals, Pulaski and Kosciusko, the French DeKalb, and Lafayette, and the German Steuben? All were foreigners who were certainly no drawback in an apparently hopeless fight against terrific odds. Or does Mr. Wheeler maintain that these great warriors for our democracy are merely fictional, as he scoffs at any idea of a Hitler world conquest? This is only one of the many instances of distortion which I refer to.

The 'Old Dealers'

A letter, "The Intoxicated New Dealers," in The Post of July 4, may be said to mark the passing of the Old Deal. Mr. W. W. Phillips, of Nashville, Tenn., gives the New Dealers credit for being "drunk on virtue." The letter is intended as a wail against "social gain." The idea of social gain is evidently repugnant to the Old Deal mind. This seems to be admitted.

What seems to worry the Old Dealers is associated with the social gains made by labor under the New Deal which was returned to power for a third term. The fact that about 99 per cent of the American people work for a living might be cited in favor of social gains for labor. However, facts mean very little to an Old Dealer. He simply blinks them.

Blinking facts is a bad habit, Mr. Phillips! Under the iron law of the Old Deal, capital used to compete with itself in paying low wages and thus in cutting down its own markets, since labor not only earns but also spends its wages. The interests of labor and of capital are identical. Some day, perhaps in the dim and distant future or perhaps sooner, as a result of World War II, the lesson will have to be learned, even by Old Deal fact blinkers. At least, on Independence Day, 1941, it can be said, we, the American people, have decided to have a new deal for both labor and capital, all of us, even if we needed "just another European war" to get it!

"Too Fantastic"

If Hitler conquers Russia, he will, of course, control Europe, and will then have his hands full for generations. Certainly, it will be a colossal task to consolidate his gains, pacify the disgruntled groups, while establishing a new social order, a federation of European States.

Who can doubt that the German people, like the British, would welcome peace? They must be sick of war. Germany has lost thousands of her best pilots; her resources have been drained and her financial condition must be precarious. Even with Europe under German domination the outlook would be far from rosy. This being the case, would Hitler commit national suicide by attacking the American giant? Certainly, to people that think, the idea seems too fantastic for sane consideration.

Mores Of Morons

I should like to reply, as a District Moron, to Visiting Midwesterner for his criticism of District residents in needing traffic officers to blow their whistles and wave their arms so we may know when the traffic light is green or red. To enlighten our Midwestern critic, the officer is not going through his blowing and waving for real District folk, who can't vote, but to guide our small-town neighbors who are not used to lights and city ways, and now are making Washington their home, as well as their living here, and are criticizing everything from dawn to sunset through mere lack of common sense. Mr. Midwesterner, this is the honest opinion of a "Moron," as you call us, and one made so from contact with above type for many years.

Answering Pegler

Mr. Pegler, in his article, "America for Americans," is unfair to the naturalized citizen. Mr. Pegler merely sets forth the benefits derived from American citizenship, but fails to take into account the obligations assumed by the naturalized citizen. I wish to call to his attention only a few cases in my immediate family of naturalized citizens serving their adopted country during the World War. Both my brothers served honorably in that war and a brother-in-law was in the thick of the battles in France. A cousin, not a citizen, who merely declared his intention of becoming one, served in France during the severest battles, entered Germany with the army of occupation, became insane there, and took his own life after returning to the States. I do not know how many of the selectees in the camps are naturalized citizens, but their number must be large.

Mr. Pegler's suggestion to limit the holding of public office or of Government jobs to native Americans will result to their disadvantage, since it is well known that these jobs do not promise advancement for ambitious persons. Work outside the Government is more remunerative for aggressive and ambitious persons.

A few words about Mr. Pegler attributing the fall of France to the good heart of France in giving asylum to refugees from other countries: France's fall in 1870 surely cannot be attributed to the above reason, and there is no use attributing her present fall thereto. France fell in 1940 because she allowed Germany to rearm, and Great Britain is sweating blood for the same reason. Our own country is now spending billions of dollars and is compelled to take military measures because it did not take the lead in preventing the monster from growing to his present size.

On Record

How would it be to get a few—a very few—fundamentals straight: First, and foremost, this is a war between two systems—that is one of the few truths that Hitler has told. Hitler aims at world domination, nothing less; we are a part of the world, and step by step he is moving toward us. The blather about not going to war is just that—blather, drivel, what have you. The choice isn't ours because we are in it now; we do have a choice, however, and we are right up against it. It's this: do we want to make our participation effective, almost undoubtedly decisive; do we want to act while we have allies; do we want to rally all those who bide their time and whose time, if we fail them, may never come. Or do we want to wait, as Lindbergh and like would have us, until we face a blood-lusting but not surfeited Hitler and his Quislings alone, at which time, I venture to predict, this noisy crew will not want to man the "impregnable defenses." Having retreated that far, they will be ready to point out that it is useless to fight alone and that it is time to be reasonable. Hitler will undoubtedly agree—on his own terms.

The Post Impressionist

Expression No. 4

This, then, was last of Mexico. Across the bridge was the United States. No more Indians smelling like ripe brown berries, no more blossom-soaked nights and coffee bushes shading under ragged banana palms. O land of the free and home of the brave, I was coming home. And this was farewell to many joys and many pains.

First a cab to take the weary traveler across the bridge into Texas, for which the driver charged three American dollars, and let me off at the bus waiting room whence I was to proceed to Brownsville that afternoon to take the morning plane for Washington. All the while I nourished an amorphous feeling that beyond the $98.45 plane fare I had very little left. And it was 90 some pesos, useless now, and no bus fare to reach Brownsville.

As I simmered like a pot roast with gravy bubbles in the white heat, a vision came, pure and comely, in the image of the American Consul. Consuls were always evacuating Americans from all sorts of situations. But, of course, I reassured myself, that was their function—inspecably whipped out by the State Department to serve the lucky devils who could afford to travel and get caught up in the nematocysts of adventure.

I recrossed the bridge, this time on foot and for nothing, and traced a baked path to the Consul's door. Breathless, hot . . . but the Stars and Stripes rippling so gallantly over the Consul's cottage brought a gentle sigh from the heart.

If ever I were wistful, it was then, when I said "howdoyouda." No ragged urchin with his nose flat against a doughnut shop could have created a more touching pattern than my expression No. 4: wistful.

"Stranded?" he spouted after I poured out heart and expression, and regarded me with a bitten look. "You look like a resourceful young lady." He had a fish look in his eye, and a quiver of triumph rippled from gill to cauda. Anything human would have smiled, would have thought it funny, but he was all fish and chips.

"What do you do with stranded ladies?" I inquired.

"What we do with stranded ladies is give them 3 cents to cross the bridge into the States, and then turn them over to the Salvation Army.

I found myself in the white heat again, possessed by another vision, this one tingling with trombone, tambourine, and Gen. Booth. I started across the bridge, paid 3 cents in the middle, and stepped into the States again.

Immediately I wired Pancho in Mexico City. If he didn't understand my Spanish it would be a good idea to start practicing one of the wind instruments.

Quickly he wired back. In that moment I loved Panchito and Senor Billy-Belly, who had translated my wire for Panchito, and el senor ex-Presidente Cardenas, who returned the land to the Indians, and magnificent snow-peaked Popo, short for Popocatepetl; even Carlos, who reached for his gun when the waiter brought water with a fly in it. Indeed, I loved everyone except that unmentionable cold-blooded one with gills.

There was some sort of regulation, wired Pancho, against wiring money, but an official high in the Mexican Railroad, who was Pancho's amigo, lived in Texas and would see that I reached Brownsville. I waited for three hours without hearing from this one high in the railroad (I forgot it was the siesta) and then the bus was ready to leave and I left with it, digging into the thinning plane fare to pay for the run to Brownsville, and feeding a miscroscopic raw spot of misgiving. Suppose? But of course the Mexican Railroad would come through. It always did—fantastically late but always before the last waiting tourist had wrapped himself around an organ cactus and breathed his last in the beautiful desert.

When the bus stopped in McAllen I bought a ham sandwich for tomorrow. Tomorrow was designed to be a long, lean day and a resourceful one if the Mexican Railroad met a [illegible] there.

I discovered a curio shop and bought a basket, a sarape and a set of chile bowls. Mexican handicraft is crude, and sometimes very bad, but just the same I like it. It reminds me of Consuela: "Mexican men are worms," she said, "but wonderful worms."

Then I sat in Doc Parke's drug store waiting for the bus. Four youths dangled at the door. "Let's do something."

"What?"

"Let's have a spitting contest. Let's see who can spit the furthest."

So the three of them lined up to spit, and the fourth measured the distance.

At 9 o'clock there was no sound in the streets, except the noisy breeze from the Rio Grande rattling through the palms and Doc Parke washing the glasses. There was the feel of something dull and depressing.

That night I lay in my Brownsville bed and thought of many things.

I was almost asleep; the moon was gone and in its place was the breeze like the kiss of 300 angels. It was another kiss of 300 angels that stirred me in the morning. Well, I thought, if I must stay in Brownsville and not fly to Washington, I will devote my time to a census of the angels.

I had a creamless coffee for breakfast and shrouded my senses from the omelette and country sausage next to me. There is a ham sandwich for later, I thought. A ham sandwich and fine for later, finer than none.

Then everything good and kind happened. The Mexican Railroad came through and I found myself at the airport, only a little lacking.

"But, Madame, the fare is $98.45."

"But, Sir, I have only $96.00."

I was completely exhausted from too much anxiety. But I marshaled each of the 12 cranial nerves and fashioned expression No. 4, slightly worn by now, and won. Perhaps it was the sarape that won.

"It's a nice serape," I said, "fine soft wool, and worth $5 easily."

"But, Madame, we never . . ." (Was there a half tear in the corner of my eye?) "Say, it is a swell-looking serape, isn't it."

Fair Enough

The Strike At Inglewood

ACCORDING to the version published in the New York Times, "Wrong" John Lewis, dictator of the mine workers and discredited ex-president of the C. I. O., boiled over in a big meeting of professional unioneers in Washington, denouncing President Roosevelt and Sidney Hillman for calling out soldiers to break the strike which the Communists called at the North American Aviation plant a short time before the Muscovites discovered that Adolf Hitler was a bloody aggressor.

PEGLER

For the sake of the record and clarity in this historic but miserable case it should be pointed out that the President did not use the troops for any such purpose. The troops were not called to break the strike but to intimidate and, if necessary, bat the ears off a lawless mob of hoodlums who were using the force of massed ranks, plus individual terrorism, to prevent American citizens from going to work at their lawful occupations.

THEY WERE organized by the Communist C. I. O. of California, which in the crisis lost its nerve and repudiated its own civil insurrection around the edges, but, nevertheless, maintained the mob in force against the puny and half-hearted power of a politically gutless local and State government. The mob quickly backed off when the soldiers showed a plain intention to meet with force a challenge to the only authority which then stood between the workmen and the mobsters.

The workmen then returned to their jobs, and the President got more credit than he deserved and more than half-deceived many citizens who thought that, at last, he had taken a stand in favor of the free American against the brutality and insidious persecution of the licensed unioneer.

THE FACT is that President Roosevelt took no such stand. He has had a hundred chances to take such a stand, notably in Michigan when Frank Murphy was wheedling his way to the top of the Department of Justice and, ultimately, onto the Supreme Court by flinching in the face of similar mobs of riotous insurrectors. The President had never yet taken such a stand, and in the California case his purpose was not to protect the rights of the citizens but to put that plant back into action for national defense.

In the Michigan insurrections, when Murphy curled up and quit to the Communists, it was held that the sit-down strike was merely a case of multiple trespass, multiple contempt of the State courts and multiple malicious destruction of property, with each of the defendants subject to arrest, trial and punishment separately for each minute offense, rather than a concerted outrage against authority of government and the rights, property and peace of the people.

IN THE CALIFORNIA insurrection, if the mob took the field against the Government, as the Government constructively held it had done when the troops were called, then the leaders should be sent to prison. But they will not be punished because, after all, they did operate under a union charter and the influence of the anti-American Wagner Act, which means that as long as they do not embarrass the President, they are at liberty to slug, slash and burn in concert, subject only to the zeal, courage and honesty of local politicians in command of the police and the prosecuting machinery.

However, to disperse a mob, as was done in this case, and open the public streets so that citizens may use them according to their rights is not strike-breaking. The picket line has no more right to blockade a street or a plant than any other group of private individuals, and the Ku Klux Klan, the infamous Black Legion of later date, in fact, the Black Shirts of Mussolini's and Hitler's Brown Bolsheviks only pursued the same course, with minor variations of method, that this union of the C. I. O. was following in Inglewood.

THE RIGHT to strike was not affected by any act of the troops or the act of calling them out. Those who preferred not to work were not forced back to work at the point of the bayonet. They were just moved out of the way so that men who did want to work could work—a protection which should be afforded all decent workmen everywhere in the United States.

But the President didn't accept that principle in full. He accepted it only as to this particular plant in which he had a particular interest. So the citizen, for all this spectacular demonstration and for all that the National Government has said or done to the contrary, still must understand that on private jobs his Government will not crack down on the lawless guerrilla armies of the unions in the interest of the common man.

The Once Over

Taking Stock

("Mr. Emil Schram, former official of Reconstruction Finance Corporation, has taken over the Presidency of the New York Stock Exchange."—News item.)

Mr. Schram arrived in New York at 9 a. m. and asked a policeman where to find the stock exchange. The policeman referred him to the information booth.

The information booth said it hadn't heard of the place in years and suggested that Mr. Schram try the data on Old New York department at the library.

Mr. Schram decided to trust to a taxicab. "I want to get to the stock exchange," he said. The driver replied, "Why?"

The taxicab driver, seeing that Mr. Schram was determined, started downtown, but had considerable trouble locating the place. "Look for a cemetery," suggested Mr. Schram. "Wall Street is nearby."

"That was years ago. They're all one now," corrected the driver.

Mr. Schram finally reached Wall Street but failed to identify the stock exchange. "I was looking for ruins," he explained when the building was pointed out.

"Well, you've found 'em," was the answer.

Mr. Schram entered the building to the deafening roar of a stock going off an eighth and took office to the terrific clatter of an isolated ticker trying to flutter slightly. At 3 p. m. he was informed that the business day had ended. "I was waiting for it to begin," he said.

He was surrounded by reporters who asked what he thought of Wall Street.

"It's all right, but what does one do in it for excitement?" he inquired. Nobody knew.

"What do you think of Wall Street?" asked a reporter.

"I place it somewhere between the Rose Bowl in midsummer and any baseball park the night before Christmas," he replied.

"Do you think the stock exchange has a bright future?"

"Anything that happens to it from now on ought to seem bright by comparison," he replied.

"You have been a New Deal official, Mr. Schram. How do you reconcile your views as New Dealer with those as the paid head of the stock exchange?"

"If there is anything one develops under the New Deal it is agility, my boy."

Mr. Schram jumped suddenly. "What was that noise?" he demanded.

A broker explained that a ticker had moved.

"It was so sudden it scared me," he laughed. "Doesn't it frighten you?"

"We can stand it when a ticker makes one click," explained a broker. "What worries us is what our reaction will be if it clicks twice."

A messenger boy handed Mr. Schram a telegram. It was from his predecessor now in an Army camp and read: "All best wishes. Maneuvers opened weak, closed strong. Feet under pressure. K. P. detail very firm. First sergeants showing increasing strength. Outlook uncertain. Hope you are the same. Bill Martin."

Mr. Schram leaped into another taxi.

"The Nazis claim to have shot down 4,500 Russian planes," a golfing partner remarked to Ray Porter the other afternoon. "4,500!" exclaimed Porter. "What are the Germans using, buckshot?"

A horse named "Thrift" is running at New York tracks. And Washington has done nothing to stop it.

World Of Two Wars

By Mark Sullivan

The Price We Are Paying

BY TWO RECENT steps, we have gone far toward war. Since last Monday, American naval and marine forces are in Iceland, with Army troops to follow. They are there, Mr. Roosevelt says, "to supplement and eventually to replace" British forces. They are there to perform, in future, the function that was performed by the British alone until last Monday. The function of the British force was war. The function of the American force can hardly be short of war. To set up any hair-splitting distinction would be idle.

SULLIVAN

We have gone far toward war in another way. Having made Iceland an armed outpost of the United States, President Roosevelt sets up a special dominion over the waters between us and Iceland. These waters, Mr. Roosevelt says, must "remain open and free from all hostile activity or threat thereof." He has ordered the Navy to take "all necessary steps." Upon this order to the Navy, Secretary Knox has commented, somewhat cryptically, yet with obvious intent to imply that "all necessary steps" would include shooting.

THIS SEEMS to mean that if German submarines, raiders, or warplanes appear in the waters between the United States and Iceland, our Navy will drive them off. Through these waters pass most of the supplies from the United States to Britain. Hence in these waters German attackers are common. It was in these waters, a few weeks ago, that the German battleship Bismarck was fought by the British. Presumably, if an equivalent of the Bismarck appeared in these waters from now on, it would be treated as an enemy by the American Navy. This is a reasonable inference from President Roosevelt's words, from Secretary Knox's interpretation of them, and from the general attitude of Washington. It may be Mr. Roosevelt intends his words as a warning. If so, it is, of course, a true warning—the United States does not bluff. If the condition arises, we will do the thing.

To Hitler, this must be ominous. The American Navy and British navy cooperating should be able to overcome the German submarines and raiders. They should make shipping safe enough to insure the survival of Britain. In this condition, Hitler must know now that he can hardly win the Battle of the Atlantic. If he cannot win the Battle of the Atlantic, he cannot win the war. He may conquer Russia. He may go to the gates of India. He may seize Suez and Gibraltar. But unless he can win the Battle of the Atlantic, and conquer the island of England, he cannot win the war. This has been the judgment of Winston Churchill and there is good reason for it. The best Hitler can hope is to resist being conquered himself, to bring about a prolonged stalemate.

THESE developments are greatly to the satisfaction of the American people—nine out of ten of them wish ardently that Hitler be stopped. Our occupying Iceland is approved by experts—who know that if we did not occupy it, Germany would try to, and thus have a base from which to move still further toward America. It gave pleasure to the people, who, wishing Britain to win, wished also to help her win.

But we cannot have our war and dodge it too. We are paying a price. Part of the price is reduction of the control of Congress over the making of war. For keeping the action about Iceland secret, there were military reasons. But from the point of view of Government, it has a disturbing aspect. We have seen a President take a step which goes straight toward participation in war, without action by Congress. Not only without a declaration of war by Congress, but without discussion by Congress, without knowledge by Congress.

Further, in occupying Iceland, Mr. Roosevelt said he did not know if it was outside the American Hemisphere, and it did not matter. The Atlantic boundary of the American Hemisphere, he said, is an imaginary line, not practicable to conform to. In this there is much truth.

BUT THE PHRASE, "outside the American Hemisphere," has come to have a special meaning. It has been used by leaders, in party platforms, and in Congress to describe the limit beyond which American soldiers would not be sent to fight. It has been so understood by the public. It was so used by Mr. Roosevelt. The waiving of this limit, by the President, can have consequences. If he, as Commander in Chief, can order a force of Marines to one spot outside the Western Hemisphere, and do it without action by Congress, can he not with equal justification order a whole army to some other spot outside the Western Hemisphere?

There are in the world two wars. One is a war between nation and nation. The other is a war between rival conceptions of government. This latter is a war between, speaking roughly, government by representative bodies—parliaments, Congress; and, on the other hand, government by an individual, a dictatorship. (As a side issue, two of the dictatorships are now fighting each other.) But the main war remains one between government by a parliament or a Congress, and government by an individual. America, and the American Congress, needs to be careful to preserve the vitality of representative government.

Significant Utterance

By Ernest K. Lindley

Bishop Hurley

THE MORE the circumstances surrounding its delivery are examined, the more clearly the radio address by Bishop Joseph P. Hurley, of St. Augustine, last Sunday night emerges as a major diplomatic utterance.

LINDLEY

In blunt language he singled out the Nazi regime as "Enemy No. 1 of America and the world." He brushed aside as Nazi propaganda the effort to interpret the invasion of Russia as "a holy crusade against communism." He called upon all Catholics to support the President's foreign policy, and even to urge him to use his own judgment about going as far as he deems wise in checking the Nazi menace with armed force. And he concluded with a withering denunciation of "a small but noisy group of Catholics" who are opposing the President and popularizing "the ostrich school of strategy."

The significance of the speech lies in Bishop Hurley's relations to the Vatican. The impression in well-informed Catholic circles is that, notwithstanding his disclaimer, he did in fact present these views with the approval or consent of the Pope.

BEFORE being appointed a bishop on August 19, 1940, Msgr. Hurley for 12 years had been in the diplomatic service of the Vatican. During the first six years he was an attache of apostolic delegations: first in India and then in Japan. (In both posts as an assistant to Archbishop Edward Mooney, of Detroit.)

From 1934 until last year Bishop Hurley was attached to the Papal Secretariat of State. As such he became intimately acquainted with the views and methods of Pope Pius XII, who, during most of that period, was Papal Secretary of State. The esteem in which the Pope holds him was attested to by his consecration as Bishop of St. Augustine at the age of 46. Few American Catholic clerics have attained a bishopric at that age, and his elevation only six days after the death of Bishop Barry, of St. Augustine, came as a surprise to many leaders of the Catholic Church in this country.

Of possible further significance is that on July 1, only five days before Bishop Hurley gave his radio address, Cardinal Maglione, Papal Secretary of State, granted an audience to Harold Tittman, Myron Taylor's private secretary. Tittman has been substituting as the President's personal representative at the Vatican since Taylor was compelled by illness to return to this country.

This audience may have been only a coincidence—but if so, it was an interesting one.

WHETHER or not Hurley spoke with the express authority of the Vatican, it is generally conceded that he is more recently familiar with the foreign policy of the Vatican than is any other American prelate. As a personal protege of the present Pope, it is thought inconceivable that he would say anything which he did not believe to be in thorough harmony with Vatican policy.

If so, Bishop Hurley's broadcast may clear away much confusion of emotion, rooted in both traditional Irish hatred of England and fear of communism. The Pope's utterances, as reviewed by Bishop Hurley, clearly identify the Nazis as the foe of civilization and religion, in the view of the Papacy. And as the more powerful of the two great enemies, they are the more dangerous.

This is not the first time that Bishop Hurley, in effect, has declared naziism to be an evil transcending even communism. On May 2 he said that "these men who would have us spend all our energies combating communism are now in reality following the Moscow party line." (This was when Moscow still was regarded as subservient to Berlin.)

AMERICAN policy, he asserted in May and again last Sunday, must be governed by "purely strategic considerations." The President must have the united support of the Nation in any action designed to promote the security of the United States.

Usually well-informed Catholics express confidence that when prelates of somewhat different views, or who are doubtful—either in this country or Latin America—make inquiry they will find that Bishop Hurley set forth the settled policy of the Papacy.

Tide Of Battle

By Barnet Nover

Russia And Hitler's Timetable

BETWEEN THE TIME that Hitler launched his attack on the Low Countries last year and the signing of the Franco-German armistice at Compiegne, exactly 43 days elapsed.

NOVER

In that extraordinarily brief period of just over six weeks, four Allied armies had been smashed, four countries overrun by the Nazi juggernaut. Indeed, the German triumph in the west was actually achieved even more rapidly than these figures would suggest.

The German break-through at Sedan which marked the beginning of the end of French resistance occurred only ten days after the invasion of Belgium and the Netherlands and was followed six days later by the occupation of Calais on the English Channel, eight days later by the surrender of the Belgian armies under King Leopold, and little more than three weeks later by the arrival of German troops at Paris.

FOR GERMANY to repeat this remarkable military achievement, which probably surprised the German high command itself, the swastika would have to be hoisted over Moscow, Leningrad, Kiev and Kharkoff by no later than July 27. This now appears to be beyond the bounds of probability.

The Nazis made considerable territorial gains during the first week or ten days of the present campaign. The momentum of that first sudden assault which they carried out with terrific force netted them practically all of the Russian-occupied part of Poland, all of Lithuania, a large part of Latvia and parts of White Russia and the Ukraine. Whether Hitler expected that the suddenness of the attack on the Red armies would demoralize them and lead to their speedy disintegration and collapse is not clear. If that was his expectation, it is apparent that he has been disappointed.

The Russian armies, during these early days of the fighting in the east, gave way under the impact of the Nazi lunge, but they did not break. It is now fair to assume that the announcement in Berlin that the German high command would soon be able to reveal "unbelievable" victories was the product of wishful thinking, rather than achieved results. It is also fair to suspect that the German claims regarding the number of Russian planes shot down and Russian tanks destroyed were enormously exaggerated.

DURING THE SECOND and third weeks of the fighting in the east, all indications began to point to the probability that the German drive had slackened and in some sections of the far-flung front had been halted altogether. But whether the German war machine has actually been stopped in its tracks with the blitz being taken out of the blitzkrieg is anything but clear.

The campaign in the east extends over so vast a stretch of territory, is being conducted behind such an impenetrable screen of censorship, and involves so many unknowns as to make it all but impossible to determine what is actually going on at any particular moment. There seems to be general agreement, however, that the Russians have fought with courage, hardihood and skill; that their armies, far from being smashed, remain armies in being, and that Hitler is being made to pay heavily for his venture.

THIS IS ENCOURAGING. It would be a fatal mistake, however, to assume that Hitler's jig is now up, that the western enemies of the Third Reich can now afford to sit back and wait for the inevitable collapse of Nazi world ambitions.

Undoubtedly it would be disastrous from the German point of view if the war in the east is indefinitely prolonged, ultimately becoming a stalemate of the kind which characterized the fighting on the Western Front in France after the Battle of the Marne.

But the only certain way of bringing such a stalemate about is to compel Hitler to divide his forces by making it necessary for him to fight in the west as well as the east.

It should not be forgotten, in this connection, that the German blitz of August and September, 1914, was halted in no small measure because part of the Kaiser's forces then pressing down toward Paris via Belgium and northern France was withdrawn and rushed to the Eastern Front to stem the Russian invasion of East Prussia. Deprived of two army corps, Von Kluck hesitated to plunge deeper into France. That hesitation proved fatal. And, as it turned out, the Battle of Tannenberg was won without those reinforcements from Germany's western armies.

THE EARLY DAYS of the fighting in Russia indicate that the German high command has learned that lesson of the last war. Despite the daily and nightly bombing of the so-called invasion ports on the English Channel and cities in the Rhineland, the Germans did not retaliate by similar bombing raids of British cities. Nor did they see fit to keep in the west a sufficient force of fighter planes to beat off British aerial attacks. There is a limit to such a policy and, as the recent attack on Southampton reveals, part of the Luftwaffe appears to have been sent back to the west.

This is a significant development. It may be the result of the fact that so large a part of the Russian air force has been knocked out as to make it unnecessary for the Germans to keep as much air power on the Eastern Front now as they did in the first stages of the attack on the Soviet. It is possible, however, that the damage done by the R. A. F.'s raids was becoming so serious that the German high command found it necessary to ignore all other considerations and strengthen the air garrisons in the west. But the British will have to continue the aerial assault on German-held areas if the German pressure on Russia is to be released to an extent sufficient to make a permanent difference in the fighting along the Eastern Front.

ALL THIS BOILS down to the simple fact that the German attack on Russia constitutes no breathing spell for Great Britain and those supporting her, but only an opportunity to redouble the pressure on the Third Reich.

Probably Hitler was convinced that the assault on the Soviet Union need not mean a war on two fronts. It is only by making it, as far as can be done under present circumstances, a war on two fronts that Hitler can be confounded and a coup which he hoped would advance his interests be transformed into a German disaster of real and decisive magnitude.

Ecuador-Peru Dispute Involves Large, Rich Area

Ecuador and Peru again have resorted to force to protect their respective boundary rights. Border forces of the two republics have clashed in the Chacras region of El Oro province near the point where their uncertain boundaries reach the Pacific Ocean.

"President Roosevelt accepted the role of arbitrator of the Ecuador-Peru territorial dispute in 1934," says a bulletin from the National Geographic Society. "But no satisfactory agreement has yet been reached, although in May, 1941, a peaceful settlement seemed probable when Argentina, Brazil, and the United States offered their friendly services to help arbitrate the differences. These involved no narrow border area, but a huge piece of land about the size of New Mexico at the Amazon headwaters. Both countries accepted the mediation terms, but Peru made reservations which in effect canceled her acceptance.

"Although the present trouble is apparently confined to Pacific coast regions, the much larger and more valuable area east of the Andes is at stake in any long-term solution of the dispute.

"If the eastern region of overlapping claims, which Ecuador calls the Oriente (the East or Orient) and Peru terms the Montana (the Mountain Region), were assured to Ecuador, that country would find its territories clasped in Peruvian pincers. For Peru, by agreements with Colombia and Ecuador, has possession of a long thin arm of land, 400 miles long but on the average less than 40 miles wide, reaching northwestward from the upper Amazon River in the watershed of the Putumayo River, which forms the boundary with Colombia.

"The roughly triangular forest-and-hill region of Oriente lies southwest of this encircling arm of Peru, north of the Rio Maranon (large upper tributary of the Amazon), and east of the crest of the Andes.

"Rich in wild rubber trees, valuable tropical woods, and with resources of gold and possibly oil, the thinly-peopled Oriente region appears as part of Peru on Peruvian maps, while Ecuador charts it as part of her territory. The disputed Oriente is threaded by tributaries of the Maranon and Amazon Rivers. Ocean-going steamers reach the Peruvian port of Iquitos after a 2,300-mile voyage up the Amazon. With about 40,000 inhabitants, Iquitos exports tobacco, cotton, coffee, wax tortoise-oil, gold, sarsaparilla and vanilla, and walnut, mahogany and cedar. Barbasco, a poisonous root which Indians have long used for fishing, is shipped for use as an insect-killer.

"For the Oriente, walled off by the Andes from the developed Pacific coast regions, the Amazon and tributaries provide a natural trade artery to the distant Atlantic. Trans-Andean traffic is by pack mule, for no railroad or improved highway links the territory with the Pacific slope. Airlines, often using hydroplanes which can alight on the abundant water-courses, now provide swift communications between the Oriente and the 'outside' world of the Pacific shore. Jungle fevers and fierce, unconquered Jivaro Indians have hampered economic development of the region."

Cuban Agents Raid Docks, Confiscate Franco Medals

Havana, July 10 (INS).—Cuban counter-espionage agents late today raided the Ward Line docks and seized 34 cases of propaganda and 80,000 silver and bronze Falangist (Spanish) medals consigned to the Spanish consulate.

A government statement said the shipments arrived aboard the steamer Oriente. Police were quoted as saying that instructions with the medals advised drafting "several discreet, proper and good-looking persons to sell the medals to sympathizers, especially civil military authorities in each province.

The official announcement added that the Ward Line dock manager, Ulderico Marasca, described by police as an Italian, was arrested and fined when he attempted to refuse permission for a police search.

The Gallup Poll

Majority Now More in Favor of Aiding Britain Than Prior to Outbreak of Nazi-Soviet War

By Dr. George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., July 10.—One basic question raised by the Nazi-Soviet war is whether or not that war has affected public sentiment in the United States for aiding Britain—whether people now believe that it is not so important to send help to Britain since the Nazis are busy in the East, or whether they think it is more important to aid Britain.

A public opinion survey on that issue, completed in the last few days, indicates that, on the whole, there has been comparatively little change in attitude. However, among those who have changed their attitude, the majority indicate that they are more in favor of aiding Britain than they were prior to the war in Russia.

Approximately one-eighth, or 12 per cent, of persons interviewed in the survey conducted by the Institute say that the Nazi-Soviet war has changed their attitude. Of that 12 per cent, about two-thirds are more in favor of aiding Britain, and one-third less in favor.

The actual vote follows:

"Has the new war between Germany and Russia changed your attitude toward helping Britain?"

Yes	12%
No	83
Undecided	5

Those who answered "yes" were asked a second question:

"Are you now more in favor, or less in favor, of aiding Britain?"

More in favor	8%
Less in favor	4

As reported earlier this week, however, there has been a decline in American sentiment for entering the war now, the figure dropping from 24 per cent before the Russo-German conflict, to 21 per cent today. At the same time, sentiment in favor of using the American Navy to convoy ships remained virtually stable, with a slight increase.

Analysis of comments in today's survey indicates three definite points of view among the American population on the Russian war as it affects aid to Britain.

The argument of the largest group is that the Nazi-Soviet war should not affect aid to England because "our objective is still the same—to beat Hitler" and because Britain is still fighting Germany.

A typical comment from this group is "The only way the new war alters the situation is in making it a little easier for the United States to help Britain."

Second, the group of Americans who did not favor aid to Britain in the first place have not changed their attitude because they believe "Germany's quarrels with Russia has nothing to do with us," and that "we need all our production to build up our own defenses." Those who say they are now less in favor of aiding Britain advance much the same arguments.

Finally, the small group of 8 per cent who want greater aid to Britain argue that this is the time "Britain should strike," and that if Hitler beats Russia, England will need every scrap of iron and every gun available to prepare for the worst.

Aid to Britain has been one of the basic aims of the American public ever since the start of the European war and before.

The majority of voters in Institute surveys approved the lifting of the arms embargo two years ago. They favored the transfer of the 50 destroyers to Britain, they approved passage of the Lease-Lend Act this spring, and the majority are now in favor of convoys.

Figures reported earlier this week showed:

Favor convoys	58%
Opposed	35
Undecided	9

This does not mean, however, that the country favors the extreme step of entering an all-out "shooting" war now. Such a step is opposed by a vote of 79 per cent.

'Boom Town'

Keyed to the tempo of national defense is Washington's boom-town building program which daily is changing the skyline and groundwork of the Capital City.

The $3,000,000 Jefferson Memorial on the Tidal Basin—now two and a half years in construction—will be completed no later than September 1. Only plastering, laying of sidewalks and other miscellaneous tasks remain for the building, but several months of landscape work, the building of roadways and seawalls must follow.

At Scott Circle retaining walls for the underpass are in place and concrete has been poured for the center section. The project is expected to be completed by mid-October.

Nearby at Sixteenth and K, the digging is almost completed for a new $7,000,000 Statler Hotel. Steel will start rising August 1, and the 1,000-room hotel is to be open by this time next year.

Two psychiatric wards at Walter Reed Hospital will be completed within a month. Soon to be finished, too, is the "leave area camp" on the Virginia side of Arlington Bridge, where tents of wooden frames and canvas are fast springing up.

Scheduled for elimination, too, this month, are the remnants of the old traffic bottleneck in Rock Creek Park under Massachusetts Avenue to make way for the new dual roadway.

Bill Cunningham's Column: Ted Williams Obscured by DiMaggio's Streak . . .

Thumping Theodore Williams is the victim of scene-stealing. Ted is hotter'n 49 houses afire and is leading both leagues sensationally up there at the dish but the spotlight's been on Joe DiMaggio and his consecutive streak. What does a guy have to do to get a hand?

It always hurts an old champ to see his record erased, but when Joe DiMaggio wiped George Sisler's 19-year-old mark from the books he hadn't left the ball park before he received a wire from Sisler which read, "Congratulations. I'm glad a real hitter broke it. Keep going." . . . One part of Sisler's mark, however, Joe didn't even nudge. Sisler hit .454 for the length of his string. DiMaggio tapped .377 for the same number of games. Bullet Joe Bush of the Yanks finally stopped Sisler, and old-timers remember that his hitting fell off sharply the next year. Trouble with his eyes ended Sisler's career . . . Today he is the owner of a successful sporting goods store in St. Louis and has been one of the major factors in the tremendous growth of softball. Sisler was originally a diamond star with the University of Michigan and was so brilliant as a collegian that every scout agreed he couldn't miss. He didn't.

Wonder What Interview Did

Speaking of fighters, one wonders what the interview accredited to Jack Dempsey at the time Schmeling was reported killed in action did for that particular member of the German command. Schmeling, according to Dempsey, who interpolated, "and you know I knew him pretty well," confided that he hated the Nazis and all they stood for, but that he was pretending to be one of them for the sake of his wife and her career. Schmeling's marriage took the sports writers as completely by surprise as did the Louis nuptials a couple of hours before the Louis fight with Baer.

Baseball Rights Of the Past

While stories of revolution were being bruited about concerning the Boston Braves, it seems they had, if not revolution, at least actual civil war on the Brooklyn team culminating in a free-for-all fight in the clubhouse with four rugged gentlemen involved, one of whom really got hurt. The catcher, Blimp Phelps, later fired, was one of the belligerents, although, according to the stories, he didn't start the shindig . . . Some of the lushes of the Red Sox fell to belting the bottle while the manager was out of sight, and a fight started in a saloon that all but wrecked several of the members. It must have been a beaut while it lasted. . . . Of course, ball clubs don't want players such as that and don't keep them any longer than they must. Nova's Love Story

While the family end of the Louis story seems to be breaking apart, the nuptial idyll of Lou Nova, his next opponent, seems to be going happily along. Nova, with his pretty wife and their young daughter, Hertha, is vacationing in the vicinity of Jackman, Me., before getting down to the grim business of training for a championship effort. . . . There's a real movie love story if somebody wants to go after it. Nova's wife was the daughter of his professor in college, and Nova, an athletic scholarship athlete, was farmed out to the professional household as a sort of kitchen accommodator by the athletic department. The professor's pretty daughter was the toast of the campus and as popular as all get-out. But while the better heeled students rolled up in their cars asking her for so many dates she couldn't have filled 'em if she'd been quintuplets, she lost her heart to the earnest young student conscientiously bathing china in the kitchen.

Welfare Board Rift Revealed Over Director

Criticism over the selection of a new welfare director flared in the open yesterday among members of the Board of Public Welfare.

The criticism came in a "minority report" from A. J. Driscoll, a member of the board, to Chairman Frederick W. McReynolds. Since the resignation last May of Robert E. Bondy, the board has twice nominated Ray L. Huff, penal director, over the objection of the District Commissioners. The Commissioners let it be known that they favored Paul Edwards, now District WPA administrator.

Driscoll, in his letter to the Commissioners, wrote:

"At the time of the first nomination, I went along with the majority of the board despite my personal convictions as heretofore mentioned, feeling that unanimous action would strengthen the board. Since that time, however, I have learned, as have other members of the board, that my own convictions in this matter appear to have been upheld by the District Commissioners.

"There are additional qualifications required for a director which I feel Mr. Huff does no have and which his experience has not necessarily brought to him. I am sure you must recognize that a large proportion of the activities of this board are more remedial than punitive and that wisdom dictates the choice of broad experience along these lines."

Driscoll then criticized McReynolds for failure to cooperate with the Commissioners. He said:

"Cooperation means to me exactly what it indicates, and I am left wondering why this board did not undertake to confer with the Commissioners in the spirit of cooperation on the matter of a possible successor to Mr. Bondy before taking final action.

"In your letter you state, referring to Mr. Huff, 'the promotion would indicate to each employe of the Public Welfare Departments that promotion may be expected when vacancies exist and advancement has been earned.' How, then, do you account for the appointment recently of a person outside of the service as head of one of the institutions of our board and why haven't the recent holders of the office of director of public welfare been drawn from the ranks of the Welfare Department?

"Certainly these actions, past and contemplated, indicate great inconsistency in a policy, which you have stated to the Commissioners, is the one believed to be strictly adhered to by the Board of Public Welfare."

85 WPA Aides Face Dismissal Here by Aug. 1

Eighty-five of 110 administrative staff workers of the District WPA face dismissal by August 1.

The order came under a Federal plan to place the local office under the Maryland WPA director, according to advices given the District Commissioners by R. C. Branion, regional WPA director. It was explained that the dismissal order was made necessary because of a reduction in administrative funds.

Paul Edwards will remain as District administrator for the present, it was said, but after August 1, his position would be in the nature of a district manager under the Baltimore headquarters. Edwards is being considered by the Commissioners as District welfare director.

The District is now a part of Region 2, including New York, New Jersey, Delaware and Maryland.

Efforts are now being made to transfer the workers facing dismissal in other Federal agencies. Some may be sent to the Baltimore office.

The District last month received orders to cut its force of project workers from 8,000 to 4,500.

Copyright by New York Times

Mineola, Long Island, July 10.—Six pistols, nine rifles, one shotgun, 100,000 cartridges and a quantity of other ammunition, all presumably for use in "target shooting," was seized yesterday by Nassau County police at the Merrick, Long Island, home of Everett Minster Roeder, one of 29 persons who were arrested over the weekend of June 29 by the Federal Bureau of Investigation and charged with being agents of a foreign government.

The seizure was made under the direction of Inspector Harold R. King. Lieut. Albert V. Pitt, head of the Nassau Police Safety Bureau, and Detective John McIntosh, following cancellation yesterday of town and State permits for possession of the powder and the cartridge-filling machine.

Lieut. Pitt revealed the permits were issued to Roeder, an American-born citizen, less than a year ago and while he presumably was acting as charged by the FBI.

Burton to Speak At Fort Stevens Rites Tonight

Senator Harold H. Burton (Republican), of Ohio, will be principal speaker tonight at 6:30 at exercises commemorating the Battle of Fort Stevens, to be held at the fort grounds, Thirteenth and Quackenbos Streets Northwest.

The celebration, sponsored annually by the Ladies of the Grand Army of the Republic, marks the battle in defense of Washington against the Confederate army under Gen. Jubal Early.

The program will include the singing of the "Battle Hymn of the Republic" by Justin Lawrie. The Fort Stevens Post Fife and Drum Corps, American Legion, will also participate.

Mrs. Bess Stiles Pearce, president, will place a wreath, given by Oldroyd Circle No. 5, on a bronze plaque showing President Lincoln facing the Confederate fortifications.

Henderson To Urge Rent Control Today

Leon Henderson, Federal Price Administrator will go before the District Defense Subcommittee in the House today to present in person his arguments for Federal control of Washington rents.

Backbone of his argument will be statistics unearthed in a Bureau of Labor Statistics survey of housing and rents among 9,000 Government workers. While details of the survey are being carefully guarded, the fact has been published that it shows Washington living costs to be the highest in the Nation with rents the major reason.

Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee, announced that the hearing will start at 10 a. m. in the Labor Committee room in the old House Office Building.

Prepared by OPACS

The bill for which Henderson will be a witness was prepared by experts in the Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply. It would empower President Roosevelt to name an administrator to control rent levels and housing standards in the District.

It was written by Sidney Simpson with the assistance of Carl Borders, OPACS rent expert. Both Simpson and Borders may accompany Henderson to the hearing, as may Miss Aryness Joy, chief of the price and cost-of-living branch of the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Miss Joy had charge of the rent survey, conducted by means of questionnaires distributed among "typical" workers.

War Veterans Ask Blacklist Of Saboteurs

Veterans of the Third Division, A. E. F., here at the Willard Hotel in twenty-second annual convention, will ask the Government to expose the names of all known subversive individuals so that these can be turned out of public and private employment.

The former soldiers said their resolution would request that the names of such individuals be made known to war veterans' groups so that they, in turn, might ask both the Government and private employers to discharge the disloyal workers and employ in their stead loyal Americans.

The convention, to continue through tomorrow evening, will hold its first business meeting at 10 a. m. today, then adjourn at 1 p. m. to Arlington Cemetery where a wreath, in design of the Division insignia, will be placed on the Unknown Soldier's Tomb by Mrs. Joanna M. Thorpe, of Irvine, Ky. Her son, Edward Thorp, member of Company B, Seventh Infantry, was killed in action July 15, 1918.

A banquet at 8 p. m. Saturday will conclude the reunion. Banquet entertainers will include Nancy Hanck, Rita Johnson, Datha Dearing, Margaret Leggett, Shirlee Baker and Fern Almquist. Col. George B. DuBois, former commanding officer, Sixth Engineer Train, is chairman of the reunion committee. William A. Shomaker, who served with the Seventy-sixth Field Artillery, is the committee secretary.

The division's casualties in the war were 3,140 killed and 13,500 wounded.

Hecht Co. to Give Vacation Checks To 16 in Uniform

Sixteen former Hecht Company employes now in uniform will receive their customary vacation checks this week, it was announced yesterday by Charles B. Dulcan, sr., vice president and general manager, in line with the store's new policy to furnish vacation funds to all men going into the armed services.

"We believe the boys are entitled to their vacation money, just as though they had continued at their work," said Dulcan, "and checks will be sent to every man at camp who enters the service, and who would customarily be entitled to vacation time or money."

Those employes who will receive their vacation bonuses this week are: Lieut. Walter Talkes; Lieut. Harry Carter; Corpl. Edward Foreman; Private Morris Wollen; Lieut. Alton Brown; Private Melvin Ceppos; Private Moe Kinland; Private Edward Glinker; Private Gaspard Segreti; Private James Furman; Private Michael DiBella; Private Alexander Parker; Private Harry Frack; Seaman George Brooke; Edward Michaelis and Private Ruben Silverman.

District to Turn Rowdy Soldiers Over to M. P.

Soldiers arrested here on minor charges such as drunkenness and disorderly conduct will be turned over to military police today, and afterward at a station to be set up in the new service men's recreational center at the west end of Memorial Bridge, Police Chief Brown announced yesterday.

Maj. Brown ordered police to communicate with Capt. James W. Keith, commanding officer of the M. P. Station in all such cases. He said the soldiers would be taken to the M. P. post in an Army conveyance.

Heretofore soldiers have been jailed and heard in Police Court, the same as civilians. Now the Army will mete out their punishment, which will probably be more severe than that of civilian courts.

Salem, Oreg., July 10 (AP).—Explosion of a miniature, artificial volcano caused injuries which proved fatal last night to Valdean Burk, 21, Oregon College of Education student.

Her abdomen was pierced by metal fragments. The miniature volcano blew up when the eruption experiment was attempted July 2. Homer Dodds, science instructor, said previous demonstrations had been conducted without accident.

Blueberries Have Place In Hearts of Gourmets

By Martha Ellyn

The Post Food Editor

THE BLUEBERRY is a fruit that has both a past and a future. The early New England settlers cherished this berry because they could go out into their natural surroundings and pick it for food. Now, according to Dr. George M. Darrow, plant scientist, U. S. Department of Agriculture, the blueberry has a promising economic future.

With most of the blueberries that are sold today being gathered in the wild, the crop is in the $10,000,000 class, says Dr. Darrow. And he thinks there is no telling what proportions it will reach as more and more of the improved varieties are planted. New England fiction relates how the Maine settlers gathered the blueberries. The "blueberry barrens" of Maine cover an area of about 150,000 acres. But the gathering of these berries is also an important industry in Michigan, Minnesota, New Jersey, Florida and Alabama.

Martha Ellyn

Research Progresses

Since 1906 the United States Department of Agriculture has been working for better blueberries. From this research, and that of cooperating State experiment stations, have come 11 of the 12 named varieties that are cultivated today. Some of the cultivated berries are as much as three times the size of the wild ones.

According to the Department of Agriculture, you can tell a blueberry from a huckleberry by the seeds. Cut a huckleberry through the center and you will see ten large seeds in a ring. Look closely at one of these seeds and you will see that it looks like a tiny peach pit and has a bony shell. A blueberry has many seeds, but they are so tiny and soft that the berry seems almost seedless.

The food value of these berries is also one reason for enjoying them, as they are a source of vitamins. When selecting this fruit be sure the berries are plump, fresh, clean and full-colored. They should also be absolutely free of moisture and of uniform size. They should be kept in the refrigerator on a shallow tray or dish, covered lightly with waxed paper, and then washed just as they are used.

Sing Berry's Praises

Many prominent Washingtonians from the blueberry regions still cling to their fondness for this flavorsome fruit. Statesmen, career women, homemakers and wives of Congressmen from States where the blueberry grows luxuriously, all sang the berry's praise when The Washington Post Food Editor inquired about the ways they used the fruit back home. The following recipes are the ones those interviewed gave for serving these berries in traditional ways.

Mrs. Margaret Chase Smith, Congresswoman from Skoqhegan, Me., where the blueberry grows copiously, says that they are on her preferred food list. Ever since a child she has been surrounded by blueberry patches at her Maine farm home. She thinks that these luscious berries go to making many a flavorsome dish, but she especially likes them in a blueberry sugar cake. Here is her recipe for the cake:

Mrs. Smith

Blueberry Sugar Cake—Break into a cup, 1 egg. Fill cup with sweet cream. Pour into a bowl and add 1 cup sugar, ½ teaspoon soda, 1 teaspoon cream tartar, pinch of salt, 1 teaspoon vanilla extract and 1½ cups cake flour. Beat thoroughly. Pour 1 cup floured blueberries into the batter. Bake in a 10-inch square cake pan at 350 degrees about 45 minutes. Just before finished baking, take from oven and sprinkle with granulated sugar; return to oven for about 1 minute to allow the sugar to melt well. If sour cream is used to make the cake, omit the cream of tartar.

Mrs. Esther Van Wagoner Tufty, Washington News correspondent and president of the National Women's Press Club, also belongs to a "blueberry State"—Michigan. Back in her home town of Pontiac, Mich., Mrs. Tufty says she has picked many a pail of blueberries in the swamps. Although this career woman is busy as a bee gathering news, she says she always has time to bake a blueberry pie. According to Mrs. Tufty, Michigan is a "pie country" and not a "cobbler country" when it comes to utilizing the blueberries. Mrs. Tufty takes her blueberry pie with ice cream whenever possible. Here is her pie recipe:

Mrs. Tufty

Blueberry Pie—Mix 1 quart blueberries with 1 cup sugar, 4 tablespoons flour, ⅛ teaspoon salt and the juice of 1 lemon. Pour into pastry-lined pie pan and cover with top crust. Bake in a hot oven, 450 degrees, about 10 minutes; reduce heat to moderate, 375 degrees, about 30 minutes. Makes one 10-inch pie.

Surrounded By Blueberries

Mrs. William Pittenger, wife of Representative Pittenger of Duluth, Minn., has been surrounded by blueberries all her life. Maine born, she became acquainted with these berries in childhood. When she married and lived in Minnesota, she was still in berry territory. Mrs. Pittenger thinks the true flavor of this berry is best available in the raw state. Next, she likes them in muffins. Her young daughter, who attends the Fanny Bailey Alcott Girl Scout Camp at Eveleph, Minn., says that the scouts all like blueberries. Here is Mrs. Pittenger's way of making blueberry muffins:

Mrs. Pittenger

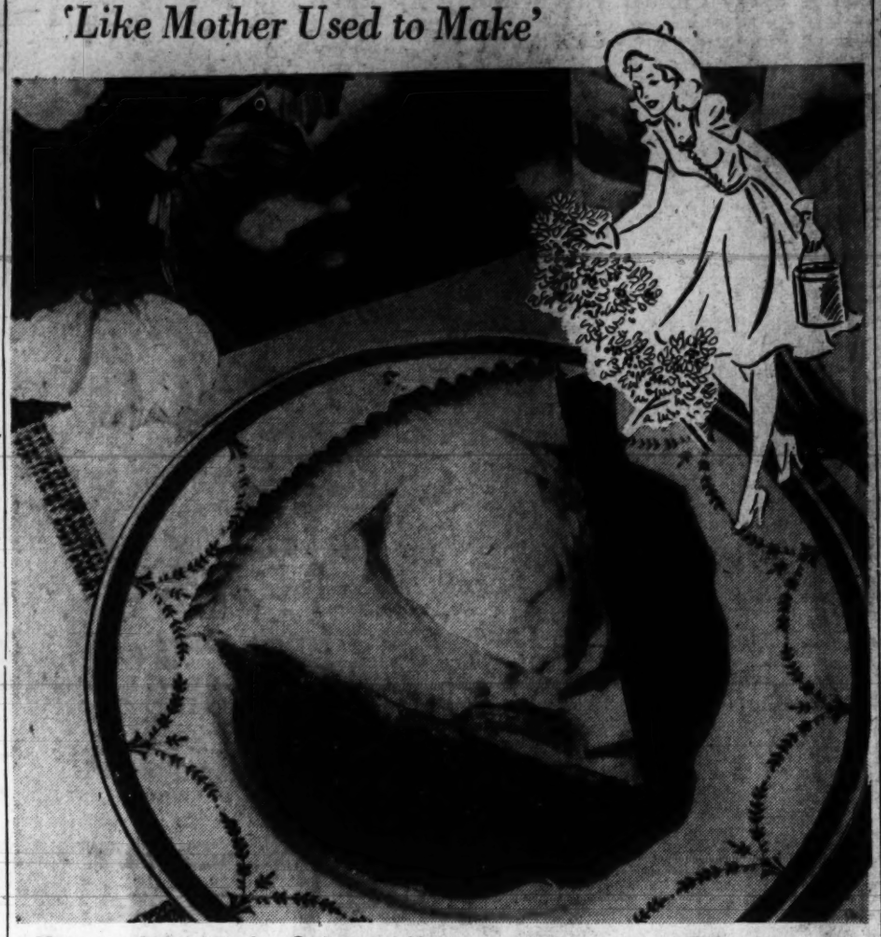
Blueberry Muffins—Sift 2 cups flour with ½ teaspoon salt, 4 teaspoons baking powder, 2 tablespoons sugar and add ¾ cup fresh blueberries. Add 1 cup milk and 1 beaten egg all at once, then immediately add 2 tablespoons melted and cooled shortening and stir until ingredients are blended, but not smooth. Fill greased muffin tins two-thirds full and bake in a hot oven, 400 degrees, about 25 minutes. Makes 12 muffins.

Mrs. Basil Manly, a native Californian is still another blueberry fan (although she is really from a huckleberry State). She makes a cake she thinks is in the blue ribbon class. This is her recipe:

Mrs. Manly

Blueberry Roll—Make a rich shortcake dough and roll in a rectangle ½ inch thick. Brush with 1 tablespoon butter, sprinkle with rich blueberry 2 tablespoons sugar and cinnamon and spread with 1 cup blueberries. Roll like jelly roll and cut into 9 slices. Blend 2 tablespoons flour with ¼ cup sugar; add another cup of blueberries and cook over low heat until thick, stirring constantly. Add 2 teaspoons lemon juice and pour into greased 8 by 8 by 2 inch pan. Cover with rolls and bake in hot oven 425 degrees about 20 minutes. Serve hot with cream. Serves 9.

'Like Mother Used to Make'



Many a cook can trace her fondness for blueberry pie back to her childhood days when with a big sun hat atop her head and a tin pail on her arm she went out to gather these luscious berries. Pictured here is a blueberry pie topped with ice cream. These two foods seem to have as much an affinity for each other as does salt and pepper

"THE WAY WE WASH OUR CLOTHES," by Eleanor Ahern includes valuable information that every housekeeper should have for reference. Not only does the author give directions for general washing of clothes, but takes up the various factors contributing to successful laundering in chapters on Water, Soaps and Other Washing Agents, Fibers and Fabrics, Stain Removal, Laundry Equipment and Planning. In the chapter, Laundering Fine Fabrics, the author tells why certain types of garments, such as silk and wool hose, silk and lace-trimmed underthings, sweaters, better dresses, should be kept separate from the weekly wash.

In the chapter on Laundry Equipment and Planning, the necessary equipment is discussed as well as the advantageous placing of the equipment. Under the chapter, the Laundry Clinic, cases that arise in any household over the care of clothing are given.

The publishers are M. Barrows & Co., Inc. The price is $2.

Chinese Motifs Rule Many Phases Of American Life

The influence of China on the life of every American is far more than a matter of politics. For we live with Chinese ideas surrounding us. And that's true, even when we have no actual Chinese wares in our homes . . . the entire porcelain industry of Europe—and indirectly of America—was developed in an effort to imitate Chinese percelain and to this day Chinese motifs are important, often predominant, in their design.

The very words, porcelain and china, come out of the China trade . . . the word porcelain was first used by the Portuguese traders. They noted the resemblance of this fine fragile ware to the translucent shells they used as currency and called "porzella" which meant "little pigs" because of their delicate pink color. The word china was applied to this ware by the English because of its origin.

The cupboard in most every American home of 100 years ago had pieces of blue and white Nanking ware on its shelves and often the home within range of the Atlantic seacoast had unusual Chinese furniture or curiosities. The vogue for china plates, cups and delicate figurines became such a craze in the eighteenth century that most of the leading writers of the time took note of it. Addison mentions the tears that the ladies of the day shed when a treasured piece was broken. Said he: "There is likewise another inconvenience in this female passion for china, namely, that it administers to them great matter of wrath and sorrow. How much anger and affliction are produced daily . . . by the breach of this frail furniture . . . I would advise them to forbear dealing in these perishable commodities till such time as they are philisophers enough to keep their temper at the fall of a teapot or china cup."

Plastic Container For Household Use Adds Gay Color Note

The kitchen and the bath room are two spots in the house that need daily shining. And it saves many steps for the one keeping things in order if the cleaning essentials are immediately at hand. If the bathtub and lavatory need a bit of cleaning, there is no need to dash out of the kitchen to get the cleaner.

Manufacturers are now making, and local merchants are offering, can holders made of handsome, durable, gleaming plastic material that fits right over the regular can. And you can have a choice of colors to match the kitchen or bathroom decorative scheme—Chinese red, antique ivory, seafoam green and pastel blue.

The bottom of the holder is rubber so there can be no rust rings, from the can, and it won't slip or skid even on wet surfaces. Here is a household item that is as useful as it is attractive.

Cleanup Gadgets Needed in Travel

One of the wisest investments a girl can make before starting on a traveling vacation is a waterproof bag to hold cleanliness necessities and cosmetics. If the vacation is to be spent on a hiking trip or automobile trip, there will be many occasions when a handy gadget that holds soap, wash cloth, a small towel, nail brush, comb, cold cream, talcum and make-up will save the day.

There are many types of kits that can be bought at small cost. Some of them have stitched inner compartments to hold the individual items snugly. Some are tiny zippered, leather cases with a mirror set into the top cover. Others are flat envelopes, made of sturdy cloth. The army type of toilet kit, which is made of khaki cloth and can be rolled up and tied with attached strings, may be old-fashioned but it is very serviceable.

Beds Modernized

Increased housing demands resulting from the national defense production program have stimulated sales of bedspring-on-legs beds, according to manufacturers. Economy has been the principal factor, for the conventional bedstead is eliminated. The demand has been divided between boxsprings with legs attached and a framework upon which either a boxspring or an open coil spring can be placed.

Peanut Butter An Ideal Filling For Sandwiches

Lunch time in summer is an easy one for the cook. A tossed vegetable salad, a fruit salad—both full of health-giving vitamins—a nutritious sandwich and a beverage, either hot or cold, can be the adequate answer.

Looking about for a sandwich filling, there is nothing more nutrious and flavorsome than peanut butter. This food has a way of blending with other foods to produce appeizing fillings. You need not take two pieces of bread and spread it with peanut butter, for there are many delicious variances. Following are suggestions for using peanut butter in combination with other ingredients:

Peanut Butter-Anchovy Butter—Rub the yolks of 4 hard-cooked eggs to a smooth paste with 4 boned anchovies, ½ cup butter and paprika to taste.

Peanut Butter, Fig and Raisin—Wash ¼ cup raisins and ¼ cup figs and put through a food chopper. Add ½ teaspoon salt, ½ cup peanut butter, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, 2 tablespoons light corn syrup and mix well.

Peanut Butter and Banana—Mix ½ cup peanut butter with ¼ cup cream or hot water until it is smooth and light in color. Combine with ½ cup banana pulp or sliced bananas and a little lemon juice.

Peanut Butter-Onion—Beat 1 cup peanut butter, add ¼ cup mayonnaise and spread on slices of bread. Slice small Bermuda or Spanish onion in very thin slices and put a layer of these over mixture on bread.

Squash Adds Spice of Variety And Color to Summer Menus

"It's a big party—when the squash family gets together for a summer reunion at the market. A botanist would call these summer squashes "pumpkins"—but for cooking purposes they go by the name of "squash" according to Aunt Sammy of the Bureau of Home Economics, United States Department of Agriculture, who in private life is Mrs. Joseph U. Douglas.

Mrs. Douglas

Aunt Sammy also gives the following information about squash which will be of interest to Washington cooks who want to vary the vegetables on the menu:

"The cymling is one of the first to appear. It's small and flat with scallops around the edge. When young the rind is soft and smooth and it is pale green, yellow, or white in color. Often it's called "scallop" or "pattypan" because of its flat, scalloped shape.

"Then there are the yellow summer squashes—crook-neck and straight-neck, giant and dwarf. The old summer crook-neck squash has a rough skin and crooked neck. Through careful breeding plant scientists have straightened the neck so the squash will pack better in crates for shipping.

Source of Vitamin A

"Vegetable marrows are another type of squash—well known in Europe, but not so familiar in America. They are shaped like a stretched out egg, and are green or creamy in color. One of the best known is the Zucchini, a native of Italy, but it now flourishes in the United States. The Zucchini is long and slender, somewhat like a cucumber except for its smooth, glossy skin.

"All these squashes furnish some vitamins, but the yellow-fleshed ones rank highest with the nutritionists. The yellow color of the flesh is a sign that the squashes are a rich source of Vitamin A.

"Food shoppers often overlook squashes, in spite of the bright colors that beckon to the adventurous cook. But marketing specialists say it's just a matter of getting acquainted. Each of the different summer squashes has its own mild flavor.

"If you 'pick' your squashes at the market, try to get those that are heavy for their size and fresh-looking. Summer squashes are usually cooked without paring, so be sure the rind is soft and free from marks or bruises.

"You can cook squashes by any of the standard methods used for other vegetables. Boiling is one of the simplest. Wash the rind thoroughly and cut the squash into small pieces. Then drop into lightly salted, boiling water. But remember that summer squashes are so juicy that they need only a little water to keep from scorching. Simmer about 15 minutes, or until the squash is tender. Squash is one of the vegetables that needs plenty of butter or other fat, besides salt and pepper for seasoning.

You Can Pan it, Too

"'Panning' is another easy way to cook squash. Have the squash washed and cut in small pieces, leaving the rind on unless it is very tough. Use a covered pan with a little fat added, but no water. Cook at moderate heat for 10 or 15 minutes. Then take off the cover and cook for a few minutes longer to let the liquid evaporate.

"Squash fried golden brown and crisp is another good version of this summer vegetable. Wash the squash and cut it in thin, even slices. Sprinkle the slices with salt and a little flour, then fry in shallow fat. Or, dip in batter and fry in deep fat.

"As a scalloped dish, squash is hard to beat. And it's a good way to use left-over squash—by itself, or with other vegetables. Or you can use fresh squash with tomatoes in a scalloped dish. Start by cooking chopped onion, green pepper, and other seasonings, in a little fat. Then add the tomatoes, and finally thhe squash. Cook for a short time on top of the stove, and finish in a moderate oven.

"For a fancy dinner, capitalize on the scalloped shape of cymlings and serve them baked in the shell. Scoop out the center, chop this pulp and mix it with tomato and seasonings. Boil the cymling shell a few minutes, then pack in the stuffing and top with buttered breadcrumbs. Bake in a moderate oven until brown on top."

Change of Clothes Saves Laundry

If you want to make the wash easier this summer, wear more underwear. It sounds like a paradox, but the experts have figured it out.

The garments worn next to the skin are the ones that absorb most of the perspiration. If undergarments are discarded during summer weather, this means that the outer clothing has to take up the moisture, becoming limply damp in short order and attracting soil which quickly becomes ingrained. Thus, instead of having lightly soiled and readily laundered underwear to deal with in the wash, the housewife finds she has a larger supply of deeply soiled and bulkier outer garments to cleanse. If the outer garments do not happen to be of the washable variety she has a real cleansing problem on her hands.

Masculine and feminine underwear for all ages is so brief and light these days that it adds nothing to summer warmth. In fact, underclothes actually add to personal comfort since they keep the dress, blouse, or shirt from clinging moistly to the body.

Multitude of Stains Removed by Cleaner

Minor catastrophes are always coming into the household. Often times when the accident is a stain on clothing or household linens the remedy can be effected in the home.

Bleaching fluids, or chlorine bleaches as they are sometimes called, may be used with safety on white cotton, linens and rayons. If used carefully they may be used successfully on colored fabrics too.

Household bleaches of the chlorine type may be found in stores, and the instructions for using these agents are included on the package. Use a reliable bleach and there will be no dingy dish towels, bed and table linens, kerchiefs and the like.

Hot-Weather Delight

A peeled cantaloupe filled with tomato aspic and frosted with cream cheese is another hot weather delight that is easy to prepare and easier to eat.

Light, Casual Summer Clothes Now Call for Natural and Deft Lipstick Effects

Mildred Coles, Hollywood star, shows how to apply mouth make-up that doesn't look artificial. To get a clean outline and remove traces of former lipstick, she dips a swab in skin tonic and cleans mouth.

To guard against a ragged edge and to keep the lipstick from running or smearing, Mildred draws in the mouth outline with a lipstick pencil. The pencil is sharp pointed to permit accurate and fine drawing. It does not crash with lipstick color.

Next step is to apply lipstick to a fine brush. Using the brush, she runs it well back into the corners of the mouth as indicated in photograph. With care she fills in outline of mouth with the small lipstick brush.

Leaving the lipstick to set a few minutes, Miss Coles then blots off the excess by biting on a piece of cleansing tissue, and looks at the impression on tissue to see if it's well shaped. If perfect she forgets it.

By Carolyn Abbott.

It is estimated that not more than three women out of ten apply lipstick deftly. They smear it on quickly or with amateurish strokes. Besides looking like painted dolls or haggard old women, they often leave table linen, silver, cocktail glasses and cigarettes streaked with red. Besides being completely deglamorizing, this spectacle is distasteful to a fastidious escort.

All the Hollywood stars have mastered the art of applying lipstick so that it stays put and looks natural. Study their method as shown in the series of pictures illustrated here. Try it at home before the mirror and keep practicing until you have mastered their technique.

In general, only the very young can use an extremely dark lipstick successfully. Dark, dull-colored lipsticks are aging for they make the mouth look hard, bitter and discontented. After 20, stick to the medium or bright tones of lipstick. Choose one that complements your natural coloring.

Homemaker Should Buy Proper Foods to Aid Family's Health

By Ida Jean Kain

THE HOME MAKER is not only willing to cooperate with Uncle Sam on this national nutrition problem, but is eager to. Nothing would please her more than to give her family the foods that promote health. All she wants to know is how to go about it.

There is no surer way of improving the family dietary than by making the foods which consistently comprise a large part of the menus furnish their rightful share of the protective elements. For example, every bit of flour that is used should be of the new enriched variety so that biscuits, rolls, hotcakes and shortcakes furnish some protection.

When you buy bread, insist on either 100 per cent whole grain bread or the new enriched type. Examine the label to see what you are getting. Some of the dark breads are nothing more than plain white flour with a little bran mixed in. Every home maker should demand the 100 per cent whole wheat bread, or bread which has been enriched. The loaves are all about the same price as the inferior brands—you buy health or just plain starch for the same money.

New Yeast on Market

It might interest you to know that there is a new yeast on the market. This yeast has been fortified with Vitamin B1, nicotinic acid and iron, and whenever yeast is used, your family should get the benefit of this enrichment. It's the same price.

And what about breakfast cereals? Do you purchase the whole grain variety? In both the ready-to-eat and the uncooked brands you can get those which furnish minerals and vitamins, so why buy those that only furnish starch?

You couldn't spend your food money for anything better than milk. It contributes more to the diet than any other single food. It might be a smart stroke of economy to step up your milk bill and cut down somewhere else. There should be a pint of milk for each adult and at least three glasses for each child. For those who balk at drinking their milk, prepare soups, sauces and custards so they do get it in disguise. Cheese, too, is an item that should appear frequently on your menus for it is an excellent source of calcium, protein and Vitamin A.

Vegetables Needed

How many green and yellow vegetables do you give your family? One or the other should be on the menu every day. In addition, there should be one other vegetable and potatoes. Fresh fruits are equally important and each member of the family should have two servings daily, one of them a citrus fruit such as ornges or grapefruit or tomatoes, for Vitamin C. Each person should have three to four eggs each week. Those used in cooking can be counted.

It is up to the home maker—and I believe she realizes her responsibility as never before—to plan meals that will promote the health of her family. Let's work together on it. If you have any questions or suggestions, send them along and I'll do my best to help.

Some Decorate Their Homes Without Goal

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

BLIND MAN'S BUFF is the game most of us play when we start on a decorating jag. We don't know where we're going. So maybe the first bit of advice about refurbishing should be to sit down and figure out what we're striving for in our decoration. A peaceful haven to flee to from the harassing world outside our door . . . a genial place for a bustling, growing family . . . a smart setting for parties and sociability . . . a quiet retreat for study or hobby . . . an exciting background for exciting people. We must make up our minds before we start. Then we won't be going at our decorating blindly.

Mrs. D. H. E. writes to say that here is a family of tall people who enjoy home evenings with their books, their phonographs, their records. The question now before the house is the selection of a new sofa and some new upholstered chairs. The room has beige walls and a beige rug, walnut furniture that's more William and Mary than anything else. They can get new draperies and want to achieve something interesting in this room where they spend so much time.

First of all, get an extra long sofa and big chairs to fit the family . . . look for big frames rather than fat stuffing. Select a big-scale floral cretonne on beige ground for draperies and have one chair in this material. A pair of wing chairs would be nice in a dark green tweedish material. For the sofa you might have a slip cover of a plain beige fabric, with the outside arms of the flowered cretonne and extra small cushions of this same flowered design. Use dark green for accent and accessories.

Mrs. J. P. H. writes that they are not young people just starting out . . . in fact they expect to retire before very long. And so the new living room rug they buy now will probably be their last expensive one. The old Sarouk rug that has been doing service in the living room shows wear in the center, so they are putting that in the dining room. They don't like carpeting to the baseboards, prefering a floor border. They are considering an American made rug of Oriental design, but wonder if that's a good buy and would be the choice of people of good taste.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Village Couple Is Involved in 40-Odd 'Feuds' As Result of Years of Spiteful Gossip; Friend Asks How to Teach Them Value of Kindliness

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have a friend whom I have known since girlhood, and her loyalty to me I have never had reason to question. However, during the many years I have known her, both she and her husband have not only gossiped outrageously, but have made it an invariable rule to declare open warfare upon anyone whom they happen to disapprove. As a result, today in their middle age, they have between 40 and 50 "feuds" on their hands, and are not "speaking to" three-fourths of the population in the town where we all live.

There is scarcely a waking moment when they aren't on the offensive against somebody,—and this means a merciless verbal attack upon the latter, who, in due time, and at the first opportunity, receives "the cut direct" from them, after having been already torn limb from limb (figuratively speaking) by the two of them. To them, it is, apparently, a positive joy to have a chance to administer a vigorous kick to someone who is down, or whom they consider to be temporarily at a social disadvantage, and therefore in a position to be kicked.

I consider such backbiting, intolerance and spitefulness to be evidence of their own "inferiority feelings." I believe they are unconsciously trying to boost themselves in knocking others; and that it gives them a feeling of superiority to observe misfortunes in the lives of others (such as they have been spared), and to be able to say: "So-and-so's husband is a drunkard and unfaithful to her; and their children are all mentally deficient, show criminal tendencies, etc., etc.," (as the case may be.)

I would like to know if there is anything I can do to remedy their attitude, or to make them a little more kindly toward others. You may wonder why I am concerned about them. It is because they have proven, in many ways, their attachment to me; and I feel it would not be very admirable for me to shun them now, just because they have so many enemies as a result of their endless gossiping. Please advise me.

CHARITY.

Kindliness Comes Of Living Bravely

DEAR CHARITY: The acquisition of true humility (i. e., "state of being humble in spirit, free from pride and arrogance"), is perhaps the only basic remedy for the unfortunate universal tendency of human beings to pass scathing judgment upon each other's shortcomings. And I doubt that the seeds of this beneficent quality can be sowed in the scandal-monger's heart by well-meaning lecture or exhortation. It is a temperate attitude toward people, a reflection of an inter-personal understanding—finding expression in deferential manners and gracious utterances—which comes from living deeply, courageously, aspiringly and with maximum fidelity to thoughtful, enlightened men's instinctual conviction that "the golden mean" of human behavior supports the freest possible play of personality that can be enjoyed, without trampling the rights and feelings of other beings.

And the trouble with your generally detested friends is that they are life-starved, and therefore savagely resentful of whomever they think may be tasting life deeply, however disastrously. They are the wretched victims of personality-repressiveness. Their violent quarrel with nearly everyone in their environment is a symbolic rendition of their sullen quarrel with Life itself—as they have elected to experience it.

So far as their interior life is concerned, no doubt they drag numbly and glumly through a procession of joyless days, manacled, fettered and straitjacketed by every flagellating variety of inhibition and repression. And I daresay their most vehement denunciations of others are directed at those who seem least burdened, in their joustings with life, by that cumbersome, blistering armor against the Devil and his works, under which they two grope along,—embattled, resentful and afraid.

Their philosophy of righteous conduct, whatever it may be, is to them a hair shirt. And I think the loud outcries of shocked horror they emit, the shaking finger of scorn they point, and the upstage attitude they adopt, when a fellow townsman (or woman) shows to less than moral perfection, are all intended (quite unconsciously) as both personal and public justification of their "don't-come-near-me" reaction to life in its more meaningful, soul-testing aspects.

By pointing out, and reviling against, all who suffer some reversals or bear some scars as a result of trying to explore the mysteries and potentialities of life, they are, in a sense, trying to reassure themselves that, after all, their way is best. "See!" they shriek (in effect). "See what happened to him. And serves him right. The fool. The scoundrel. The wicked sinner." And then, lest anybody overlook his mistake or the penalty attached,—and thus fail to perceive that, by contrast, their barren existence seems the safer, more secure, Heaven-blest way,—they give him "the cut direct;" which is as near as they can come to pillorying him.

Or one might explain their performance another way, by saying that their venomously expressed disapproval of most people is a volcanic eruption and outpouring of their deep distaste for themselves. Persons who are on really good terms with themselves, whose reactions to life have roots in valid self-esteem, and who behave with integrity, which is to say, in line with their own feelings, yet with due regard for society's opinion, usually have an amiable attitude toward the world in general. It is the frustrated neurotic, churning with violent, unresolved, unacknowledged, unexplored conflict between his fears and desires, who detests himself and reviles all his eye rests on.

Or, as David Starr Jordan wrote, more than 40 years ago, "mental dyspeptics" are invariably persons with not enough to do to keep their minds exercised and healthy. Thus, if by Providential intervention, your friends could be caught up into a rushing stream of activity that would leave them no time to take inventory of their neighbors or stew in the juices of idleness,—but, rather, would tax their energy and ingenuity to the limit, every day, it is likely they would soon find themselves enjoying life so keenly that they wouldn't give a hang what others were doing.

However, as I have already said, it is doubtful whether you can say the word that will show them the light—and the way to redemption from community ostracism. But if you have the courage to try, I suggest you offer assistance by indirection, in book form. Take your choice of the following: "The Sermon on the Mount," by Emmet Fox; "The Meaning of Culture," by John Cowper Powys; "The Conduct of Life," by Ralph Waldo Emerson, and "The Self You Have to Live With," by Winfred Rhoades.

Learn to Play A Guitar At Parties

MUSIC and good times just naturally go together! That's why teaching yourself to play the guitar is such a grand way to guard against flops in your social life this Summer.

You really can teach yourself! Simple diagrams and directions show you how to play solos. And, accompanying a song, you just play chords this easy way.

On popular music you'll find the guitar accompaniment is indicated with diagrams.

These diagrams are easy to read (you don't have to know a note of music) because each vertical line pictures a string of your guitar and each horizontal line a fret or metal bar crossing the fingerboard.

Wherever you see dots in your diagram, at the same spots on your guitar fingerboard press the fingers of your left hand. At the same time your right hand, with a pick, plucks these strings over the sound hole, also the strings marked "O."

Simple, as you see when you try the chord we've shown, one played with "She'll Be Comin' Round the Mountain." The numbers above the diagram show fingers to use.

How to fit chords to a song and how to play solos, too, are explained in our 24-page instruction book, Teach Yourself to Play the Guitar. It includes rudiments of music, table of chords, 4 favorite tunes arranged as solos.

Send 15c in coin for our instruction book, Teach Yourself to Play the Guitar, to the NEW YORK OFFICE of The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your Name, Address and the Name of instruction book.

How Not to Punish

Experts on child psychology frown on the practice of sending children to bed as a punishment. Bed, they point out, should be a place of rest and revival of energy, and sending a child to bed as a penalty for disobedience will prejudice him against going to bed at the proper time. Forcing a child to sleep on an uncomfortable bed, with wornout mattress or springs, will have a similar effect.

Today's Social Notes

(From the Truthtown Torch.)

Mrs. Parvenu Popinjay and Mrs. Roswell Clymer, two of Truthtown's leading social feudists, will continue to fight out their battle for social supremacy this summer at Clamport. Mrs. Popinjay had intended to go to California, but on learning that a large number of admirals and other naval officers connected with the Atlantic fleet had rented cottages at Clamport, she immediately took over Eyesore, one of the largest and most grotesque of the Clamport villas. Mrs. Clymer, unable to get a villa, has taken over one of the small beach hotels for entertaining purposes.

Mrs. Featherton Daubler, socialite organizer, has just started a new organization—one to provide recreation for idle wives of men in defense service.

"We hope to organize bridge foursomes, riding clubs, and personality classes among these lonely women to keep them occupied while their husbands are away," said Mrs. Daubler. "We also hope to establish a downtown headquarters, possibly with a tearoom and a fortune teller for their convenience."

Reno Trek

Mrs. LeRoy Octavius Yodel (the former Pamela Zinnia) has left for Reno to seek a divorce, the Torch learned last night. Tension has been growing between Mr. and Mrs. Yodel for several months over their dogs. Mrs. Yodel raises pointers and Mr. Yodel specializes in setters.

Also in Reno is Mrs. Ditherton Doolittle 3d (the former Clementine St. Vitus) a bride of June a year ago. Mrs. Doolittle is understood to have fallen in love with young Cavanagh Clipper, Yale croquet champion whom she met at a house party several weeks ago and whom she is expected to marry as soon as she gets her divorce. Her 2-month-old son is with her mother.

Reports of trouble between the Petticord Plunkettes were confirmed yesterday when Mrs. Plunkette left for a Nevada dude ranch. It is understood that Mr. Plunkette, brother of Philander Plunkette who holds the Truthtown marriage and divorce record, has felt an urge to give up business and withdraw from civilization, and hopes soon to start for Tahiti or some similar romantic spot in the South Seas. Mrs. Plunkette has agreed to give him his freedom—in return for $500,000.

The Foolish Virgin

Miss Daphne Piffle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Livingston Beresford Piffle will have to wait now until fall before she can marry Nicholas (Sonny Boy) Preen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Pierrepont Preen.

When completion of the bridal outfit was held up because a shipment of Paris lace failed to arrive, Daffy, as she is known to her intimate friends and enemies, decided to recall the invitations for June 30 and postpone the wedding several months.

"Since Daffy could not get in under the June wire," said Mrs. Piffle yesterday, "there was nothing else for us to do. Of course, nobody is ever married in July or August."

Aid to Democracy

Members of the exclusive Barbecue Beach colony have tightened their rules this summer. All visitors to the beach as well as residents must be passed upon by the social committee before they will be permitted to don bathing suits and frolic in the exclusive waves of the Atlantic at this particular point. Genealogical and financial records of expected visitors must be submitted in advance by their hosts and hostesses.

Good Neighbor Theme Accents the Social Scene

Mrs. Beale Entertains Brazilian Official; Vice President and Mrs. Wallace There

By Hope Ridings Miller

"GOOD NEIGHBORING" with quite a social accent is burgeoning with a record-breaking brace of informal dinners for visitors from south of the Rio Grande.

Last night's calendar, for example, featured a dinner given by Mrs. Truxtun Beale in honor of Senhor Luiz Jardim, an official of the Brazilian Ministry of Education, who arrived here several days ago. A noted author and artist, the distinguished visitor has met his share of top-layer Government officials and diplomats since he arrived in the Capital. And last night, he had a chance to talk at length with Vice President Henry A. Wallace and Mrs. Wallace, who were ranking guests at Mrs. Beale's dinner. The latter took place, of course, at Decatur House, the hostess' historic home on Jackson Place.

Mention of the Wallaces reminds me that the report the Vice President will leave soon for a vacation in Chihuahua, Mexico, seems to be all wrong. That, at least, is the word from his office. But I still wouldn't be surprised if along toward the end of summer he and his wife travel southward and cross the Rio Grande for an extended visit. Their daughter, Jean, who is now a counselor in a camp in New Mexico, might join them in Texas and accompany them to Chihuahua, or wherever else in Mexico they may be going—if they do go, of course.

Senhor Luiz Jardim—to get back to last night's guest of honor at Mrs. Beale's dinner—seems to have an amazingly wide range of interests. He has made a detailed study of colonial architecture and is very much concerned with the preservation of historical monuments, both in his own country and throughout the Western Hemisphere. He has made his name, however, as the writer of a number of best-sellers, including several children's books, which he has illustrated himself, and a novel, "Maria Perigrosa."

Scheduled to arrive in town today is another distinguished South American, Dr. Carlos Concha, former Minister of Foreign Affairs of Peru. He is making the trip to Washington by plane and is on a special mission for his government. He is staying at the Mayflower, and chances are a number of parties will be given in his honor. Dr. Concha was president of the International Conference of American States, which was held in Lima in 1938.

THESE TEXANS do love to fish. Take two of the most important Lone Star Staters in the Government, for example—Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn and Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones. Any time either one can get away from his desk, he's likely to head straight for a favorite fishing spot.

Speaker Rayburn spends almost every weekend at a lake in nearby Maryland, where the bass bite with a regularity that would make Izaac Walton himself sit up and take notice. Most Julys heretofore, the Speaker has done his midsummer fishing on Texas territory, either in Red River or in a creek or lake on his own farm. But in this year of emergency, he has been staying within calling distance of the Capitol, even on weekends.

Just back from a jaunt to Thousand Islands, N. Y., are the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Jones, who went there several days ago for the fishing and came back without—no, you're wrong, not without a fish but without a single story about "the one that got away."

After a couple of days at the sport resort, they crossed into Canada and paid a short visit to Col. James W. Flanagan at his fabulous esate, Divadale, near Toronto. Mrs. Jones is still bemoaning the fact that she and her husband had only a day there—"for it would take a week, at least, to see the place," she says. The house is filled with rare treasures, she went on; and she mentioned that one exceptionally exquisite wall hanging is supposed to be more than 4,000 years old, and there are objects of art all over the place, collected from all parts of the world.

In keeping with his custom of feting his guests with a lavish touch, Col. Flanagan, a former Texan, had asked in only a "few" friends to meet the Joneses. About 40 turned up at the appointed time, and the party went merrily along.

I understand that the large swimming pool at Divadale has a terrace above it, edged with a balcony, and that the whole layout looks as if it had been arranged as a Hollywood set.

ODDMENTS OF INTEREST: Justice Frank Murphy seems to be the only member of the highest court now left in town. But the others may vacation where they will, he's planning to stay right on in the Capital through the torrid season. . . . Mr. and Mrs. James Clement Dunn gave a farewell party Wednesday night in honor of Lieut. Joseph Alsop, who will leave shortly for an assignment in Bombay, India. Alsop's former writing partner, Lieut. Robert Kintner and Mrs. Kintner recently spent several days at the Admiral Hotel, Cape May, N. J. . . . Countess van Rechteren Limpurg will motor to Pennsylvania for this weekend and later in the month she and her husband will drive to Long Island to spend a couple of days with Mrs. Edgar Leonard. From there, she will drive on up to Maine to see her son, who is in camp there. . . . While former United States Minister to Canada James Cromwell is visiting Col. Flanagan at his Canadian estate, Doris Duke Cromwell is completing plans to cross the continent in a few days and will go from there by clipper to her home in Honolulu. She has been in Newport recently visiting her mother, Mrs. James B. Duke, at the later's estate, Rough Point.

Mr. Langhorne is a graduate of the University of Virginia and the Boeing Flying School in California. He is a grandson of the late Chiswell Dabney Langhorne and of the late Harry Douglas Forsyth and is a nephew of Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson and Lady Nancy Astor.

Pettingills Give Picnic Supper

The Commandant of the Navy Yard and Mrs. George T. Pettengill entertained at a picnic supper last night on the Admiral's Barge, the boat which is assigned to the Commandant. The guests met at 6:15 at the Yard and after a cold supper on deck steamed up the river and anchored off the Lincoln Memorial to hear the Watergate Concert.

Admiral and Mrs. Pettengill have had as their guests for several days Capt. and Mrs. John Abbott of Charleston, S. C. The Abbotts left yesterday to motor to New York for a stay and will then go on to Maine. They do not plan to return to Charleston until September.

Mrs. Pettengill owns a house in Essex, Conn., but is remaining in Washington for most of the summer. Her son, William, was badly injured in an automobile accident last Christmas and is now hospitalized at Pensacola, where he was studying flying. His mother expects him to join his parents later this summer at the Navy Yard for several weeks more convalescence.

The Hunt Country

By Nina Carter Tabb

LETTERS FROM two Virginians now enjoying a 1,000-mile pack trip to California are of much interest to their hunt country friends. The boys are Charles E. Perkins, jr., son of Mrs. Amory Perkins, of Middleburg, and Jack Butler, son of Col. and Mrs. John C. Butler, of Hectortown. They started out in June and they are now well on the way. Their plan is to follow the routes of the early stage lines, and after arriving in Montana, they adopted a frontier mode of travel as well. In other words, they left recently by horseback from the famous Flying D Range in Gallatin Canyon, Montana, to ride to the equally famous Alisal Ranch at Santa Barbara, Calif.

Along with them are two pack horses to carry a complete camp outfit. Except for the purchase of some up-to-the-minute supplies when needed, they plan to emulate entirely the life of the frontier explorers. "Of course," young Butler said shortly before leaving, "if we happen to arrive at a ranch about meal time and are invited to eat, we can't very well refuse." Most of the time, however, they will prepare their own food, make their own beds, wherever they stop, care for their own horses and do their own packing.

They will avoid the main highways through the trip, which they hope to complete in about two months. They are making copious notes as they go and they are recording their trip in motion pictures. A book, or at least a series of magazine articles is in prospect following the trip.

Carrying greetings from Dan Young, manager of the Gallatin Gateway Inn and Montana's "ambassador of good will," to the Governors of the States through which they pass, the Virginia boys are being accorded grade-A hospitality along the way.

Young Perkins is a senior at Virginia Polytechnic Institute, and Jack Butler is a freshman at Princeton University. Charles Perkins's father is owner of the Alisal Ranch and is a stockholder in the Flying D. Ranges. Alisal Ranch, incidentally, is the home of Flying Ebony, winner of the Kentucky Derby in 1925 and now rated as the most valuable stallion in the Western United States

MRS. GASQUET DI ZEREGA, of Hill Crest, Aldie, has almost completed extensive additions to her charming home and has in her house numbers of guests for the summer months. There is nowhere else in this neighborhood, where tired and hungry friends can get such good food on a moment's notice, or feel so refreshed after a chat on the porch overlooking the Bull Run and Blue Ridge Mountains, than they can at Hill Crest. Among the guests there just now are Mr. and Mrs. George von Alexich, of New York—he was former Minister from Austria to the Netherlands and Brussels—Mr. and Mrs. Henry Crabites, of New Orleans, and their daughters, Misses Frederica and Marguerite Crabites; the Misses Mayer, of Miffintown, Pa., and Miss Elizabeth Ballard, of Washington.

Nancy Williard Gives Supper Party for Her Cousin

Mrs. King has bee making her home in Manhattan for several years and has been unofficially administering the organization's expansion program. She will leave next week for the West to confer with field workers busy in several States laying the groundwork for the formation of new branches.

When in Washington in the ealy days of the New Deal, handsome Mrs. King was one of the outstanding hostesses. For a time she occupied the house on F Street in Georgetown which was once the home of Elinor Glyn, the novelist, and which Mr. and Mrs. Ray Atherton now lease.

Hewitts Give Party At Country Club

Capt. and Mrs. Frank Hewitt entertained at a dinner party on Wednesday night at the Manor Country Club. Capt. Hewitt was a member of the 115th Infantry during the World War and many of his guests were fellow officers of the infantry.

Col. E. Brooke Lee, Capt. John Geary, William E. Hewitt, John P. Hewitt, Richard H. Hewitt and Frank L. Hewitt.

Mary S. Beaman Is Betrothed

When the great-great granddaughter of a one-time Cabinet member plights her troth to a kinsman of a former Swedish envoy to the United States, the news is of wide interest in Washington. So-o-o, tea tables here yesterday were buzzing with the report that Mr. and Mrs. William Evarts Beaman are announcing the engagement of their daughter, Mary Stacy Beaman, of New York, to Eric Lagercrantz, of Djursholm, Sweden, and New York.

The wedding is planned for August 31, according to word from Cornish, N. H., where Mr. and Mrs. Beaman are spending the summer.

The bride-elect is a granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cotesworth Beaman, of New York, and the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert Benjamin, of Preston, Conn. Her great-great-grandfather was the late United States Senator William Maxwell Evarts, who was Secretary of State under President Rutherford B. Hayes. Miss Beaman studied at the Sorbonne and Radcliffe and Black Mountain Colleges. She made her debut in Boston in 1931 at the Chilton Club.

Mr. Lagercrantz is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Gustaf Lagercrantz, of Djursholm, and is a grandnephew of Herman Lagercrantz, former Swedish Minister here. He was graduated from the School of Administration and Business of the University of Stockholm and has been connected with banking circles in Stockholm, Hamburg, Paris and London. At present he is the American representative of the Goteborgs Bank, Stockholm. His father is president of the Stockholm Mortgage Bank.

C.D.A. Head Opposes Sex Equality Bill

Tells Convention It Would Destroy Women's Hard-Won Social Gains

By Lucia Giddens

Opposition to "Equal Rights for Women" legislation was sounded by Mrs. Robert J. Green of Baltimore, national legislative chairman of the Catholic Daughters of America, at its biennial convention yesterday.

"If this idea should become a reality, all of the present protective regulations for hours and types of labor for women, that have been won only through years of struggle, would at once become obsolete and worthless," she said in an address at the Mayflower Hotel on "Legislative Trends."

She said promoters of the equal rights idea build their arguments "on the false assumption that men and women are identical and therefore entitled to identical rights and privileges. . . . Since they were not created identical, it seems to be poor reasoning to think that any one regulatory law can be constructed to embrace, with justice and consideration for both sides, the rights of men and women as equal in all respects."

Mrs. Green also pointed out Catholic opposition to legalization of birth control and to compulsory sterilization of feeble-minded persons.

Urges Respect For Aliens' Rights

At another point in her address Mrs. Green said: "Tolerance is a great civic virtue which could be brought into greater general practice than it is today. Therefore it is gratifying to note that Legislatures in California, Massachusetts and New York have enacted measures prohibiting discrimination in employment because of race or religion.

"There is a bill pending known as the Hobbs bill which proposes the rigid regulation of activities of aliens. There is certainly a real need for such a regulation, but careful study should precede its adoption in order to see that the innocent alien who conforms with loyalty and obedience to the standards of our Nation receives the consideration due him," Mrs. Green said.

The Rev. M. Andrew Lawrence, M. S. SS. T., of Silver Spring, presented a gold medal of the Holy Trinity to Miss Mary C. Duffy, supreme regent of the Catholic Daughters of America, at yesterday's session.

"May it symbolize the bond which unites the Catholic Daughters of America with the Missionary Servants of the Most Holy Trinity in a great crusade for the conversion of America," he said.

Describes the 'Vast Mission Field' in U. S.

He, first student to be ordained after having been educated through the "adopt a priest brother plan," pointed out that there is "a vast mission field" in the United States, with more than 1,000 counties without priests, sisters or even visiting missionaries. In 500 more counties there are only visiting missionaries, he said.

"Sixty-five million Americans have no religious affiliation at all, he added.

"In our concern for Europe, let us not overlook the countless thousands in our own America who are not merely in dire physical want but are spiritually starving as well," he said.

"The Catholic Daughters of America are meeting squarely one of the greatest problems of America through their generous support of our students for the missionary priesthood," he said.

He explained the plan by which a unit of Catholic Daughters may "adopt" a priest-brother by making an offering of $3 to $30 a month for his education.

Last night's session was devotde to a presentation of the youth program of the Catholic Daughters, with Miss Mazie V. Scanlan, Margate, N. J., national junior director, in charge.

Other organizations may well take heed of the results of a survey on what members and potential members of Business and Professional Women's Clubs wish to find in its program.

The survey was reported this week at the national convention in Los Angeles, where a group of Washington delegates, headed by Mrs. Laura Waters, local president, is in attendance.

In the survey, it was found that potential members were interested in organizations offering them two opportunities—both indicating a broadening of horizons.

The first opportunity desired from a club was that of contact with a democratic group representing various political opinions, with a wide range of age, occupation, religion and nationality. The second wish was for access to information on social, economic and governmental problems, and of channels through which they can contribute to the solution of these problems in their own communities.

Miss Marjorie Fiske, who was director of the project, had as consultant Dr. Paul Lazarsfeld, director of the Office of Radio Research, Columbia University. On the advisory committee were Miss Miriam Thomkins of the community division of the Columbia University Graduate Library School; Dr. Helen Jeter, formerly of the research division of the New York City Department of Welfare, and Dr. Florence H. Schneider, of the Fact-finding Service of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs.

New York City was taken as the laboratory State for the survey because of the variety of population centers, and for reasons of economy. However, the findings were checked against a national sampling of the Federation's membership, and it was found that business and professional women have similar interests in various parts of the country. Interests vary more with age groups and with city size groups than they do from region to region, it was pointed out.

The findings in the survey will pave the way for future programs and activities of the Federation.

The primary focus of the Federation for several years has been on the strengthening of the social, economic and political conditions that make business and professional women possible rather than on concern with them as a special group, Miss Fiske's report pointed out.

She urged that clubs by word and action let their communities know that they are seeking to strengthen democracy in the communities, "by contributing a cross section of informed public opinion, and by cooperating with other groups in pro-democratic activities."

Gibson Islanders' Festival July 15 To Benefit Church

Beta Sigma Phi Honors Nine As Examplars

Nine members of Gamma Chapter, Beta Sigma Phi, cultural sorority for women in business and the professions, were honored at a banquet by the chapter last night upon their completion of requirements for the last degree of the sorority—the exemplar degree.

Diamond-set pins were awarded to the nine: Mrs. Ruth Gate Hill, Mrs. Victoria Strauch, Miss Kathryn Mason, Mrs. Ella Nelson, Mrs. Mildred Vettori, Miss Ruth Gilbert, Mrs. Eloise Dettman, Miss Helen Buzzell and Mrs. Alice Roberts Koch.

Miss Muriel Kirk and Miss Madge Perkins, both exemplars, were in charge of the degree-conferring, at the dinner at Wesly Hall.

Invited as special guests were Mrs. E. B. Sunday, director; Mrs. Ellis Logan, sponsor, and Miss Elva Chandler, Mount Cuba, Del., international tribune and immediate past president of the Middle Eastern Area Council.

A special closing ritual was arranged by Mrs. Strauch, Miss Gilbert, Mrs. Nelson and Mrs. Vettori, with Miss Betty Conn giving a reading.

Miss Edna Steinberger and Miss Conn were in charge of plans for the dinner.

To qualify for the exemplar degree, members must complete five years' study of cultural programs, and pass an examination sent from international headquarters in Kansas City.

The Red Cross unit of Delta Chapter, Beta Sigma Phi, held a meeting last night at the home of Miss Margaret Stock, with Miss Nora Deupree, unit chairman, in charge.

Women's Club Deans Meet

Eight past presidents of the District Federation of Women's Clubs held a luncheon meeting yesterday at the home of the new president, Mrs. Arthur Charles Watkins, 3365 Rittenhouse Street Northwest, to discuss policies and the program for the coming year.

Mrs. Ellis Logan, dean of those present, was elected chairman of the Past President Group which will alternate in conducting the "inspirational" exercises, opening each of the eight meetings of the coming club year.

Plans were drawn up for devoting the October meeting of the Federation to hearing proposed activities of its nine departments. The next meeting will take the form of a round table discussion in charge of the presidents of various clubs.

The past presidents attending the meeting were Mrs. Logan, Mrs. Howard I. Hodgkins, Mrs. John W. Frizzell, Mrs. Virginia White Speel, Mrs. Edgar B. Meritt, Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, Mrs. Lloyd W. Biddle, and Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Senate Objections Bulk Two Reforms

No Federal employe can be given an administrative pay raise—yet, Farm Security employes can't be brought under Civil Service—yet. Attempts were made in the Senate yesterday to bring about both reforms but each was stopped temporarily by single objections—Senator O'Mahoney objected to the uniform promotion plan and Senator Adams stymied the amendment to the promotion bill that would bring most Farm Security employes under Civil Service. It's now planned to bring up the promotion plan by unanimous consent on the next calender day and Senator Hill plans to introduce a bill that would bring most Farm Security employes under Civil Service.

Both bills have excellent chances of passage. The President is solidly behind them. Eugene Casey, special assistant to the President, put over the rider on the Second Deficiency bill that kept Farm Security employes out of Civil Service. The President indirectly bawled out Casey when he reluctantly signed the bill and he has since assigned another of his secretaries to get the Casey coup negated.

Senator Mead called up the uniform promotion plan yesterday. The bill appeared certain of unanimous approval until Senator Hill introduced his amendment that would have nullified the Casey patronage coup. While Hill and Mead were explaining the amendment, O'Mahoney read the report of the promotion bill and decided to object because he felt that Federal employes already were the best paid of any class in the country. O'Mahoney's move blocked action on all points, though Adams had said he would oppose the promotion bill with the Farm Security amendment.

'Chaos' Feared

Hill's amendment would have exempted only appraisers, State and county committeemen, temporary, seasonal, and per diem employes from Civil Service. He explained that the Casey coup was "unfair and discriminatory" and that it had caused "chaos and turmoil" at Farm Security. Hill said the Casey coup had barred four-fifths of FSA's 17,000 employes from Civil Service and that a fifth were being brought under the merit system. "As a matter of fairness," Hill said, "these employes should be treated equally."

O'Mahoney apparently misunderstood the promotion bill when he objected to it. He told the Senate that it 'would increase salaries $29,000,000 annually while the report of the Budget Bureau shows that the plan would increase costs only $29,000,000 in 10 years. But most important, the promotion bill would treat employes fairly and equally and it would permit agencies to give in-grade raises to its deserving employes.

M. Clifford Townsend, director of the Office of Agricultural Defense Relations, has made the following appointments: David Meeker, assistant director; D. A. Fitzgerald, production division chief; L. L. Needler, farm equipment and supplies division chief; James E. Wells, jr., transportation and marketing division chief, and Raymond Smith, chief of the labor and rural industries division. . . . UFWA, the C. I. O. union, is trying to get Helen Miller, suspended from the Labor Department on radical charges, a hearing before the department's Conciliation Service.

Ben M. Williams has been appointed manager of the Washington field office of the Social Security Board. He'll serve in the absence of Victor Sadd who has been called into the Naval Reserve. . . . Maurice Weeks, who has been giving legal advice to UFWA's adjustment committee at United States Housing Authority, has resigned from the union because of pressure from work. His resignation was submitted while the union is fighting the dismissal of Bert Gross, union president. . . . New officers at AFGE's Interior lodge: John Lundquist, president; Richard Dee and Clayton Birch, vice presidents; Eugenia Billings, secretary-treasurer, and Herbert Graham, sergeant-at-arms.

Justice officials are beginning to doubt seriously whether Solicitor General Francis Biddle will be promoted to Attorney General. They believe the President would have nominated him for the Cabinet post if he had any intention of making the appointment. Friends of Federal Security Administrator Paul McNutt are pushing him for the Cabinet post.

Lose Church—Then Regain It

Madison, Ind.—The congregation of Liberty Church was not daunted when the Government bought its building and its four acres because they lay in 60,000-acre Army ordnance proving ground.

When the building was sold at auction, the members bought it back for $104 and contracted to have it moved for $2,000 100 yards north, just over the border.

Coach Takes A Lesson

Charlotte, N. C., July 10 (AP).—There is one football coach in North Carolina with a red face today. A splendid prospect for the team came along but had bad teeth. The coach, taking no chances, turned a dentist loose on them. And then—the player went right out and joined the Army Air Corps. He had been rejected previously—because of bad teeth.

Civic Groups Offer to Help Combat Crime

Representatives of the Federation of Civic Associations will offer their services to the District Commissioners today in curbing Washington's crime wave.

"We are prepared to take the lead in a citizens' movement against crime," said E. F. Harris, president of the Negro organization, "because so many crimes are charged to our people."

Harris will head a committee of seven who will confer with the Commissioners in Commissioner Hazen's office at 11 a. m. today.

Specific suggestions which they will make, said Harris, include a larger police force and more employment opportunities for qualified Negroes.

Other members of the federation's committee are Mrs. Velma G. Williams, vice president of the organization and member of the Board of Education; Woolsey W. Hall, corresponding secretary; W. D. Nixon, treasurer; Dr. C. Herbert Marshall, president of the Rock Creek Civic Association and of the Washington branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People; George W. Beasley, former president of the federation, and Howard B. Woodson, chairman of the federation's special committee on crime and president of the Northeast Boundary Civic Association.

Victim of Beating In Serious Condition

Leslie K. Mann, 45, of 1318 Fourteenth Street Northwest, was in serious condition at Emergency Hospital last night with a possible brain concussion and other injuries, and police held a 30-year-old man for investigation in connection with his beating.

Mann, found early yesterday morning in his apartment with eyes blacked, mouth cut and face bruised, declined to say how he received the injuries, police reported.

Meanwhile, police sought two Negroes who attempted to snatch the pocketbooks of two women on Sixteenth Street Northwest near the Rock Creek Park Bridge. The men sprang from bushes beside the walk Thursday night, but were routed by the screams of their intended victims, Rose Centannim and Marie A. Mueller, of 1451 Park Road Northwest.

Florence Duff, of 1121 Twelfth Street Northwest, lost her pocketbook containing $4 to a white boy in the 1000 block of Tenth Street Northwest.

Alice Dobbins, 2511 Q Street Northwest, reported her dressing table had been looted and $300 worth of diamonds rings stolen.

Morris Segal, 6315 Thirteenth Street Northwest, reported his pocket was picked of $21 in a street car at Fourteenth and U Streets Northwest.

George Gotthardt, 1701 Bunker Hill Road Northeast, reported a stickpin, wrist watch and other jewelry valued at $100 had been stolen from his second-floor bedroom.

Contract Is Let For Arlington Army Warehouse

The War Department yesterday awarded a $1,840,000 contract to John McShain, Inc., of Philadelphia, for construction of a quartermaster storage warehouse in Arlington.

The structure will replace the present leased warehouse at Twenty-fourth and M Streets Northwest and will be located on land now being acquired adjoining the Arlington Cantonment and the Washington Airport.

Antonio Brico conducts the National Symphony Orchestra on Thursday night at the Potomac Watergate, with Jessica Dragonette as soloist. Program: Overture to "Idomeneo, Re di Creta" (Mozart), Symphony No. 2 in D major (Sibelius), "American Piece" (Mary Howe), Overture to "Die Meistersinger" (Wagner), Songs by Puccini, Bachelet, MacDowell, Obradors and Chaminade.

Leaving to a Gallup poll the question whether the attraction at the Potomac Watergate last night was Antonia Brico, America's distinguished woman conductor, or Jessica Dragonette, the popular radio soprano, one reports impartially that the National Symphony Orchestra's fourth summer concert was attended by an audience that overflowed the seating capacity.

BROWN

An early evening threat of rain had no effect upon the pilgrimage to the river bank at the Lincoln Memorial, and the crowd had promptly assembled at the starting hour. Judging from the intentness of the great gathering and the vehemence of the applause, no storm short of a deluge would have driven them away, once the concert had begun.

As it turned out, the fickle weather decided to be kindly, and nothing marred the enjoyment of the music-hungry thousands. Clouds drew aside and unveiled the stars and a gentle breeze dispersed the humidity. From canoes, launches and yachts on the water, and from every perch within sound of the music came the plaudits and the cries for encores. No comptometers recorded the actual figure of attendance, but those experienced guardians of the public safety, the Park Police, estimated the throng at between 16,000 and 17,000.

Both the visiting artists were received with a cordiality that made the occasion a ladies' night with reverse English. Antonia Bries demonstrated once again the musicianship and the directorial ability which have established her beyond cavil as the greatest woman conductor of our day. Whether or not the program was entirely her own choice does not matter, for she handled it with mastery and assurance, and it did contain a work which she had studied with the composer, Sibelius' second symphony.

She began with a novelty from the past, the overture to "Idomeneo, King of Crete," an opera which Mozart at the age of 24 was commissioned to write for the Munich Carnival in January of 1781. Sturdy and dramatically effective, it is an interesting study in Mozart's welding of French and Italian influences at that stage in his development.

The Sibelius symphony was given a reading broad in conception and thoughtful in the treatment of details, finely colored in instrumental emphasis and impassioned in emotion. Some portions of the work suffered from the vagaries of the amplification system, and it is probable that some of the farthest auditors lost the subleties of interpretation.

Miss Brico paid tribute to our resident composer, Mary Howe, by giving the first performance of "American Piece," a thoroughly revised version of "What Price Glory," which was played some time ago at Chautauqua under the direction of Albert Stoessel. Considered judgment of this music must be reserved until it is heard under better acoustical conditions. Amplification has its indubitable merit, but it distorts values upon which critical insight most depends.

Jessica Dragonette was not as completely at home in the familiar aria from "Madame Butterfly" as in the songs which favored her ingenuous charm. One was aware of a strain upon her voice in the search for a dramatic plangency unsuitable to its lyric quality. Much more appreciable was the fresh and engaging tone disclosed in Bachelet's "Chere Nuit," two Spanish songs by Obradors, Chaminade's "Summer," and an arrangement of MacDowell's "To a Wild Rose" with text by the singer. Her extra numbers were "Intermezzo," Stephen Foster's "Jeannie With the Light Brown Hair" and Toselli's "Serenade."

The concert formally closed with the overture to "Die Meistersinger," but no Watergate ever ends where the program stops. Miss Brico was recalled insistently and complied with the demand for more by directing Dvorak's Slavic Dance in A flat major and Wagner's "Ride of the Valkyrs."

Action on Three District Bills Is Postponed

Postponement of action on three District bills—measures to modernize the small-loan law, raise the pay of police and firemen and to establish dry zones throughout the city by amendment of the ABC law—was announced last night by Chairman Jennings Randolph of the House District Committee.

All three of the bills are on the House calendar, but Randolph said they would not be called up on Monday, the next District Day. Randolph explained that delay in House consideration of the small-loan bill was requested by Representatives Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, and Sauthoff (Progressive), of Wisconsin. Both members will be out of the city Monday.

Dirksen also has sworn to fight the liquor bill to death. The measure, sponsored by Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, would set up 400-foot dry zones around every school, church, playground, public library, Navy yard, Army post, the Soldiers Home and institutions harboring the needy. Also it would ban all forms of liquor-price advertising.

Dirksen has repeatedly attacked the bill as a monopoly measure.

While Randolph made no comment on the police-pay bill, it was generally conceded that the measure would have little chance of passage while a District subcommittee is investigating the Metropolitan Police Department.

The small-loan bill would make it legal for lending companies to charge 2 per cent interest per month, on loans of $500 or less. Representative Sheridan (Democrat) of Pennsylvania, has indicated he intends to offer an amendment to reduce the interest on a sliding-scale basis and to cut the loan limit to $300.

Club for Service Men Opens Here Tomorrow as USO Project

Another project sponsored by the United Service Organizations will be launched here tomorrow night when the National Catholic Community Service opens a service club for men in uniform at the Knights of Columbus Hall, 918 Tenth Street Northwest.

It is "dedicated to all service men in their leisure hours," according to USO officials.

Invitations to the opening at 8 p. m. have been sent to chaplains of all faiths in nearby camps and shore stations and through them to service men. There will be dancing from 9 p. m. to midnight.

The club, to be open every night, will afford service men on leave with a place to rest, read, write letters, for which stationery will be provided free, and play games. Dances will be held every Saturday night with hostesses provided from a list of 350 girls already selected.

More than $50,000 remained to be collected yesterday in the USO's campaign to raise $250,000 in Washington.

Campaign leaders urge residents and business firms to send contributions directly to campaign headquarters if they have not been solicited. The accompanying coupon may be used for that purpose. Checks should be made out to Corcoran Thom, treasurer.

Unit Weighs Juvenile Crime Setup

Traffic Council Urges Augmented Detention Facilities, Stricter Methods

The juvenile delinquency problem was tackled last night by the Commissioners' Traffic Advisory Council, which also expressed "complete confidence" in Police Chief Brown's ability and proposed a traffic safety educational program.

The council urged additional juvenile case workers, augmented detention facilities, a psychiatric clinic for young offenders and additional recreational facilities for potential juvenile delinquents.

Discontinuance of the police practice of turning arrested children over to their parents instead of sending them to Juvenile Court was also advocated.

Of 51 children arrested between July 1, 1940, and February 12, 1941, only 22 were actually taken to court, said a special committee report approved by the council.

One 14-year-old boy, the report disclosed, was arrested a number of times before finally being sent to an institution.

An investigation by the committee, headed by Harry S. Wender, stemmed from an epidemic of vandalism in which parking meters and automobiles were broken into and street lamps and signs damaged. The committee extended the study to cover the delinquent child situation generally.

The council expressed hope that Maj. Brown would be continued in office as police chief. A Congressional appropriation of $7,500 was proposed for the traffic safety educational campaign.

Another campaign to encourage motorists to park not more nor less than three feet apart to conserve parking space was proposed. Changes in parking regulations at eight locations also were advocated.

'Barnacle Bill' Musses Up Tuna Industry, at Capitol

"BARNACLE BILL." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of a screen play by Jack Jevne and Hugo Butler, starring Wallace Beery, with Marjorie Main, Leo Carrillo, Virginia Weidler, Donald Meek, Barton MacLane, Connie Gilchrist, Sara Haden, William Edmonds, Don Terry and Alec Craig. Directed by Richard Thorpe. At Loew's Capitol Theater.

"BARNACLE BILL" seems not quite to have the courage of its convictions. The old boy seems to have softened up a bit. Or perhaps it is that the Production Code has gotten a little tougher.

Whatever the cause, the new picture on the screen at Loew's Capitol seems content most of the time to go only half the way. It is, to be sure, a rough-and-tumble saga of the San Pedro waterfront and the tuna banks, where some pretty snide business goes on, what with the crooked checkers of the catches and all, but each episode in the story somehow seems to leave itself suspended in midair. The comedy would be a little more comic, if it were even a little rowdier than it is; the melodrama would be more exciting, were it not quite so sketchy and such pathos as marked "The Champ," for instance, is so soft-pedaled between father and daughter that neither Wallace Beery, in the title role, nor Virginia Weidler, as his child whom he hasn't seen since she was a baby in Gloucester, ever has an opportunity to reach the top of the form of which each is capable in the tear-jerking power of the gentler emotions.

Bill Johansen, the lazy roustabout of the fishing docks, is at base the Bill of "Min and Bill," with all of his bravado but little of the flair for being the toughest guy around the fisheries. He does some Grade-A bruising with his fellow-tunamen, but the women folk, from the susceptible Marge Cavendish to the brawling blonde in the waterside saloon, toss him around to suit themselves. That is a good thing for Bill. Otherwise, he would have wound up without a fishhook to his name, let alone the handsome schooner he bid in at $26,000 when he had something just a little short of beer money.

It is an episodic fable that is unwound in "Barnacle Bill"—a sort of personal biography of a big hunk of a man with a 10-year-old mentality in the matter of conducting his business and his liife. In combination, Marge and little Virginia Johansen straighten him out after a fashion, but there is always the impression that the script writers unfailingly took the easy way out when the dramatic going got too complicated for sustained and plausible narrative. The scenes on the fishing banks are stirring and amusing and so are the fights, in which Bill never gets anything worse than a black eye, but the film registers its biggest punch when Bill brings his boat home through a storm and its heartiest laugh when Marge shackles him with the more or less holy bonds of matrimony.

Bill and a New "Min"

Wallace Beery is the same sleazy character he has always been in this sort of thing—uncouth, a prodigious braggart, putty in the paws of his women and hard work's bitterest enemy. No one is able to play such a nondescript so well. Marjorie Main, as the long-suffering and eventually triumphant Marge Cavendish, is by no means another Marie Dressler, but she does possess those raucous qualities that make her the best foil the star could have—with the possible exception of that other Marjorie by the name of Rambeau. Virginia Weidler is the underpriviliged daughter and Sara Haden her austere New England aunt. Leo Carrillo is largely wasted as Bill's strangely acquiescent "first mate," but Donald Meek does a whale of a job in the eccentric character role of "Pop" Cavendish, the octogenarian tightwad, who doesn't propose to see his "little girl," Marge, get any the worst of it. Connie Gilchrist is a buxom honky-tonk Mamie, but nobody else in the cast much matters, except that pelican that almost steals the show.

Mr. Pelican Has a Stage Rival

On the Capitol stage this week, the veteran Bert Wheeler does completely to the new revue what Mr. Pelican only did in part in the film. He stops the show cold in its tracks with an act participated in by three others, including Francetta Malloy and Hank Ladd. The whimsical Wheeler starts a little slowly, content to assign most of the early fun to the able lad named Ladd, but ends in a monologistic blaze of glory that is a killer-diller. Helene Denison, ballerina, opens the proceedings with a Joan of Arc ballet, followed by Ann Lester, whom Conductor Sam Jack Kaufman introduced as a vocalist. Betty Lou contributes briefly with some tricky acrobatics and then Mr. Wheeler & Co., with the Rhythm Rockets weaving in and out, of course, in their various routines. The radium number is their prevalent piece de resistance. Bill Coyle and "Wave That Flag, America" wind it up, as per last week.

Mr. Kaufman's "Musical Contrasts" overture, with Lynn Allison doing the vocals; the Fox Movietone News, Art Brown and his singfest, and an inspirational "Army in Overalls" short-reel, sponsored by the OPM, complete the bill.

Metropolitan

Not often does the Metropolitan hold on to a picture for more than one week, but the F street theater is holding on to "Underground" with the tenacity of a Congressman scanning the Gallup Poll. One week's record has spoken and the melodrama is being continued for a second.

Which is a fine thing, for "Underground" is a smacking good picture. With Philip Dorn and Jeffry Lynn in the leading roles, it tells of the subsurface movement in Germany against the Nazi regime and specifically of the illegal German radio, "The Voice of Freedom," and those who give their lives so it may be heard. A sweeping sense of immediacy, a gripping atmosphere of reality combine for a feeling of suspense throughout the film that a hundred pictures strive for and five achieve.

Central characters of the story are two brothers. One is a loyal party man, devoted to the work of empirical construction he feels the Nazis are doing. The other, a scientist, sees through the large-scale banditry and is active in the "underground" movement. Such a situation may not be unique in the archives of filmdom, but thanks to its leading player, Philip Dorn, "Underground" makes it fascinating. In this straightforward young Dutchman, the screen has found a truly striking personality.

There are weaknesses in "Underground," such as the improbable finale, but they are quite unimportant to the whole. Also in the cast is another new player, Kaaren Verne, a top-notch English girl who ought to be around for years. Mona Maris, Peter Whitley and Martin Kosleck are the other principals.

Love Finds the Tuna Docks

MARJORIE MAIN AND WALLACE BERRY in one of the more rapturous moments in "Barnacle Bill," the new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer comedy-drama, now on the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater. Foremost among the supporting players are Leo Carrillo, as Skipper Beery's first mate, and Virginia Weidler, best of the juvenile actresses

HEDDA HOPPER

So You Can't Take It!

Hollywood, July 10.—It's a funny thing the way our modern girls with all of their athletics cave in at the punishment grandma took in her stride. They're up and at 'em on the tennis courts or in the pool, but just lace them into an old-fashioned corset and they're down for the count. Jean Parker is the latest casualty. You'd think Jean's chassis could fit into one of the contraptions without struggling, but she's puffing around the studio like a goldfish that's fallen out of its bowl!

Robert Montgomery

In Bette Davis' autobiography in a current magazine, she says it was Sam Goldwyn who ordered the first screen test made of her, then threw up his hands in despair when he saw it. Yet 12 years later, he paid her a small fortune to do "Little Foxes."

The low-down on why they're changing title on Bob Montgomery's "Heaven Can Wait" is that a little old lady in Arkansas wrote in pleading for them not to use it. They bowed to her wishes, so now it's "Mr. Jordan Comes to Town."

Oscar Homolka's up for the role of Pablo in "For Whom the Bell Tolls." He's certainly the type and a fine actor to boot. Sam Wood favors him, so here's hoping! He missed out on "Hatter's Castle" because he wasn't in England . . . Ed Churchill, just back from "Bahama Passage" location, tells me that a makeup man caught a 200-pound tuna. Boys tried to get Stirling Hayden to pose with it as his catch. Stirling turned it down cold. Anyhow, it's a new kind of fish story!

How many of you know that Carl Esmond, the young heavy of "Sundown," was "Willie Eichelberger," who got out of Austria one jump ahead of the Nazi invasion? In England, they changed his name to Esmond. He liked it, so applied for use of it permanently.

"The Corsican Brothers," which Howard Estabrook has adapted from Alexandre Dumas' great novel, will star Douglas Fairbanks, jr., if he ever gets done with "good-willing," with Greg Ratoff directing.

A producer in search of a picture for his prize glamour girl, called up his story editor and said, "I want you to find her a story with a V-neck!"

Charles Laughton tells me Deanna Durbin's sense of comedy timing is as good as her singing . . . In private conversation, Fibber or Molly McGee rarely uses the word "I." They always say "we," which shows how close and indivisible they are.

Leo Carrillo and Eddie Foy, jr., were reminiscing the other night, and Leo recalled that years ago he went calling on Eddie while both were staying at a swank hotel. He found Eddie in a tiny room, complaining bitterly he was soaked 25 bucks a day for it. Leo investigated a connecting door, and discovered Eddie was occupying the valet's room of his very commodious suite.

On Rowland Brown's New Orleans trip he bought a sword once owned by Jean Lafitte. Says he's going to give it to Freddie March, who played Lafitte in "The Buccaneer." Why not John Carroll, who's a direct descendant of the famous pirate?

LEONARD LYONS

'Gone Tomorrow'

New York, July 10.

Jesse Lasky, the Hollywood pioneer, who produced the new Gary Cooper movie, "Sergeant York," advised a group of young men to invest their money in savings banks or Government bonds. "I'll cite one lesson for you," Lasky stated—and told of the time when he accumulated investments of $6,000,000. "The 4 per cent return gave me an income of $240,000 a year," he confessed. "My friends advised me to retire—but I wanted $10,000,000, because then I'd have an income of $400,000 every year, and I thought I needed that much. But in one week I changed my mind. One historic week" . . . "What week was that?" Lasky was asked . . . "The last week of October, 1929," he replied, "when the Wall Street crash left me without a dime."

RAYMOND MASSEY

Dorothy Thompson will fly to London on July 17 . . . The Treasury Department has commissioned Arch Oboler to write, without fee, all the drama sketches for the West Coast series of the "Millions For Defense" broadcasts. Walter Huston, Bette Davis, Joan Crawford and Raymond Massey will appear in those playlets . . . Sir Philip Gibbs, the British novelist, is coming to America next month, on official business . . . Harold Rome, the song writer, is writing the score for a new musical based upon the book, "Caleb Catlum's America." It will be written by Valentine Davies and Vincent McHugh . . . Eddie Borden, the fight manager, who once published sports magazines, is going to Canada to enlist in the armed forces. He's over the draft age.

When Clare Boothe returned from China, Alexander King—who had collaborated with Miss Boothe in writing "The Yohimbe Tree"—brought her the manuscript of a new play he just has completed . . . The principal character—a beautiful and talented young lady—is the possessor of traits which are reminiscent of Miss Boothe's . . . When Clare heard about this she said: "Well, if Alex doesn't pull his punches, he'll have a hit."

Billy Rose has abandoned his project for opening a night club in Washington. The housing boom there has made cafe rentals prohibitive. The only space available was priced at $50,000 a year. The same space, in the heart of Times Square, brings $30,000 a year. "No matter what your offer is," Rose was informed, "we can always get more from the British government" . . . Renee De Marco, of the dancing De Marcos, who now is in Reno, will continue to dance after the divorce—as a solo dancer

Russel Crouse, the co-producer of "Arsenic and Old Lace," mailed dividend checks to the 21 shareholders in the production . . . In the letter which accompanied the checks Crouse reported that the Swedish rights to the play really have been sold . . . "And, so, if you're ever in Stockholm, just drop in and see the play," Crouse advised. "If the voices are German—hang up."

Arthur Menken, the newsreel cameraman, who covered the war in China, Poland and France, will be on his way to Moscow—the first American newsreel cameraman there in years . . . WNYC's Missing Persons broadcast announced the disappearance of "Goodwin Henry Neal, 14, black hair, maroon eyes." A checkup disclosed that the police dispatch really had it: "Maroon eyes" . . . Johnny Puleo, the Washington midget clown of Borrah Minnevitch's harmonica band—who is rated as one of the best pantomimists in show business—at last will get a chance to emote in pictures. He's been signed for the Abbott & Costello movie, "Ride 'Em Cowboy." His job will be to stand in a pool, submerged up to his neck, so that divers will be made to believe that the water is deeper than it really is.

"Superman" will institute proceedings against "Capt. Marvel" and Republic Films, requesting an injunction, etc. . . . Before Ralph Ingersoll was given a visa to Russia, he and Soviet Ambassador Oumansky argued about PM's policies towards Russia. "Let's settle this now," said Oumansky, finally. "No ideologies. We're now back to 1812"

Actress Is Putting Accent on Accents

Mona Marie is having accent trouble. The Argentine importation, who has been signed to a contract by Warner Brothers, was advised by friends to lose her foreign accent if she expected a successful screen careeer.

Mona followed her friends' advice and worked with Gertrude Fogler, foremost voice teacher in Hollywood. She worked hard and at the end of four weeks showed definite improvement.

Then she was assigned to an important role in "Law of the Tropics." Much to her surprise and chagrin she had to portray a South American native.

Smith Assails Rumors of D.C. Crime, Prices

Stories, circulated throughout the Nation, to the effect that crime and the high cost of living are making Washington untenable should be attacked wherever heard, the Junior Board of Commerce was told at its induction meeting yesterday by Fred A. Smith, president of the Washington Board of Trade.

"We have done everything possible to provide housing and I am frank to say that I think we have done a very excellent job," Smith asserted. Reports, widespread, that "it costs $4 for supper are simply ridiculous," he said.

Of housing, he said that during the past calendar year "we placed on the market in the city's metropolitan area more than 1,300 housing units a month. For the past several months this rate of construction has been stepped up until about 1,600 units a month were attained, he stated.

More than 3,600 rooms for rent are listed in the defense housing registry, while the list grows "at a far greater rate than we can possibly rent the rooms," he stated.

He did not comment on the current investigation of the police.

The most disturbing thing from standpoint of the city's future "are the various moves which are being made to decentralize the Federal Government," he said.

"Most of the departments are already decentralized to a large extent. . . . To further decentralize this Government would result in serious dislocation and hamper the successful prosecution of the present defense efforts. Very definite campaigns are being carried on by owners of empty office buildings in other cities to entice Federal agencies to occupy space they cannot rent and these people are constantly seizing upon every possible rumor to prove Washington to be unfit for the Federal establishment," Smith said.

Millard F. West, jr., 31, 1837 Wyoming Avenue Northwest, vice president, investment securities firm of Ferris, Exnicias, was inducted by the junior board as president, succeeding Harold D. Fangboner. Other officers inducted were L. W. Lawder, first vice president; Geoffrey Creyke, jr., second vice president; James S. Beattie, secretary; James A. Councilor, jr., treasurer, and Gordon W. Rule, general counsel. New directors are John Delafield, Harold D. Fangboner, Earle Hough, John S. Jacobsen, James D. Mann, Paul B. Oehmann, Edwin N. Rice, William H. Sardo, jr., and Winfield Weitzel.

'Toughest Outfit in the 29th' Is Forming to Combat Tanks

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Writer

Fort George G. Meade, Md., July 10.—With appointment today of its commanding officer, organization of the "toughest outfit in the Twenty-ninth Division" was begun by Lieut. Col. Thomas J. Shryock, jr., division antitank officer.

Monday morning the new organization, a provisional antitank battalion under division control, will be brought together as a unit for the first time. It will be commanded by Lieut. Col. Edgar E. DeMuth, of Richmond, Va., until yesterday commanding the second battalion, 111th Field Artillery. Its executive officer will be Maj. J. F. de V. Patrick, of Baltimore, former plans and training officer, 110th Field Artillery.

Col. Shryock was appointed division antitank officer this week immediately after his return from the Command and General Staff School, Fort Leavenworth, Kans., where he had been a student. He formerly was executive officer of the Fifty-fourth Brigade.

The new battalion, organized under War Department order, will bring together 52 antitank guns in a closely-knit command with tremendous fire power.

Stuart, Napoleon Combined

"We intend to make this battalion the toughest outfit in the Twenty-ninth Division," Col. Shryock said. "It will be a combination of Stuart's cavalry, the Old Guard of Napoleon and a lot of barroom fighters."

The battalion is to be built around the antitank batteries of the division's three field artillery regiments and will include three antitank batteries with 36 little 37-millimeter guns and two batteries with 16 new 75-millimeter antitank weapons. An engineer company will be drawn to it from the District's 121st Engineers to build tank obstacles and lay land mines. A reconnaissance platoon with six heavily armed scout cars will be trained to seek far afield for enemy tanks, using command reconnaissance trucks until armored scout cars can be procured.

Twenty officers and 599 enlisted men will comprise the battalion at the outset, 17 officers and 478 men from the Field Artillery and 3 officers and 121 men from the Engineers. The scout-car platoon will be made up from the battalion's own batteries.

In addition to its 52 antitank guns, the new outfit will be armed with pistols and rifles and with ten .50-caliber machine guns for antiaircraft protection and 60 automatic rifles to protect road blocks and mines. Scouts will use 26 motorcycles and 12 two-way voice radios will be provided for close and continuous communication.

Some observers saw in the antitank battalion the beginning of an entirely new type of division, predicting that befoer it is finally evolved the battalion will contain a company of armored infantry and a chemical warfare company to lay smoke and to contaminate threatened areas with gas.

From it, they believed, divisions inherently safe from attack by tanks as well as unbelievably powerful in attack will soon be developed.

For the time being, the Twenty-ninth Division's new antitank battalion is preparing to train itself as thoroughly as possible in the three weeks remaining before it will go to the A. P. Hill Military Reservation in Caroline County, Va., for three weeks of maneuvers. Until then, its men will be quartered with their old regiments. After maneuvers, the battalion will be brought together, Col. Shryock said, probably in a tent camp under its own commander and staff.

Endeavorers Told to Show Nazi-Like Zeal

By the Associated Press

Atlantic City, N. J., July 10.—The International Christian Endeavor Society was advised at its biennial convention tonight to avoid present-day "sophisticated cynicism" and take on some of the zeal displayed by Nazis and Communists.

Dr. Herbert Gezork, former general secretary of the Baptists Youth Union in Germany, told 6,000 convention delegates that "Moscow and Berlin have been the greatest fountainheads of missionary activity during the past few years," and added:

"We may call men and women fifth columnists or subversive agents when they go out from these cities to win adherents to their faith and pave the way for victory of their cause, but they think of themselves as missionaries of a faith which is destined to win the world."

A campaign for the return of prohibition was proposed to the society earlier today.

"The present national emergency makes even more imperative prompt and decisive action," Dr. Daniel A. Poling, of Philadelphia, president of the society which claims 2,000,000 members in the United States and Canada, told 6,000 delegates "alcohol has less than nothing to contribute to the national defense."

"For every saloon of 1911," he said, "there are now at least three similar, or worse, places of liquor sale. There is work for us to do. Here and now we renew our pledge, rededicate ourselves to the solution of the liquor problem."

Dr. Poling, of Philadelphia, who has been president of Christian Endeavor for 16 years, was reelected for another two-year term today. Pauline Shoemaker, Washington, D. C., school teacher, was elected associated president.

Contract Bridge

♣ A Q J 8

The bidding has gone:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♣	Pass

The Solution

Three diamonds. The forcing bid in the three-card suit is recommended as the hand is just too good in support of clubs to be content with bidding four or even five clubs. You cannot, on the other hand, bid a slam single-handed. The three-diamond bid, followed by a raise in clubs, will show your high-card strength, distribution and suit controls quite adequately and let partner choose between game and slam.

Tanks Will Beat Nazis, Briton Says

By Carl Olsson

(Distributed by International News Service by Special Permission of "London Calling," Official Publication of the British Broadcasting Corporation.)

London, July 10.—As commanding officer of the Royal Armored Corps (which was once the Tank Corps) Maj. Gen. Gifford Le Quesne Martel, D. S. O., M. C., is Britain's opposite number to those German tank chiefs like Rommel, who swept their panzer legions through the armies of Europe.

"Slosher" Martel is his nickname in the army. It has stuck to him since the days when he was a subaltern in the sappers and the champion light-heavyweight of the army.

A tough, offensive spirit is about the best of all assets in a tank leader, and at 51 this short, stocky, dark, balding figure has much more fighting go than ever. To be with him for an hour or two is a tonic.

Can and Shall Smash Them

Ask him that dreary, favorite question of the arm chair strategists: "How can we hope to end this war by invading a continent packed stiff with German troops, possessing all the advantages of interior lines of communication, and armed to the teeth with their own and looted weapons of war?" and Martel has a crisp and ready answer. It goes like this:

"We can and shall establish bridgeheads on the continent from which to attack the Germans. We can and shall smash them on land. In fact that is the only way to do it. Bombing alone will never do it any more than bombing will break us.

"It is the man in the big boots—the infantryman—who is going to win this war for us: on wheels and on tracks and on foot. But to do it we must have tanks. Tanks, more tanks and still more tanks."

Martel has no illusions about the quality of the German Reichswehr. But he does not overdo his regard for it. He insists that all along Britain has been in advance of German tank design, and that the new British stuff is still better than anything they have. But he also insists Britain must have quantity.

When he compares relative excellence of German and British tanks, Martel knows what he is talking about, because he has been up against the German panzer divisions in this war.

Specialist in Tanks

On May 21 last he was commanding the Fiftieth (Northumbrian) Division at Arras. The Germans were making their sweep round to the Channel ports. French units were on either side of Martel. The French on his southern flank were asked to attack northwards and link up with the Fiftieth's attack. But the French high command said "no"—the northern flanking portion would attack southwards. In the final event they did neither. So Martel asked for a brigade of tanks to help the Fiftieth, and they went in alone.

Quite apart from any personal qualities in the man himself, Martel should be a good choice for the job because he really knows tanks. Martel is a specialist in tank warfare.

He went to Russia as an observer and saw Russian tanks. He was not impressed by them as fighting vehicles, but he was by their system of suspension—the invention of an American named Christie, which is now the basis of British tank suspension and the best in the world.

That, in brief, is some of the history and the background of the man who leads the British tank brigades. But he would be the last man to thank me for this without my saying something about the needs and position of the corps he commands.

Question of Production

First and last there is the question of production and supply of tanks in ever-increasing quantity.

Another step is to get down to a "combined design" with the United States. This was done toward the end of the last war and tanks began to pour off the assembly lines in hundreds—too late to use them.

Raucous Reds Flee Paris Jail by Song

Vichy, July 10 (U.P.).—Twenty-one Communists, held in the emergency prison of the Palais de Justice on the city island in Paris, annoyed their guards by singing Russian war songs all night.

Before dawn the singing stopped. When guards investigated they found the Communists had escaped by sawing the bars of a gate.

The prisoners had covered up their rasping saws with their rasping voices.

Pa. Governor Acts to Oppose Surface Mining

By the Associated Press

Pottsville, Pa., July 10.—Gov. Arthur H. James sided today with opponents of surface mining in Pennsylvania's anthracite field and declared that the practice—which led yesterday to widespread disorders—is a serious threat to the hard-coal industry.

During the day, 150 State troopers patrolled areas around three sites where massed miners forced power shovel operators to stop operations. Later most of them returned to posts elsewhere in the State.

The Governor, urging the Legislature to investigate the clashes in which 13 men were wounded by buckshot and 20 others bruised and battered, said:

"Uncontrolled stripping of hard coal, especially in the southern fields, easily could result in bottling up, where it might never be recovered, enough hard coal to supply the Nation's needs for the next 50 years."

Some mine workers long have opposed the practice, which involves stripping of the ground surface from coal veins with power shovels. They argue that it lowers property values and makes fewer jobs than ordinary shaft mining.

Col. Lynn G. Adams, head of the State police, visited temporary headquarters at Pine Grove today and said his men had been directed to maintain order.

Gov. James said State police would be assigned at any time to break up riots, but asserted he would not "now, or at any time during my term of office, use them to protect private activities which I believe to be contrary to the public welfare."

Frank Correale, lessee of one of the stripping operations, said private policemen were hired to protect the property after State officials had "ignored repeated requests for State police proteection."

Strongest in opposition to coal stripping are the so-called "bootleg" miners—men who operate their own make-shift workings on land that frequently is owned by the major coal companies.

Training Planes Collide; Three Instructors Killed

Augusta, Ga., July 10 (AP).—Three instructors of the Georgia Aero Tech Flying School were killed and a cadet bailed out unhurt in the collison of two trainer planes near Kathwood, S. C., late today.

Capt. A. J. McVea, Air Corps supervisor at the school, said the instructors were J. W. Dionne, K. A. Yawn and Don C. Bush, and the student was Vincent K. Relyea.

The low-wing BT-15 monoplanes collided at an altitude of about 600 feet, McVey said, approximately a mile from Kathwood, some 10 miles from Augusta. Two instructors were in one plane and the student and another instructor in the other.

Georgia Aero Tech is training 95 fliers for the Army.

Benson Ford, Son of Edsel, Weds in Detroit

Detroit, July 10 (AP).—Honeymoon-bound Benson Ford and his petite bride, the former Edith McNaughton, were en route to California today after their marriage linking two of the best-known families of the automobile industry.

Benson, 21, second son of Edsel Ford and grandson of Henry Ford, and Miss McNaughton, also 21, were married yesterday afternoon in Christ Church of Groose Pointe in an intimate family setting. Benson's brother, Henry II, a Navy ensign, was best man.

Only recently Benson Ford was rejected for military service because of an eye defect.

When the newlyweds return, they will live in a large, white brick, Georgian-style home. It was a gift from Mr. and Mrs. Edsel Ford, who were reported to have paid $60,000 for it.

Ringside Table

With Mary Harris

"YOU WOULDN'T BELIEVE IT." But the Neptune Room's second Tuesday "Impersonator Night" measured right up to the stratospheric standard set in the first event . . . Young Joe Coleman, of Catholic University, took the cake with his idea of how various stage stars would recite nursery rhymes. What he did with a combination of Alexander Woollcott and "Baa, Baa, Black Sheep" was something for the book . . . Runners-up were lovely Bertha Gerber and Evangeline Tully in impressions of Ann Miller's tap-stepping and Jeannette MacDonald's singing . . . And very nearly in the money was Jimmy Hawkins, a high-schoolish looking lad whose impersonation of "Cookie" Bowers' Coney Island bit was a panic . . . Frank Portillo, Washington's famed former Ringling clown, wasn't in the contest but added to the fun by parading "Frank Portillo, jr.," his marionette clown . . . Among the overflow crowd who've found out that Neptune Tuesdays are wonderful we saw Artist Dick Lord, of The Post, and Dorothy Ramspeck, daughter of Representative Robert Ramspeck . . . A missing judge was the Star's Harry MacArthur. He'd been married that afternoon.

Restaurant "823" has installed Harold Veo's delightful new trio as a special midsummer treat. Besides Violinist Veo, the group includes Pianist Charlie Bates and versatile Jimmy Nichols, singer, saxaphonist, guitarist and clarinetist.

DANCE WITHOUT MUSIC. Marco and Beryle, new Casino Royal stars, do a dazzling dance without music while spectators sit in a bewitched silence. Their flashy climax is the best of the year with Marco spinning Beryle high on his upheld hands for many minutes, whirling her on his shoulder without any support whatever. It's a splendid act that will bear comparison with any you've seen in either theater or floor shows. N. B. We probably shouldn't mention it, but Marco's the boy who broke into headlines a few seasons ago by chasing a big league baseball player at knife point down the corridors of a Havana hotel. Marco, it seems, is possessive about his women while the ball player was a subscriber to the share-the-wealth theory in matters of love.

KEN OVERLIN, former middleweight champion and present WWDC commentator, is an old friend and a great appreciator of Harry Mitchell's Chordsmen now appearing in Mayfair. His recent radio tribute to them was based on intimate knowledge of their development in recent years.

STARLIGHTERS' TUMBLE. Those decorations of adhesive tape worn by Johnny Nicholas and Jack Condon of Dick Wilson's Starlight Roof orchestra are the outcome of a triple somersault recently executed by their automobile. They came to a sharp and unexpected turn on a country road—and didn't turn. The car is now scrap metal. Johnny has six broken ribs and Jack's forehead is decorated with surgical hemstitching. But the payoff came when a customer recently hesistated long enough in a tango to ask Maestro Wilson, "Say, how does the other band look?"

"The Reluctant Dragon" is being heard in the Mayflower Lounge, as a foretaste of the full picture soon due at R-K-O Keith's. Ted Alexander sings the Gilbert-and-Sullivanish lyrics with the rest of Dick Koons' band chiming in on the chorus.

PRETTY GIRLS AND FROCKS. Eileen George, of the Anchor Room, is hectically attractive in her cherry red midriff formal with heavy gold clips and bracelet . . . Completely startling was the tiny blonde we saw in Hi Hat wearing a basque frock of ivory glazed chintz in a rose pattern. You immediately thought she'd robbed the family sofa of its slip cover but the effect was charming . . . Dancer Talia at the Shoreham looks like a roving rainbow in the chiffons of her scarf dance . . . Little Leslie Hare, of the Robin Hood, is sleek as a peppermint stick in claret colored satin . . . Chic Eileen O'Neill, of Burt's Trans-Lux, gives a new twist to the nautical by wearing a pink middy suit high-lighted with white . . . Dancer Theodora at the Lotus is truly stunning in pale blue chiffon with rose-red petticoats and huge, frosty clips and shoulder straps of brilliants.

THE ANNIVERSARY DE LUXE. Violinist Durward Bowersox, of the Rainbow Room, has just celebrated his first wedding anniversary by presenting his pretty wife, Georgia, with a convertible Buick with red leather upholstery. This is making it awfully tough for the other husbands.

MELODY THAT'S BEAUTIFUL. "Talking To the Wind, enchanting new tune being played by Pete Macias' orchestra in the Lounge Riviera. Pete thinks it's even more magical than "High On a Windy Hill." . . . "There Will Come a Day," a rare Swedish song that's the favorite of gypsy Laczi, of the Plymouth . . . All of those Spanish numbers played by the Madrillon's Trio Lirico. But probably it isn't the music so much as the authentic Latin-American touch of the Lirico lads . . . Eve Knight's special, "Argentine Skies," in the King Cole Room. It has one unforgettable line, "My heart beats like thunder" . . . The lulling rhythm of "Green Eyes" when it floats from Bert Bernath's orchestra in the Pall Mall Room.

Paul Kain, Glen Echo's goodlooking young maestro, began to be self supporting at the age of eleven when he got a job as a candy maker's apprentice. We understand that the candy maker's profits took a sharp drop right after he hired Master Kain.

GREATA BIGGA MEALS. The hors d'ouevre at the Silver Fox. One of these lavish plates of appetizers and you're ready for coffee and dessert . . . The seafood dinners at Olmsted's Grill. All of the superior denizens of the sea are represented in this undersea galaxy of goodies . . . Dinners at the Harrington Tavern are pop price but lavish in quantity, cooked to a nicety . . . A delicious addition, lamb chow mein, has been added to the "plantation dinners" at O'Donnell's Farmhouse.

RUSTIC SOPHISTICATION is the keynote of the Nightingale. It's embowered in the countryside down below Alexandria with honeysuckle clambering about the eaves. But that's where the rustic simplicity ceases. Rodd Raffell's dance music is notable hereabouts for dashing modernism and originality.

A SUMMER TREAT. During the summer there will be no cover or minimum at Kavakos Grill except on Saturdays. The regular schedule of special nights will be continued with country dancing in order on Tuesday and Sunday afternoons, while the hobby horse races are off on Thursdays.

Mr. 'Red' Grange Defends a Friend

Chicago, July 10.—Football's original galloping ghost, the man who shook a thousand tacklers loose, is again carrying the ball these days for his old coach. Harold "Red" Grange hung up his famed "77" jersey and put his cleats away a half dozen years ago, but he is still in there battling for Bob Zuppke.

POVICH

Zuppke's job at the University of Illinois is threatened after 28 years as head coach. Reportedly, the trustees have asked him to resign and plan to turn the head coaching job over to Athletic Director Wendell Wilson. Zuppke doesn't want to resign even on the promise of a pension, and his old football pupils are rallying to his aid. Grange, of course, is the most famous.

In a formal statement the other day, Grange broadcast a fiery defense of his old coach and it received all of the publicity that such an utterance by Illinois' most famed football player could command. "In the first place," said Grange, "it is ridiculous to say that Zuppke has outlived his usefulness and is out of date in football coaching."

In a fine display of loyalty to his old coach, Grange revealed the movement to oust Zuppke as an effort begun two and a half years ago. According to Grange, Wilson in 1938 offered him a job as a coaching assistant at his alma mater, When the surprised Grange asked who would be the head coach under the new set up, Wilson asserted Grange said, that Zuppke was being retired and that he (Wilson) would be the new head coach. Grange refused to have anything to do with an Illinois coaching regime that did not include his old mentor as head man.

The Original 'T' Formation

Refuting all stories to the effect that Zuppke's methods of football are outmoded, Grange today was saying that Zuppke, in fact, originated the "T" formation of attack for which no defense has yet been perfected. "When I joined the Chicago Bears in 1925," said Grange, "they were using the "T" formation, and Coach George Halas told me that they had picked it up from Zuppke at Illinois. It wasn't new to me, of course, in it's basic form.

"Zuppke had taught us the "T" formation. The Bears were being coached by George Halas and Dutch Sternaman, two of Zuppke's former students, and when Ralph Jones joined the Bears as coach, he brought to the pros all of the latest developments of the "T" formation from Zuppke. Eventually, George Helas refined the "T" formation some more and that's the attack you now have which is being copied by pro and college teams all over the country.

"How can they say that a man like Zuppke who gave to football its most modern style of attack is outmoded? They can't make that statement in truth."

The famous red-head told some more about Zuppke. "He had things worked out perfectly. Zup considered that it was necessary for me to carry the ball 31 times during a game in order to make the touchdowns necessary to win. Zuppke's style of offensive football strategy is peculiarly adapted for my type of player and my long runs to touchdowns were no accident. Zuppke always provided for that kind of running by giving his backs adequate protection and down-field blocking."

Bad Material, Not Coaching, Blamed

Grange blames the lack of material rather than any deficiency in the coaching staff for the recent lack of success at Illinois, and he pointed out that Zuppke should not be compelled to scour the countryside for proper material. "That is the job of other workers for the university," said Grange, "and Zup should not be humiliated or driven to do things below his great dignity, like recruiting football players."

Old Illinois men are solidly behind Zuppke, Grange declared. "Zup's prestige is known from Coast to Coast. President David McKinley once told me that when he made a speaking tour on the Pacific Coast, no one knew who the president of Illinois was, but everybody was interested when he mentioned the name of Bob Zuppke. It would be an irreparable loss to Illinois if Zup is forced out."

What Grange is doing, of course, is going all out for his old coach. In 1924, after he became the most famous figure in all football and quit college to accept cash from pro football, college officials generally frowned on Grange's move. He was profaning his college career to play football for money, they intimated. And the red-head was half tempted to forego the cash which he could earn in large amounts. But Zuppke gave him friendly counsel and Grange went on to more fame and a sizeable fortune as a pro player.

Now it's Zuppke who needs a lift to hold the job he has kept for 28 years, and as we said at the beginning the red-head is in there carrying the ball for his old coach for old time's sake and something more that comes under the heading of going down the line for an old friend.

Louis Slipping? Yes and No

New York, July 10.—The trouble with most of the men who fought Joe "I'm slipping'" Louis a year and more ago was that they were too frightened. The trouble with Billy Conn was that he wasn't frightened enough. And now Lou Nova, already in preliminary training for the September match, is developing the same harmful virtue of bravery that led to Billy's doom just when Billy was nudging up to a million bucks.

CONSIDINE

Joe is right when he says he's slipping. He's been slipping since the night he put Max Schmeling in the hospital. Every athlete must have his peak, and that was Joe's. In most sports the peak last over a period of months or even years. But in fighting, usually, the crest of the peak is reached and passed in one fight, because the fierce will that generated the power to climb that peak is never quite so fierce after that. A fighter becomes sated rather easily. There is an old saying in the ring that a man is never quite as good again as the night he wins his title. And that's true more often than not.

But Joe's punch isn't slipping, Babe Ruth hit them as far during his last year in baseball as he hit them in 1927. But he didn't hit them as often. It takes Joe longer to quell a quarrel these days, but he quells them.

Joe probably would prefer the peace of retirement on his Michigan farm, and may have a stomach full of the ring game, but when he gets in that good, shocking punch that makes a man's knees buckle, he's still a terribly sinister figure—stalking his injured prey for the kill, and sighting their chins down the short double-barreled shotgun of his thick nose. The punches with which he finished Conn were good enough to finish even the more durable Nova, for Lou's hide cuts much easier than Billy's and if he weren't counted out, as Billy was, the referee probably would have had to stop the fight to save Lou's blood for Britain.

Louis to Kayo or Be Kayoed

From this distance, I predict that Nova either will get knocked out in a couple of rounds, or that he will knock out Joe near the end of the 15 rounds. It depends mostly on Nova's attitude going into the ring. Lou takes a curiously stubborn pride in his ability to take it. He invited Max Baer to clout him on the jaw and Max did, swinging from the floor. Nova shuddered but the light still shone in his lantern jaw. He comes back and stopped Baer by dint of an accumulation of clumsy-looking but fundamentally sound punches. The rub is that Louis would have followed up the kind of punch Baer landed with a barrage of equally hard punches, whereas Baer stepped back and gave Nova the chance to get his bearings and eradicate the cobwebs in his jarred brain.

If Nova can generate a slight terror of Louis and stay away from him until he is tired and discouraged, Nova ought to win, if he respectfully remembers in addition that Louis is dangerous until he's flat on his back. But generating a respect for Louis' prowess is going to be harder for Nova to assimilate than some of the more intricate teachings of his beloved Yoga.

Sam Snead won the medal in the PGA at Denver with two fine 69's over an exasperating course. But we can't see his ever winning the tournament. The PGA, as you probably know, consists of two rounds of medal play, and then the rest of it is match play—where it's a case of man vs. man instead of man vs. par. Sam's not an outstanding match player. Good match players are inherently stubborn, bull-doggish and stick-in-there-and-die types. Sam fights the invisible spectre of par much better than he fights a grim, flesh and blood foe. I'd Rank Nelson, Hogan, Picard, Sarazen, Wood and Runyan over him, as match players.

Little Best Match Player

The greatest match player in the game is Lawson Little, but he is barred from the PGA because of a silly rule which insists that only pros who have worked at the lowlier jobs around a golf shop, and for a period of five years, are eligible. Little was the world's greatest amateur when he turned pro. To ask him to go through the slightly crummy apprentice period which the eligibility rule calls for would be like asking Pete Reiser, the great Dodger rookie, to serve a stretch as the club's bat-boy.

Hogan Defeats Horton Smith on 35th; Denny Shute, Jimmy Hines Win Easily

By the Associated Press

Denver, July 10.—Defending Champion Byron Nelson, Medalist Sam Snead and Gene Sarazen, the old master, achieved third-round victories in the twenty-fourth P. G. A. Tournament today, Snead barely by the thickness of his putting blade.

It was a day of general par-wrecking at Cherry Hills in partly cloudy weather, and the leading smashers were Lloyd Mangrum, a thin, mustached Californian, and little Ben Hogan, top money winner of the year.

Mangrum, from Monterey Park, was four under par for 36 bitterly battled holes in stopping another hot Californian, Mark Fry, of Oakland, 1 up. Hogan was three under card figures in his 2 and 1 triumph over Horton Smith, of Pinehurst, N. C.—a match as heart breaking for Smith to lose as was Fry's. Smith might be pardoned if he took an axe and chopped down a 9-foot spruce tree near the ninth green for it marked the turning point of his struggle with Hogan.

Guldahl Over Par

Nelson, the Texan from Toledo, although as yet unable to crack par himself, put an icepack on Ralph Guldahl's sizzling sub-par shooting and erased the twice Open champion from Chicago, 4 and 3. Nelson was one over par for the distance while Guldahl, seven under for 65 holes previously, went six over today.

The champion said, "I was putting better than yesterday and he wasn't putting as well as usual."

Snead, the darling of the mountain country galleries, who had to battle 23 holes in his first round match yesterday, was behind most of the way in his fray with Mike Turnesa, of Elmsford, N. Y., one of seven links brothers, until he finally pulled even at the thirty-first with a par four. They traded par for par to the uphill thirty-sixth, where the West Virginia hillbilly got home safely in two while Turnesa missed the green and needed five.

Gene Wins Easily

Sarazen, who has won three P. G. A. titles and is competing in his twenty-first meet, played one of the best golf matches of his long career in blasting Bruce Coltart, of Absecona, N. J., 9 and 7. It was the worst shellacking of the day.

The knicker-garbed little squire was under par in capturing his forty-seventh victory in P. G. A. national competition, against only 16 defeats. At 39 he is three years older than any man gaining tomorrow's quarterfinals and still retains his chances of becoming the oldest man to win the crown.

Denny Shute, the quiet, baldish Chicagoan who twice has won this event, pushed safely ahead with a 5-and-3 verdict over Leonard Ott, of Edgewater, Colo., the high coun-

Parker Gains Semifinals At Spring Lake

By the Associated Press

Spring Lake, N. J., July 10.—Frankie Parker, the Altadena, Calif., defending champion, led seeded stars into the semifinal round of the ninth annual Spring Lake Invitation Tennis Tournament today.

Parker polished off Arthur Marx, Hollywood, Calif., 6—3, 6—1, then eliminated sixth-seeded Edward Alloo, of Palo Alto, Calif., 6—1, 6—3, in the quarter-finals.

Gardner Mulloy, of Coral Gables, Fla., seeded fourth and runnerup to Parker here in the 1939 and 1940 tournaments, was eliminated in the quarter-final round by Frederick R. Schroeder, jr., of Glendale, Calif., 6—3, 6—1.

Gaining the semifinals with Parker and Schroeder were second-seeded Wayne R. Sabin, Reno, Nev., and John A. Kramer, East Los Angeles, Calif., seeded third.

Sabin's Victory Impressive

Sabin turned in the most impressive victory of the day as he polished off Francis X. Shields, of New York, former Davis Cup star, 6—2, 6—1, in less than 45 minutes. Kramer eliminated Frnacisco Segura, South American champion from Ecuador, and the tournament's only foreign entrant, 6—2, 6—3.

Doubles competition got under way with the three seeded teams winning easily. Schroeder and Kramer, the defending champions, won over Charles Highley, jr., and Robert Newhouse, jr., of Spring Lake, 6—0, 6—1; Parker and Charles Mattmann, of Los Angeles, Calif., seeded second, whipped J. P. Stockton, of New York, and Fred C. Baggs, of Forest Hills, N. Y., 6—2, 6—3, and the third seeded pair of Sabin and Mulloy beat David Edwards and Robert Kuser of Spring Lake, 6—0, 6—4.

Chisox Deal Nats 8th Loss In Row, 5-1

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Chicago, July 10.—Consecutive defeat No. 8 befell the Nats this evening, because they did not play this afternoon. The schedule called for a night game. They met up with the White Sox under the lights of Comiskey Field and the White Sox made light of 'em. The score was 5 to 1.

Long John Rigney, Chicago pitcher who was turned down by the Army last month as unfit, was in high good health this evening. He held the Nats to seven hits. A crowd of 17,949 attended the proceedings.

Manager Jimmy Dykes of the White Sox, suspended indefinitely for the new crime of using offensive language to umpires, watched the game from a grandstand seat. He thoroughly approved of the strategy of the managerless White Sox, which consisted chiefly of banging two Washington pitchers for 14 hits and scoring in five different innings.

Sox Chase Chase

Ken Chase gave up 11 of the 14 Chicago hits in the six innings he worked, and Alex Carrasquel yielded three blows and the last White Sox run. While Chase was in there, the Sox collected at least one hit in every inning.

There was only one consolation for the Nats. Cecil Travis hit safely to stretch to 19 games his fast-growing consecutive-game hitting streak. Travis was held hitless in his first two times at bat, but he preserved his streak by banging a clear single to center in the sixth inning and two innings later he duplicated that blow.

The Nats avoided a shutout by coming up with a run in the seventh inning when Jimmy Bloodworth, of all people, slugged a three-bagger into the right field corner. He scored on Pinch Hitter Cliff Bolton's infield out, Bolton was appearing as a pinch hitter for the Nats for the eighth time since joining the club last month and for the eighth time he wasn't getting a hit to preserve his .000 average, in that department.

Chisox Were Lucky (?)

At that, the White Sox were lucky to win the game—honest. A half dozen of their most productive hits off Chase and Carrasquel were infield "bloopers" or tantalizing Texas Leaguers. And in the fourth inning the Nats were deprived of at

Ferrell Family Feuding Again —This Time as Rival Managers

Wes Also Blasts Casey Stengel, Pilot Of Boston Braves

By the Associated Press

Martinsville, Va., July 10.—Wes Ferrell, of the Guilford County, N. C., baseball Ferrells, would like to cancel those two games he won for the Boston Braves before Casey Stengel let him go early in the season.

The big blond, who came down as manager of the Leaksville (N. C.) club in the Bi-State League where Brother George pilots Martinsville, sat in George's clubhouse discussing the activities of Brother Rick, now catching for the St. Louis Browns, and questioning the managerial judgment of Mr. Stengel.

"I had won two games and lost one for the seventh-place Braves this year when Casey handed me my outright release," he moaned. "I can't pitch good up there in Boston until the weather gets hot. And what d'ya know?

"Just as soon as my arm began to supple up a bit under the heat, Stengel releases me. I'm considering wiring him and asking him to return my two victories for the Braves. In his spot they wouldn't make much difference.

Wes and George agree that baseball doesn't owe either one of them a thing, and as for Brother Rick, who sold himself for $25,000 a few years ago after being declared a free agent, "well—he doesn't need to talk about money."

In view of the short-sightedness of the Boston front office, Wes said he's content to stay around and use his Leaksville job as a stepping stone to a better pilot's job in the minors. And he may turn pro golfer and tour the winter circuit.

Meanwhile, he's occupied with trying to stop Brother George's Martinsville club and particularly Brother George, who personally accounted for six runs in a victory over Leaksville the other night by three home runs and a single.

Joe Gordon's Homer Wins For Yanks, 1-0

By International News Service

St. Louis, July 10.—Joe DiMaggio hit safely in his forty-ninth consecutive game tonight as the New York Yankees defeated the St. Louis Browns, 1 to 0, for their tenth straight victory.

Alan Strange, Brownie shortstop, barely got his hands on the ball as it bounded on into left field for a base hit. In DiMaggio's only other appearance, he lifted a high fly to Chet Laabs in right field in the fourth inning.

It was Joe Gordon's thirteenth home run of the season, coming in the second inning with the bases empty, which decided the duel between Lefty Gomez and Niggeling.

Giants MakeUp 8-Run Deficit But Lose, 13-9

By the Associated Press

New York, July 10.—The St. Louis Cardinals blew an eight-run lead in the seventh inning, but came right back with a five-run blast of their own in the eighth to down the Giants, 13 to 9, in a weird ball game before a crowd of 24,894 at the Polo Grounds.

Both clubs went through a lot of peculiar motions that had no relation to baseball before Howard Krist, the fourth Cards pitcher, finished out the game to take credit as the winning hurler and end St. Louis five-game losing streak. Johnny Wittig, who toiled through the Cards' eighth-inning spree, was the loser.

Five homers were hit, three by the Giants. The Cards collected 17 hits off four New York elbowers.

The Cards took an eight-run lead behind Max Lanier in the first five innings, with a home run by Gus Mancuso and a three-run round-tripper by Coaker Triplett helping things along.

Then the Giants took their turn in the seventh and got the eight runs right back again. Homers by Pinch Hitter Joe Orengo and First Sacker Babe Young, the latter with the bases loaded, sparked a splurge that drove not only Lanier but two other Cardinal twirlers to the showers before it was over.

But Wittig was clubbed immediately for five hits and as many runs and the Cards had it on ice, this time for keeps. Dick Bartell belted a round-tripper in the eighth to wind it up.

Feller Scores Run That Counts on Boudreau's Single; Dean Is Loser

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, July 10.—Bob Feller scored the winning run in his seventeenth victory of the year tonight by tripling in the ninth inning and coming home on Lou Boudreau's single to give Cleveland a 3 to 2 decision over Philadelphia. It was "Bob Feller night" and 32,820 fans watched the 22-year-old fireballer notch the ninety-ninth triumph of his major league career.

Bob limited the Athletics to six scattered hits, but the visitors tallied a run in the fifth inning without a hit as three batters walked and another grounded out. Philadelphia had scored in the opening inning on Al Brancato's single, a walk, a sacrifice and a fly.

Oscar Grimes, playing first base, in place of Hal Trosky, paced Cleveland's ten-hit attack against Chubby Dean and Tom Ferrick with a double and three singles. Ferrick was charged with the defeat.

William Feller, Bob's father, presented the young pitcher with the Sporting News scroll as "Player of 1940" in pre-game ceremonies. More than 4,000 of the city's sandlot stars attended and gave Bob a plaque.

The Indians' first two runs came in the second inning on Gerry Walker's double, singles by Grimes, Feller and Gene Desautels, an error and a walk

Standard Linen Ten Meets Plaza

Standard Linen will endeavor to strengthen its hold on second place in the Merchant's Softball League tonight, when the Linenmen engage Plaza Wine and Liquor in the nightcap of a double-header at Ballston Stadium. In the opener at 7:45 p. m. the league-leading Senate Beer ten meets Manhattan Auto and Radio.

Standard currently holds second place by a margin of a full game over International Business Machines. A victory tonight would boost that lead, while a setback would trim the margin to but a half game.

Higbe's Five-Hit Pitching Beats Reds for Dodgers, 8 to 3

Medwick's First-Inning Homer Helps

Herman, Lavagetto Also Star at Bat; Reiser Is Hitless; Vander Meer Bows

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, July 10.—Ducky Medwick, Cookie Lavagetto and Billy Herman drove in all of the Brooklyn runs today as the league-leading Dodgers, behind Kirby Higbe's five-hit pitching, mowed down the Cincinnati Reds, 9 to 3.

Each of the big guns got two hits, Medwick a home run, his tenth of the year, and a single, and Lavagetto and Herman two doubles apiece. But while the Dodgers bagged 10 safeties in all, young Pete Reiser went hitless for the first time in 19 games.

Brooklyn opened up on Johnny Vander Meer in the first inning, when Peewee Reese singled, Lavagetto banged the first of his two-baggers into short right field, and Medwick followed with his homer for three runs. Two walks and Herman's first double drove in two more in the second frame, and sent Vander Meer to the showers, to be replaced by Whitey Moore.

Moore checked the Dodgers for one inning, but was clipped for three runs on as many hits in the fourth, on singles by Higbe and Medwick, an error by Joost, Herman's double off the right field wall, and an infield out. Joe Beggs took over the pitching for Cincinnati at the start of the fifth, and turned Brooklyn back with one hit the rest of the way.

The Reds hit Higbe in only four innings, and scored in two of them. A single by Lonnie Frey and Frank McCormick's double to left center brought one home in the fourth, while a walk, a double by Frey, a long fly and an infield out brought two more in the eighth.

It was Higbe's twelfth victory against six defeats. Vander Meer's record now is seven won and nine lost.

Popular Banks To Race Here Again Tuesday

Through popular demand Henry Banks, youthful Royal Oak (Mich.) speed wizard, will be back in the field Tuesday night when midget automobile racing is continued at the West Lanham (Md.) Speedway at 8:30 o'clock.

General Manager Eddie Bean yesterday announced that Banks will be paid a substantial appearance guarantee in order to return here.

Banks set 5,200 spectators into an uproar this past Tuesday when he bounced back in the second semi-final to set a new West Lanham speed mark of 60 miles per hour.

Banks, unknown to many, left a sick bed against the advice of his physician last Tuesday afternoon to catch a plane en route here from New York after having had his automobile towed to Lanham. He was still suffering from a heavy cold and running a temperature when he made his debut on the new track.

Not only did Banks steal the show in the preliminary and semi-final events but he had gained a commanding lead in the feature race when he blew a tire with only six laps to go and in so doing lost a heart-breaking race to Ernie Gesell.

Olsen Hurls And Bats Cubs To 3-1 Victory

By the Associated Press

Boston, July 10.—The Chicago Cubs opened a three-game series with the Boston Braves today by registering a 3 to 1 triumph behind the seven-hit pitching of Lefty Vern Olsen.

Olsen clinched the victory, his sixth of the season, in the seventh inning when he singled to center to drive in Babe Dahlgren.

The Cubs nicked Alva Javery for their initial tally in the first inning when Stan Hack singled, moved to third on a passed ball and a long fly, and romped home after Bill Nicholson lashed out the first of his two hits.

The Braves tied matters by registering an unearned run in the sixth when Sibby Sisti raced to second after Dom Dallessandro dropped his fly in left field. Sisti gained another base when Johnny Cooney grounded out and scored as Buddy Hassett singled.

A pass to Dallessandro, Nicholson's double and Augie Galan's fly gave the Cubs a run to spare in the eighth. Nicholson's extra hit blow was the only one of the game and he alone connected safely more than once.

Jeanne Cline, Miss Campbell Golf Finalists

By the Associated Press

St. Charles, Ill., July 10.—Jeanne Cline, 17-year-old tournament medalist, of Bloomington, Ill., and Dorothey Campbell, St. Louis, Mo., junior titleholder, will meet tomorrow in the final match for the women's Western junior golf championship over the links of the St. Charles Country Club.

Miss Cline qualified today for the finals with an easy 6 and 5 victory over Betty Brown, of Texarkana, Ark., while Miss Campbell scored a thrilling 22-hole upset over pretty 15-year-old Betty Jane Haemerle, also of St. Louis. The youthful Haemerle girl came from behind on the last nine to overcome Miss Campbell and tied her with a par 3 on the eighteenth. After halving the nineteenth, Betty Jane lost a golden chance for victory when she nervously missed a 1-foot putt on the twentieth. The twenty-first was halved, and then Miss Haemerle's tee shot on the twenty-second landed in the rough and she lost the hole to Dorothy's par 5.

The favored Cline girl was only one over woman's par on the first nine with a 39, best score thus far in the tournament.

Capital City Club Secretary Won Five Straight in '41 Series

Neither thunderstorm nor heat wave nor severe head wind could stop Lady Faithful, champion homing pigeon from the loft of William R. Pennington, and the result was a 600-mile race victory which was instrumental in Pennington's loft winning the Capital City Racing Pigeon Club's best average speed diploma.

Pennington, secretary of the club and probably the East's best known carrier pigeon fancier, achieved the remarkable record of five consecutive victories in the recently completed "old bird" series of nine races.

His birds, flying a distance of 3,179,901 miles in 103 hours 54.34 minutes, won two 300-mile races from Akron, Ohio, two 500-mile flights from Nappanne, Ind., and the last 600-mile race from Chicago, Ill. His speed record was 897.67 yards per minute.

It was the last victory that furnished Pennington with his proudest moment, for he not only won first but one of his favorites, Rex, a 5-year-old red cheek cock, placed a second a few minutes after the winner, Lady Faithful, 6-year-old. Rex won the 600-mile diploma in 1939 and placed second last year.

Pennington, whose lofts in the rear of his home at 3226 Fourth Street Southeast have attracted the envious eyes of the United States Signal Corps, was the only owner to report entries in record time in each of the nine old bird races.

The victory of Lady Faithful in the Chicago-Washington flight was achieved under the most adverse weather conditions. She not only had to fight a 110-degree heat wave but ran into heavy thunderstorms and wind on the way, arriving in Washington at 3:10 p. m., after being liberated the previous day at 5:15 a. m.

Betting Hits New High on Senate, Kavakos Game

The largest single wager ever made on the outcome of a softball game locally will be made when Senate Beer and Kavakos Grill collide in their "grudge" battle softball game next Wednesday night under the lights of Griffith Stadium at 8:30 o'clock.

With the D. C. Softball Association, which is sponsoring the game, and the United States Service Organization funds splitting the proceeds, the game has already started furious controversies in both camps, prompting Mike Sklar, president of the Merchants Night League, where Senate Beer plays, and "Big Bill" Kavakos, sponsor of his Grillmen, of the Capital City League, to suggest a bet.

Sklar named a sum which Kavoks promptly doubled. Sklar, taken aback for the time being, heatedly said he would double the sum Kavakos named. Kavakos merely told Mike to name any sum he wanted requesting only that the money be posted with a neutral and responsible party before game time. Sklar promised.

Pirates Score 5 in 8th, Beat Phils, 6 to 3

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, July 10.—Exploding five runs in the eighth inning, the Pittsburgh Pirates came from behind tonight to defeat the last-place Phillies, 6 to 3, before 4,630 fans. Tommy Hughes walked in two runs and gave two singles to help the Pirates with their big inning.

Until the eighth, Hughes pitched five-hit ball and enjoyed a 3-1 lead. First Baseman Nick Etten drove in a run in the first with a single and hit a home run in the sixth after Joe Marty had scored on Tom Livingston's long fly.

The Pirates, who got one run in the seventh when Bob Elliott scored on Vince DiMaggio's fly, put together three singles, three walks and an error for their five-run splurge in the eighth.

Stu Martin started it off by reaching first on Danny Murtaugh's error. Arky Vaughan and Debs Garms followed with singles. Hughes purposely walked Jimmy Collins and then lost his control to walk Van Robays and DiMaggio. Livingston let a pitch get away from him, and Frank Gustine's single off Ike Pearson capped the uprising.

Ernie Dusek Tops Coleman, Clutch and All

The "Coleman Clutch" slipped last night at Turner's Arena and Abie, the inventor, fell victim to Ernie Dusek after 42 minutes of groan artistry at its peak.

Abie fell two dropkicks and a clutch short of victory, as a matter of fact. He was dribbling Durable Ernie all over the ring when he made the mistake of bouncing him off a rope. Ernie rebounded onto Abie's chest. Abie's head hit the ring floor and it was all over. Abie was waltzing down dream street.

In the preliminaries Wadislaw Talun upset the Green Hornet in 11½ minutes, disposing of the masked lad as easily as he would polish off a hot fudge sundae.

Maurish LaChappelle and Ace Freeman teamed up to subjugate Eddie Newman and Angelo Leone in straight falls in a schedule 30-minute tango, and Fred Grobmier took the decision over Hans Kampfer.

Center Market Beats D.G.S., 2-1

Frank Watt's seven-hit pitching kept the Center Market baseball team's record intact in the second half of the Departmental League as the leaders nosed out D. G. S., 2 to 1, yesterday on the Monument diamond. It marked the Marketmen's fourth victory.

Watt was aided by the stick work of "Unie" Stadler and Quentin Gabrielli, the former collecting three hits and the latter, two. Watt struck out 11 batsmen.

Two Seeded Players Upset In Interscholastic Net Tourney

Dorfman, Moses Win Surprise Matches; Reggie Cooper Loses to New Yorker

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, July 10.—Irvin Dorfman, New York City, and John R. Moses, Exeter, N. H., provided the first upset of the National interscholastic Tennis Tournament today by eliminating two of the eight seeded players to move into the quarter-final round.

Dorfman defeated sixth-seeded Fred Krais, Pelham, N. Y., 0—6, 6—2, 6—3, while Moses eliminated Randall Clark, Tulsa, Okla., No. 7, in another three-set battle, 6—8, 6—2, 6—4.

E. Victor Seixas, the favorite from Philadelphia, played his first match of the tourney and brushed aside Joseph Pickering, of Youngstown, Ohio, 6—2, 6—4. Seixas, seeded No. 1, previously had drawn a bye and had advanced by default.

Second-seeded James Evert, of Chicago, National Indoor Junior champion, downed Frank Kovaleski, Hamtramck, Mich., 6—4, 7—5. Bill Vogt, Pottstown, Pa., who hasn't been extended to three sets since the competition began, put Scott Stickle, of Scarborough, N. Y., out of the running with a 7—5, 6—2 triumph.

Richard Hart, Miami, Fla.; Blair Hawler, Exeter, N. H., and Grant Small, Scarborough, N. Y., completed the round of eight. Hart scored a 6—3, 6—3 victory over Richard Shipp, Harrisburg, Pa.; Hawley beat Edwin Ernst, Overbrook, Pa., 6—4, 6—2, and Small defeated Reggie Cooper, Washington, D. C., 6—4, 4—6 6—4.

The doubles match got under way today with a small field competing and worked through the quarter-final round. The quarter-final singles will be played tomorrow and both the sem-finals singles and doubles will be played Saturday, with the finals scheduled for Sunday afternoon.

Hillsdale Show Tomorrow For Refugees

Among those who plan to show are Betty Couzens with Jag, Mr. and Mrs. Gardner Hallman with Applejack and Lady Jack, Margaret Cotter with Rocksette, Charles Fletcher with Nanette, Anne Hagner with Show Girl, Jackie Warren with David, Eddie Talbert with Good Friday and Crusoe, Eva Rabbitt with Jacks Queen, and George Lawrence with Tiger Annie.

In addition, the usual hunt country folk from the Middleburg-Warrenton neighborhood will send horses and ponies, including Mrs. James Hamilton's Donnottar Pony Farm string, J. North Fletcher with a hitherto unexhibited 3-year-old, Mildred Gulick, Alex Calvert, Pine Brook Farm, Oliver Iselin, jr., Sally Spilman, Gloria Galban, Aubrey Fishback, and many other Old Dominion enthusiasts.

The committee, headed by Marion Sanders, has purposely kept fences low in most of the classes so that exhibitors with green horses will have ample opportunity for schooling. In two events, the touch-and-out and the knockdown-and-out, the jumps will be set at 4 feet, but during the rest of the day, 3 and 3½ feet will be the maximum.

Classes, beginning at 10 a. m., are for hunter hacks, working hunters, hunter pairs, bareback jumping, handy hunters, ladies' hunters, green hunters, touch-and-out, handicap, grooms, pony hunters, saddle ponies, pony touch-and-out, knockdown-and-out, 4-year-olds and under over fences, road hacks and horsemanship, with no age limit. Two championships will be awarded, for ponies and hunters.

Cooksey and Gilbert led the eight-hit batting attack for Fat Boy.

Mako, Other Stars Win at N. J. Tennis

Ocean City, N. J., July 10 (AP).—The first four seeded players in the Atlantic Coast Tennis Tournament moved into semi-finals of the men's singles today.

Geno Mako of Los Angeles, who arrived a day late, eliminated Everson Pearsall of Westfield, N. J., 6—0, 6—0; George Pero of Miami University, 6—3, 6—2, and Ronald Edwards of San Jose, Calif., 4—6, 6—0, 6—0.

Ted Olewine of Santa Monica, Calif., seeded second, defeated Jim Angel of Angelos, 6—2, 6—1; Jerry Crowther of Los Angeles, 6—2, 6—0, and William Gillespie of Atlanta, Ga., 11—9, 6—1.

Third-seeded Seymour Greenberg of Chicago defeated J. H. Curtis of Lake Mohawk, N. J., 6—2, 6—0, in the third round, then disposed of Edward Amark of San Francisco, 6—1, 6—1, in the quarter-final.

George Toley of Los Angeles, seeded fourth, won from Joseph Fishback of Brooklyn, 6—2, 6—4, in the quarter-finals.

Mako will meet Toley and Greenberg will play Olewine tomorrow in the semifinals.

Palace A. C. Meets G. A. O. at Ballston

Palace Athletic Club, winners of the first-half flag in the Washington-Virginia Night League, will get a chance against outside competition tomorrow night when they go up against G. A. O., of the Departmental League at Ballston Stadium. Lefty McIntyre, Palace's veteran moundsman, will probably oppose Les Hoff, formerly of the Detroit Tiger's chain. Palace plays a league double-header against Village Motors at Ballston.

Carr & Boswell Beats May Ten, 7 to 1

Carr Brothers and Boswell softball ten started making good its boast of a serious challenge for second half honors in the Capital City League last night at Washington Softball Stadium, downing May Hardware, 7-1, as Tommy Dobyns tossed a three-hit ball game.

"Reds" King, May twirler, suffered one bad inning, the first when he gave up three hits, two walks and was the victim of two errors as five runs tallied. C. Frey and L. Frey led the Carr Brothers' seven hit attack.

D. C. Firemen maintained their undefeated status by pounding out a 9-3 triumph over Greenbelt, undefeated National Night League leader, with Nick Brienza flipping five-hit ball. George Moore, with a homer and single led the Firemen attack. Ben Goldfadden, playing-manager for Greenbelt, clouted one for the Greenies.

Tonight, one of Baltimore's most prominent teams will invade when Baltimore Shipbuilding ten, formerly Baltimore Drydocks, tackles the hard-hitting Yellow Cab ten at 8 p. m., which only Wednesday night forced Kavakos Grill to eight innings before bowing, 1-0. At 9:15, in Capital City League competition, Harold Steffes will take the mound against Garvin's Grill for Fat Boy.

Morris, D.C.Golfer, 183d at Spokane

Robert L. Morris, the District's lone entrant in the Twentieth National Links championship, will be the 183rd player off the tee out of a starting field of 192 next Monday at Spokane, Wash.

Morris will play at 2:37 (P. C. T.) with Thomas Case, High Point, N. C., and James Spencer, of St. Louis. They are scheduled to play at 10:53 in the second day's qualifying round on Tuesday.

Trailing 2 to 0, in that fourth, the Nats made motions toward a big inning when Cramer led off with a single to left and Lewis drew a walk with none out. Travis banged a fierce line drive toward left field and Appling dragged it down with a leaping one-hand catch. The White Sox shortstop doubled Cramer off second on the play. Vernon's double to right that followed was useless when Early eventually flied out with the bases full.

The Nats had a chance to get back in the ball game when Travis singled to center with one out in the sixth and it seemed that they would when Vernon drove a hard shot through Kuhel's mitt. But Kuhel slowed up the ball enough to enable Second Baseman Bill Knickerbocker to make a play at first, and the Nats' scoring chances vanished.

The White Sox took a 2-0 lead off Chase in the third inning with the aid of a couple of cheap hits. With one out, Kreevich beat out a bunt to Archie, and moved to second when Appling dropped a Texas Leaguer at Lewis' feet in short right field. Wright grounded to Bloodworth and beat it out for a hit when Bloodworth, for no reason, did not throw the ball to first. Kreevich moved to third, and the bases were filled.

Early Is Dumped

At this point Julius Solters rifled a two-bagger down the right field line and everybody started running for the plate. Kreevich and Appling made it, but when Wright also tried to score, he was out on Lewis' throw to the plate. Wright dumped Early in the dirt, but the Nats' catcher fell atop him, blocked him off the plate, and held the ball.

It was a cheap sort of run, too, that the White Sox scored in the fourth. Rigney was safe when his grounder took a freak hop past Travis. He was sacrificed to second, and with two out, Kreevich scored him with a double down the left field line.

The White Sox's fourth run was scored in the sixth inning and that one was tainted, also. Appling walked with one out, and Chase struck out Wright on a low ball. The pitch went into the dirt, and when it got away from Early, Appling reached third on what the scorer called a wild pitch. Solters scored him with a single to center.

Their lead cut to 4-1 in the seventh, the Sox promptly replied with another run. Tresh led off with a hit and was sacrificed to second by Rigney. Knickerbocker's pop fly to short left fell safely for a single, and Tresh moved up to third. He scored when Kuhel forced Knickerbocker at second.

That's how the Nat's eighth straight defeat happened.

Clark Griffith Donates Use Of Ball Park

Boxing Commission Not to Waive Cut Of Gate; DeChard Will Be on Card

By Al Hailey

Joe Turner, who like Ole Man River has kept rolling along during the recent lean years of boxing in the Nation's Capital, is going to have his day—or night—July 21 in Griffith Stadium.

It's going to be "we love Joe Turner" night—that is, right up to the point at which the District Boxing Commission enters the picture.

That venerable body, which for the past year has had no trouble at all in revolutionizing its rules, has found it absolutely impossible to waive its demand for 10 per cent of the gate for the proposed "Joe Turner testimonial."

The testimonial is going to be dedicated to the glorification of the local fight talent—including Jimmy DeChard—and, get this, Clark C. Griffith is willing to donate the use of his ball park free of charge.

Griffith Heads Committee

Griffith, heading the committee to honor "Daddy Joe," last night declared that "it's about time Turner is getting a break," but the Boxing Commission followed right up with a refusal to play ball.

Chairman Claude W. Owen last night said the boxing commissioners "are willing to waive the percentage rule if we possibly could find legal justification."

But, he added, the commission placed the matter before Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech, who ruled that the language of the District fight code gives the fistic fathers no other recourse than to grab 10 per cent of the gate come July 21.

The Boxing Commission, however, failed to make it clear just why it could inveigle the corporation counsel into recommending to the city fathers its more favored pieces of rule changing while standing pat on the proposal to waive a 10 per cent cut on the Turner testimonial.

Kept Boxing Alive Here

While this department holds no brief at all for Promoter Turner, the commission's refusal to give a break to the man who kept pro fighting alive in the Capital for a period of the lowest depression appears to put it in the position of biting the hand which fed—and still manages somehow to feed—it.

Turner, whose fight shows a year ago were barely averaging $850 per each, took a blow on the chin when the Boxing Commission raised its 5 per cent cut to 10 per cent, putting up the argument that because of the small gates the ring body's cut was not enough to cover operating expenses.

The added cut was promptly thrown onto the backs of the customers by Turner, with the result that cash customers began staying away from his fights in even larger numbers—the Boxing Commission all the while shouting that poor newspaper publicity, lack of promotional ability, etc., etc., was responsible for the anemic turnouts.

Commission Changed Rules

Then came Promoter Mike Jacobs and "big time" boxing, and the local fight body promptly kicked Turner in the pants again by changing its rules twice a day to suit the whims of the big-money mogul from New York. And despite the changes the commissioners still insist they can't make an exception for one show and waive the 10 per cent cut of the gate.

Griffith, who has been charging Turner 15 per cent for rental of the ball park, last night was putting his entire strength behind the move to give Joe a break.

"I think that Turner is entitled to every consideration that the sporting fraternity in Washington can give him because he has put on so many good shows when everybody else was turning tail," Griffith said.

The 18th at Cherry Hills—and Another Hogan Putt

Woodmont Pro Giving Par Big Beating

Raymond Willett, the assistant professional at Woodmont Club, is currently in the midst of a sub-par scoring streak, that is, for the second nine of each 18 he plays.

WILLETT

Yesterday the assistant to Gene Larkin played 36 holes, 18 over his home course and 18 at Manor.

In the morning he was out in 39 at Woodmont, four over par, and back in 32, two under par, for a 71.

In the afternoon at Manor he was out in 38, three over par, and back in 32, three under par, for a 70. He came to the eighteenth hole needing a par four for a 31, skied a drive, sliced a perfect two-iron shot to the edge of the green—and then took three putts as his putt for a 30 was too bold and slipped well past the cup.

Last week at Kenwood Raymond played the back nine first, in 41 strokes, six over par, and then came back in 31, four under par, for a 72.

That leaves him nine under par for the last three back nines he has played.

Willett has definitely established himself as the man to beat in the coming assistant pro championship. Buck Worsham, the defending champion, is in the Navy. Warner Gray, Congressional, and Ernie Garlem, East Potomac, are both to be inducted soon and Eddie Stevens, Manor, is already in the Army, at Edgewood Arsenal. In fact, if Uncle Sam takes many more of the boys Willett, who is in Class 3A, may win the title by default.—M. W. W.

Ival Lambert Leads Bi-State League Hurlers

Cumberland, Md., July 10.—Ival (Speed) Lambert, bespectacled fireball pitcher of the Frostberg American Legion outfit, is leading the Bi-State Baseball League with five victories and one defeat. He also leads in strikeouts with 30.

Cumberland's William (Boots) Miller is runner-up to Lambert with four victories and two losses. Stanley Stetz, Frostburg, has two wins and no defeats.

try's last contender. Shute was eight up at the 27-hole mark.

Vic Ghezzi, of Deal, N. J., the biggest specimen left in the running, overhauled Jack Grout, of West Pittston, Pa., for a one-up decision. Jimmy Hines, of Great Neck, N. Y., ushered out Harold (Jug) McSpaden, the Kansan transplanted to Winchester, Mass., 6 and 4, with both playing the sort of golf you'd find in a businessmen's Saturday afternoon foursome.

Nelson, who twice nearly holed out accurate iron shots from the fairway, went ahead against Guldahl at the sixth hole this morning and stretched his lead to five holes at one juncture. His foe, who captured his second straight Open title here three years ago, battled a wavering putter much of the day.

Pairings

Nelson vs. Hogan.
Sarazen vs. Shute.
Snead vs. Mangrum.

Duffer's Play For Women Starts Today

High handicapped women golfers of the District Association, 93 in number, are scheduled to compete in the Duffer's Cup play for the Elizabeth Harris Trophy today at Kenwood, last scheduled event before the annual competition for The Washington Post Trophies July 21.

Entries for The Post Cup Tournament close next Friday, July 18, the class A entries with Mrs. D. S. Platt at GEorgia 4847 and the class B entries with Mrs. H. J. Klossner at MEtropolitan 4295.

The star players will compete at Manor Club and the class B field at Congressional. It is only the second year's competition for the latter trophy, won last year by Mrs. Ingman Harr, of Washington Golf and Country Club. Mrs. C. P. Medley, of Indian Spring, won the class A cup last year.

The women golfers are also reminded of Sunday' entry closing date for the District of Columbia Golf Association's annual Mixed Scotch Foursome tournament next Tuesday at Congressional. Dr. W. C. Barris is accepting entries at the club.

Little Tavern Beats Heurich Again, 8 to 7

The Little Tavern nine moved into second place, one-half a game behind the leading Cameo Furniture team, by defeating Heurich Brewers, 8 to 7, for the third successive time in a Washington Post-Industrial League game on the East Ellipse yesterday.

Scoring in only two innings, the second and fourth, Little Tavern managed to pile up four runs in each to outpoint the Brewers. Heurich tied the score, 4-4, at the end of the third stanza but the Tavernites immediately retaliated in the fourth by scoring four more runs. The Brewers' three-run rally in the fifth was not sufficient to endanger the Tavern nine's victory.

Miss Osborne Leads Advance In Net Tourney

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, July 10.—Twenty-three-year-old Margaret Osborne of San Francisco led the advance into the quarter-finals of the Women's Middle States Tennis Championships today with a 6—1, 6—0 victory over Mrs. Bunny Harshaw Vosters, the Philadelphia titleholder.

Mrs. Vosters' husband of 11 days watched the match from the grandstand. She put up a good fight, but was no match for the tall Californian, seeded No. 5 and National Girls' Champion in 1936.

Miss Osborne's opponent tomorrow will be Hope Knowles of Philadelphia, the No. 4 favorite who reached the quarter-finals by defeating Mrs. John W. Clegg, jr., of Philadelphia, 6—2, 6—3. Miss Knowles is the ranking player of the Middle States District.

Nellie Sheer, high school senior from Miami Beach, Fla., and the country's seventh ranking junior player, also advanced with an easy 6—1, 6—3 triumph over Barbara Strobhar of Philadelphia.

For the second successive day defening Champion Helen Bernhard of New York was extended to three sets to win. The 20-year-old Cornell student, who is seeded No. 3, finally eliminated Dottie Wightman of Longwood, Long Island, 6—3, 4—6, 6—1.

Helen Jacobs, the No. 1 favorite, lost only two games in brushing aside Peggy Welsh of Philadelphia, 6—1, 6—1.

Poffenberger Joins Georgia Semi-Pro Team

By the Associated Press

Atlanta, July 10. — Big Baron (Boots) Poffenberger, erstwhile big league pitcher now in exile from the Southern Association because he tried to bean an umpire, joined the Buford, Ga., semipro baseball club Wednesday.

Boots registered his anger over an umpire's order to leave a recent Southern Association game by hurling a fast ball at the arbiter. The ball struck the umpire and Poffenberger was suspended from the Nashville Volunteers for 90 days.

He had compiled a record of seven wins against two losses before getting the exile order from President Trammell Scott of the Southern Association. He had won his last three assignments, including a one-hitter and a two-hitter. Last season he won 27 games for the Nashville club but was denied another big league try.

The big pitcher formerly hurled for the Detroit Tigers and Brooklyn Dodgers and was for a time on organized baseball's blacklist for "jumping" the National League club.

Bob Bensinger Will Play at Norfolk Net

By the Associated Press

Norfolk, Va., July 10.—Officials of the Middle Atlantic Lawn Tennis Association today completed the list of entries for the sectional boys' and junior tournaments to be held at the Norfolk Country Club tomorrow and Saturday.

The latest entries came from Baltimore, Washington and Lynchburg. Huntington, W. Va., has been unheard from by letter, but Dickie Williams, that city's junior king, arrived in town last night to announce that the remaining members of his party could be expected late today.

Bob Bensinger, who most likely will be conceded the top-seeded spot in the junior tourney, heads the list of those from the National Capital. Other representatives from there include Bob Hall, junior runner-up; Britt Schweitzer, boys' champion, and Delos (Cotton) Smith, runner-up.

Chisox Owner to Back Dykes To Limit in Ump Squabble

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 10.—Mrs. Grace R. Comiskey, president-owner of the Chicago White Sox, likes the way Manager Jimmy Dykes is running her team and will "back him to the limit" in the current umpire-squabble which has had the rotund, fiery little pilot under indefinite suspension since last Sunday.

Mrs. Comiskey let that be known in no uncertain terms today, verbally jumping from the parlor smack into the center of a controversy which started with a row between Dykes and Umpire Steve Basil last Saturday and which was climaxed by his being given a public "spanking" to go with the suspension order of Will Harridge, American League president.

"I don't propose to let Jim dwn," Mrs. Comiskey said, adding however, that she has not talked over the situation with Dykes, who has been visiting a Minnesota clinic. "We'll back him to the limit. Those reports of his being paroled to White Sox officials don't make sense. We don't propose to exact any guarantees of good conduct from Jim. He's doing a good job for us and we want him to go along as he is."

Mrs. Mahoney Gains in D. C. Net Tourney

Top-seeded Margo Lee Mahony advanced into the semifinals of the Women's District tennis championships yesterday at Columbia Country Club, but the narrowness of her victory over unranked Mrs. Frances Rowan presaged trouble for the favorite in her next test.

Mrs. Mahony, who was only able to defeat Mrs. Rowan, 6—4, 6—3, in a match close as the scores indicate, now is given no more than an even chance to dispose of fourth-seeded Sara Moore when they meet today at 5:30 p. m. in one semifinal match.

The other semifinals, at 5 p. m. today, will bring together second-ranked Willie O'Steen Herbert and third-seeded Charlotte Decker. Miss Decker moved up yesterday by outlasting the veteran Dorette Miller, 6—3, 7—5, while Mrs. Herbert gained the penaultimate round Wednesday.

In yesterday's doubles, the second seeded combination of Miss Moore and Eleanor Fishburne defeated Frances Sturtevant and Jane Wilerding, 6—1, 9—7, to gain the finals, and Elinor Finckel and Mrs. Miller beat Peggy Smith and Mrs. Rowan to reach the semifinals. Today at 6 p. m. Mrs. Miller and Miss Finckel go up against the top-seeded combination of Mrs. Mahony and Mrs. Herbert.

Consolation singles opened yesterday and Margaret Graham, Eva Dellinger, Eleanor Fishburne and Elinor Finckel gained the semifinals. Mrs. Fishburne and Miss Finckel will meet today at 3:30, while Mrs. Graham and Miss Dellinger will play their match at 3 p. m. Saturday.

Al Davis Has Case Of Chronic Sinus

New York, July 10 (AP).—Al (Bummy) Davis, New York welterweight boxer and private in the Sixty-ninth Coast Artillery, stationed at Camp Hulen, Tex., is in a satisfactory condition but suffering from a chronic sinus, officials at the Fort Jay Hospital, on Governors Island, said today.

Davis, knocked out by Fritzie Zivic in the tenth round, July 2, was taken to Fort Jay Tuesday from Kings County Hospital, which he had entered for treatment for facial injuries and pains in his head.

Danny Scocca Again Rides Hagerstown Feature Winner

D. C. Jockey Scores With Welsh Lad

Pearce's Horse Wins By 4 Lengths Over Martha's Queen, With Streamer Close 3d

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Hagerstown, Md., July 10.—Jockey Danny Scocca seems to have a lock and key on the feature races at this meeting, for the second straight day the Washington boy was in the saddle of the front horse in the outstanding event on the card. In the Hagerstown Herald-Mail Purse, the fifth event, Scocca did a lot of hustling and scuffling and brought Mrs. Gordon H. Pearce's Welsh Lad home four lengths ahead of the closest opposition.

A. R. Cremen's Martha's Queen was second in the field of eight while racing in the role of a long shot. She was a half length in front of M. Catalano's Streamer. The winner was clocked in 1:51 for the mile and a sixteenth and returned $13 to his backers. Ideal racing weather prevailed and the turf strip was in splendid condition.

Martha's Queen and Streamer battled for the pacemaking honors in the early stages. Welsh Lad, under Scocca's rating, was close up. Martha's Queen finally shook off Streamer but Welsh Lad moved up as the new challenger. Scocca took Welsh Lad to the front and the race, as far as first position was concerned, was over. Martha's Queen tired but not as much as Streamer and gained the place position.

Double Pays $190.90

Once again the daily double paid a sizeable sum.. Those who backed the 8-3 combination took down $190.90 for the usual deuce investment. T. Dora's Anonymous, ridden by the unfashionable Jockey F. Woodstock, got up in the last jump to win a photo decision over J. Donn's Hi Toots in the first race. Anonymous bumped Hi Toots leaving the gate. The winner paid an individual mutuel of $25.10.

Jockey Clarence Wright, who rides in rather unorthodox form, but who rides winners, was aboard H. W. Pearson's Gold Sweep in the second race. Wright took the $7.20 shot to the top on the back stretch and he led Mardi Gras and Snuggle to the wire.

Jockey Carson Kirk, the Silver Spring pride, won the sixth race with Mrs. C. Hadaway's Grand Waltz. He got to the front early and the daughter of Grand Ace had River Broom and Count Me closest to her at the end. She paid $16.60.

Selections at Hagerstown

Dear Al—Jockey Leon Garrett will not be seen in action again at this meeting. The stewards suspended him for striking Stand Alone over the head when he carried that horse out with Shorts here in Wednesday's final race. His case has been referred to the Maryland Racing Commission. As usual with most disqualifications and suspensions, this happened in the final stages of the race. What about the 2-year-old Anonymous bowling over horses leaving the gate in yesterday's first race? Something should be done about the saliva test. The trainer of a horse has no defense against the report of a positive test against one of his horses. At least the trainer should be given a sealed sample of the saliva at the same time the official specimen is taken. Around the country we hear tales of favoritism in tests, about certain horsemen having the doping concession, etc. Present methods of pointing the finger of guilt at a trainer via the saliva test are un-American. The horsemen at least should have the opportunity of proving himself innocent. Jockey Martin Bletzacker canceled his mounts yesterday. He was thrown by a horse during training hours and hurt his side. Friend Jack McKenzie of the Hollywood track wants me to fly out to see the $50,000 race at the California oval and I might do that. The race is a week from Saturday. I wonder if W. L. Brann doesn't wake up at night and wish he had Lou Shaefer to train Challedon again—but he don't talk about that. And I don't talk about Walter Haight, that colt. Visitors to Hagerstown continue to talk about the spic-and-span condition of the plant. Brother Bester really turned in a good job. See you on the rail.

BILL.

Stock List Works Irregularly Higher; Pepsi-Cola Sets New High in Lively Deals

New York, July 10.—The stock market managed to break a little better than even today despite the persistence of irregularity which started late Wednesday.

While many leaders of the recent speedy climb were under water throughout, an assortment of specialties, utilities, rubber, coppers, aircrafts and farm implements overrode selling currents to finish with gains of fractions to around 2 points.

Profit cashing on the price swing to the highest levels since January, brokers said, was the principal deterrent to the rise. Bullish indicators still were seen in the war news, inflationary symptoms and the general run of business.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was up .1 of a point at 43.3, or a net of 1.4 points on the week to date. Dealings tapered off substantially, transfers totaling 838,095 shares compared with 1,097,184 the day before and 1,397,673 Tuesday.

Among shares getting into new high ground for 1941 were Pepsi-Cola, White Rock, consolidated aircraft, United States rubber common and preferred and Great Western preferred.

On the upside also were consolidated Edison, North American, American Water Works, Union Carbide, Allied Chemical, Anaconda, Kennecott, J. I. Case, International Harvester, Dow Chemical, Eastman Kodak, Loew's and J. C. Penney.

Woolworth got back ⅜ of its 2¼-point drop yesterday attributed to disappointment over a cut in the dividend. American Telephone duplicated its 2-point fall of the preceding session, apparently still under pressure after announcement of the terms of the company's debenture conversion offering.

Losers included U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, Santa Fe, Great Northern, New York Central, Southern Pacific, Westinghouse, du Pont, Johns-Manville, United Aircraft, Montgomery Ward and American Car & Foundry.

Pepsi-Cola was the most active stock, returning to popularity after a couple of days' rest. Soft drink company issues were benefitted partly by mounting seasonal demand and the outlook for lower bottle taxes than most had expected. Rails lagged as last week's freight loadings showed a more than normal recession although they were the largest for any like period since 1931.

In the Curb Waco Aircraft was up 1¾ on a pleasing earnings statement. Others ahead were Aluminum of America, Electric Bond & Share, Bell Aircraft, Todd Shipyards and Phoenix Securities. Volume here approximated 163,000 shares versus 168,000 yesterday.

Mildly irregular trends prevailed in today's bond market with further profit taking in the recently strong rail group but declines were small with many resistant issues.

Volume of $8,441,750, par value, compared with $9,783,800 on Wednesday. The Associated Press averages showed only minor changes either way throughout.

Bank Idle Cash In Week Slides $150,000,000

By the Associated Press

Government borrowing and other factors trimmed $150,000,000 off of idle money in the banks in the week ended July 9 leaving $5,120,000,000.

The Federal Reserve Board said the principal cause of the decline was the payment by banks and others of $362,000,000 during the week for a new series of reconstruction finance corporation notes.

Changes in member bank reserve balances and related items during the week and the year ended July 9, 1941, were reported as follows:

Washing Machine Makers Halve Aluminum Use

Chicago, July 10 (AP).—Use of aluminum by the washing machine industry has been reduced from an average of 6½ pounds per washer to 3 pounds since the beginning of the year. J. R. Bohnen, secretary of the American Washer and Ironer Manufacturers Association, stated today.

Bohnen made the statement in connection with an announcement that members of the Association will meet in Washington Monday to organize an industry-wide committee to act in cooperation with the office of price administration and civilian supply.

"Still further reductions are being made as rapidly as change-overs in manufacturing methods can be accomplished," Bohnen said.

Holiday Week Cuts Freight Loadings

By the Associated Press

The Association of American Railroads reported yesterday that 740,493 cars of revenue freight were loaded during the week ending last Saturday.

This was a decrease of 168,171 cars, or 18.5 per cent, compared with the preceding week due to the July 4 holiday; an increase of 103,324 cars, or 16.2 per cent, compared with a year ago, and an increase of 185,341 cars, or 33.4 per cent, compared with 1939.

All classes of loadings declined in the holidy week. The drop in total loadings was greater than usual for the holiday because many firms closed down for the entire weekend.

Week's Bank Clearings Display 33.9% Gain

New York, July 10 (AP).—Bank clearings showed broad country-wide increases over a year ago in the week ended Wednesday, Dun & Bradstreet reported today.

The total for 23 leading cities was $5,590,918,000, or 33.9 per cent more than in the comparable week in 1940. When compared with the preceding week, however, the aggregate was $1,613,680,000 less because the July 4 holiday shortened the week to five days against six last week.

Judge Darr held that Libbey-Owens-Ford infringed on Celluloid's Walsh patent in its manufacture of laminated automobile glass.

By the Associated Press

The Chicago Burlington & Quincy Railroad asked the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday for authority to issue $9,387,000 of 1½ per cent equipment trust certificates.

The railroad proposes to use the proceeds of the issue in connection with the purchase of 3,925 freight cars costing about $11,000,000.

Brokers' Loans Drop $13,000,000 in Week

By the Associated Press

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday that last week's loans to brokers and dealers on securities held by reporting member banks in New York City totaled $369,000,000, the week ended yesterday and the total represented a decrease of $13,000,000 when compared with the previous week. Cottonseed Oil Plunges; Other Staples Steady

By the Associated Press

Price swings in speculative commodities were comparatively small yesterday excepting cottonseed oil futures which plunged on heavy speculative liquidation in anticipation of early price ceiling action.

At its lowest cottonseed oil was down nearly a cent a pound. A late rally reduced final losses to .34 to .60 of a cent.

Other leading New Yorw contract markets showed the following closing changes; Santos Coffee, down .03 to .06 of a cent; wool tops, .2 of a cent higher to .3 of a cent lower; silk, down 1 to 2 cents; hides, up .05 of a cent.

Cotton futures finished unchanged to 40 cents a bale lower, the mild reaction halting a steep July rise which had carried prices to 11-year highs.

The Associated Press weighted index of 35 wholesale spot staples declined to 89.41 per cent of the 1926 average from 89.46 per cent Wednesday.

Wheat Holds Steady

Chicago, July 10 (AP).—Wheat prices close dtoday at exactly the same figures posted at the final bell yesterday. An advance of as much as 1⅞ cents, which reached its zenith around noon, was wiped out in the final hour.

Buying attributed largely to mills contributed to the early upturn which carried prices to within fractions of the 14-month peaks reached Tuesday. Later, when mill buying dried up, profit taking and hedging, the latter associated with the new crop movement, weakened the market. Wheat also was unsettled by a break of as much as 5¼ cents in soybean prices. Reports about introduction of a bill to lower the penalty on excess wheat attracted much attention.

Wheat closed unchanged, July, 1.05⅛ to 1.05¼; September, 1.06⅝ to 1.06¾; corn, ⅛ to ⅝ lower; July, 73⅝; September, 75⅝; oats, ⅛ off to ¼ up; soybeans, 3⅜ to 3¾ odwn; rye, ⅛ to 2¼ higher, and lard, 22 to 30 lower.

Earnings Reports And Dividends

American Car & Foundry Co. resumed dividends on the common stock after a four-year lapse, declaring $1 a share, payable October 1 to holders of record September 24. A regular quarterly dividend of $1.75 on the preferred stock payable October 1 to holders of record September 24, was also declared along with a dividend of $2.04 a share on the preferred which clears up all the previous undistributed earnings applicable to the preferred. This dividend is payable August 29 to stockholders of record August 22.

Rayonier Inc. and wholly-owned subsidiaries announced a net profit of $4,005,871 for the fiscal year ended April 30 after Federal income and excess profit taxes, equal after dividend requirements on $2 cumulative preferred stock to $2.86 a share on common stock compared with $2,389,488, or $1.18 a share in the preceding year.

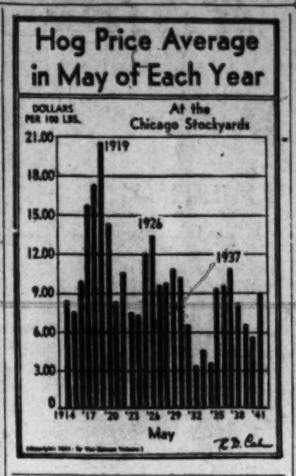
Gillette Safety Razor Co. declared a dividend of 15 cents a share on common stock, payable July 31 to holders of record July 21. Previous payment was 10 cents on December 24, 1940.

Foundry Delivers 1,000th Army Tank

Jersey City, N. J., July 10 (AP).—Charles J. Hardy, president of the American Car and Foundry Co., announced today the firm was delivering its 1,000th tank to the Federal Government, and called the delivery "a new record for the company and the whole industry."

Hardy told the annual stockholders' meeting that production of the ironclads, each weighing 12½ tons and mounting a 37-millimeter and machine guns, was begun in April, 1940.

He said the firm had "the largest volume of business on hand in the history of the company, and it is getting bigger." New business for June totaled $36,950,000, he added.



Week's Auto Output Soars To 116,480

Detroit, July 10.—The trade paper Automotive News estimated today that passenger car and truck output this week would total 116,480 units, compared with 96,854 last week and 71,842 this week a year ago.

General Motors divisions were credited with 54,995 cars and trucks this week against 44,154 last week; Chrysler with 23,815 against 21,357 and Ford with 24,025 compared with 21,357 last week.

The survey said the Lincoln division of Ford closed down this week for model changeover and added that of the so-called independent group, Studebaker, Packard and Willys were the only companies still on 1941 model production.

Defense Bond Questionnaire

Q. I would like to provide a regular income for myself when I retire. Can this be done by means of the Defense Savings Bonds?

A. Yes. If you purchase a bond for $37.50 each month, each bond will mature in exactly ten years. Thus at the end of ten years you will have $50 payable each month as each of your bonds reaches maturity.

Q. Can my children buy Defense Savings Stamps?

A. Yes. Hundreds of thousands of American children are buying stamps regularly as their share in the national savings program.

Marines Hunting Hares, Not Spies

Great Lakes, Ill., July 10 (AP).—Two burley Marine sergeants, with laws set and rifles ready, crept through the brush in ravines surrounding this naval training station today.

Thoughts of sabotage and espionage flashed through the minds of excitable observers.

But the men merely were hunting rabbits. They were ordered to exterminate them because they have become so numerous that they constitute a nuisance.

NOT A CHANCE—IT WAS HIRED BY HI CALBUR—YOU KNOW HOW HELPFUL HE'D BE!
WAIT—CAN YOU FLY THAT PLANE?
CAN A DUCK SWIM?
LET'S GET GOING—JANE HAS AN IDEA!

SUPERMAN — Ersatz! — BY JERRY SIEGEL AND JOE SHUSTER

FOOL! LET ME KILL HIM BEFORE HE DESTROYS US!
THAT WOULDN'T DO AT ALL!
NO NEED FOR FEAR. BEFORE YOU IS NOT SUPERMAN—BUT A NOTORIOUS CRIMINAL WHO RESEMBLES HIM CLOSELY—"LIPPY" JENKS!
HIYA, FOLKS! HAD YA FOOLED, DIDN'T I?
WHEN IN COSTUME, "LIPPY'S" RESEMBLANCE TO SUPERMAN IS SO STARTLING THAT IT CAN FOOL ANYONE—AS IS EVIDENCED BY YOUR OWN CONSTERNATION.—MY SCHEME IS AS FOLLOWS: "LIPPY" IN HIS DISGUISE AS SUPERMAN, PERPETRATES A SERIES OF OUTRAGES....
NATURALLY THE REAL SUPERMAN WILL SEEK HIM OUT IN AN EFFORT TO CLEAR HIS NAME. WHEN HE DOES, I WILL BE WAITING—AND SO WILL THE ELECTRO-DART GUN!
A SPLENDID IDEA!
THAT MILLION DOLLAR REWARD IS PRACTICALLY YOURS!

Listen! with Glynn

Frances Langford and Dick Powell, both of whom you probably know as two of Hollywood's better known vocalists, are to have the starring roles in the new "Southern Cruise" series which you'll hear over WJSV and the Columbia network every Friday night at 6:30 beginning tonight.

The new musical series is designed to pay tribute to our Latin-American neighbors and, in view of that, it also is being short waved to them over Columbia's international short wave station, WCBX.

The format calls for the entire company to be aboard a mythical American liner making calls at the various ports of the Latin-American nations. In addition to Miss Langford and Powell, the company each week will be made up of leading Hollywood figures, with the emphasis on comedians.

Musical accompaniments for the programs, which are to originate in Hollywood, will be provided by Lud Gluskin's Orchestra and Ken Niles, who was master of ceremonies on the "Hollywood Hotel" series a short time ago, will do the same sort of stint on the new series.

There was some talk a while back of having the series originate on a real cruise, with, say, one program from Rio, another from Buenos Aires, and so on, but it seems that the technical difficulties presented were a little too great to insure good reception. And don't think the principals weren't disappointed, too.

East's Supply Of Gasoline Rises Slightly

By the Associated Press

New York, July 10.—Gasoline supplies on the Eastern Seaboard have been holding up remarkably well, despite transfer of Gulf-New York tankers to "aid to Britain" service, oil men said here today.

On April 26 gasoline stocks on the East Coast, from Maine to Florida, totaled 20,177,000 barlels, and between then and June 28, they actually rose, increasing to 22,888,000 barrels, a net increase of 2,711,000 barrels, or around 13 per cent.

As of July 5, however, they stood at 21,698,000 barrels, according to American Petroltum Institute figules. The Fourth of July motor traffic was largely responsible for the decline between June 28 and July 5.

However, the latest aggregate was still 1,521,000 barrels greater than the total on April 26.

Surplus Fuel Oil Used

Oil men said the increase in gasoline stocks was attained in part by using Eastern fuel oil for "cracking stocks" at nearby gasoline refineries. Because of the mildness of the past winter, fuel oil stocks were fairly substantial, so refiners cracked the gasoline out of some of the surplus fuel.

This, of course, decreased stocks of fuel oil, but it is hoped fuel oil supplies can be increased substantially before demand widens with lower temperatures in the autumn.

Many oil men here at the moment think that while there may be a growing shortage of gasoline in the East this autumn, talk about ration cards before then is premature, if not pure fantasy.

The unencouraging element in the picture, however, is this: Gasoline stocks of 21,698,000 barrels as of July 5 are slightly under 22,286,000 barrels on the same date a year ago. Not only that, but consumption of gasoline this year is running 12½ per cent above last year.

Supply for 32 Days

In other words, while the present stocks of gasoline would have represented 37 days' supply a year ago, they represent only 32 days' supply today.

Stocks of heavy residual oil—Bunker and other types for factory use—totaled 7,380,000 barrels on the Eastern Seaboard on July 5, compared with 9,650,000 a year earlier.

Stocks of distillate oil—the types used for home heating—stood July 5 at 9,750,000 barrels, compared with 10,520,000 at this time last year.

Around 1,400,000 barrels of crude oil and oil products arrived at Eastern seaboard destinations daily before 30 tankers plying between Gulf and Eastern ports were transferred to home defense and aid to Britain duties. The transfers reduced arrivals of oil and oil products about 200,000 barrels a day. Since the start of the transfers, old high-cost pipelines have been impressed into expanded service, the "load linees" on tankers have been raised to permit carrying of larger cargoes, and some additional oil has been coming into the East by rail. Through these steps, around 40,000 to 50,000 barrels of oil now are being carried to Eastern points daily, providing a 20 to 25 per cent offset for the 200,000 barrels daily formerly unloaded here by tankers now transferred to defense and "aid to Britain" service.

Vichy Decrees Death for Absent De Gaulle Aide

Vichy, France, July 10.—Death sentence by default was imposed by the military summary court at Gannat today on Col. Edgar Rene Larminat, one of the principal leaders of the DeGaullist military units. His property in France was ordered confiscated, as was done in the case of Gen. Georges Catroux, who headed the British-Free French attack in Syria.

Col. Larminat was formerly chief of staff of the command of the French forces of the Levant at Beirut, but his presence in the Syrian campaign has not been reported here. He was said to have incited the Lake Tchad revolt and afterward to have commanded motorized units in North Africa and Ethiopia.

Expert Explains Why Soviet Defeat Would Imperil U. S.

(Editor's note: In the following dispatch an expert on Far Eastern affairs, a member of the Harvard University history department, explains the significance of the United States' relations to the Far East in connection with the Russo-German War.)

By John King Fairbank

Written for the United Press

Cambridge, Mass., July 10.—If Russia loses to Germany, what will happen in the Far East? This is a vital question for Americans because we really are involved in Asia just as much as in Europe.

The answer is most disquieting, more serious than we realize. If Hitler's blitz succeeds against European Russia, Germany will have a good chance of joining forces with Japan and developing an Axis battlefront in the Far East. German planes over Singapore and the Dutch East Indies may sound improbable, but it is not as improbable as many things that already have happened.

If Russia collapses in Europe, we can have no assurance that Russia in Siberia will not come to terms. The Red army in the Far East has its own heavy industry base around Lake Baikal and has prepared for self-sufficiency in war against Japan. But it is still controlled from Moscow, and we can not be certain that a compromise engineered by Moscow would not bring Siberia into Hitler's camp, perhaps without a shot being fired. In that case what would happen to the democratic front in Eastern Asia?

If the Germans, by their fighting and bargaining, obtained a guiding hand over Soviet economy and the use of Soviet railroads and bases, the Far East then would be wide open to them, along several lines of approach.

First, in China. The strong point on our side here is the army of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek in west China which still is holding the Japanese and thus keeping them out of the Philippines and the Indies. But west China backs onto the vast province of Chinese Turkestan, through which have come Russian supplies along the 2,000-mile motor road from the strategic Turk-Sib (Turkestan-Siberian) Railway.

Hitler, once established in Siberia, could use this same route, bargaining with Chinese appeasers to send supplies along it and by making offers to the Chinese Communists. In other words, the Nazis would have access to Free China and a chance to try their tactics of infiltration.

The possibility is, therefore, that Germany after getting control of Russia could influence China from the rear. First, by threats and stirring up of trouble. Secondly, Hitler could try to influence China by an offer of tangible help. A strong China to keep Japan in check might be Hitler's game, just as much as it is ours. By interceding with his Far Eastern ally he might get Japan out of China in search of richer game to the south. By a combination of threats and cajolery, he might well confront Chiang Kai-shek with a bargain which he could not afford to refuse—favorable terms with Japan, German technicians to rebuild China, and German planes to defend it, once rebuilt. In this way he might be able to take China out of the war entirely.

The second, and still greater, danger, however, concerns German influence over Japan. Suppose that, by blitzing and bargaining with Moscow, Hitler gains control over the Far Eastern bases of the Red army before Japan is able to do so by a frontal attack.

In that case the standing threat to Japan from the Russian air base at Vladivostok could be greatly intensified by Germany. German or Russian submarines from Vladivostok could hamstring the vast and incessant flow of Japanese shipping which is necessary to keep the war in China going. Japan would probably find it more feasible to stay in the Axis than oppose it.

There is one priceless aid Hitler can offer to the Japanese new order—air power. The Japanese know that a 1,500-mile supply line through the South China Sea from their bases at Formosa or Hainan could not be maintained without air protection. Without such a supply line to back up her armed forces Japan cannot afford to descend upon the Indies or Singapore and must instead try to move bit by bit down through the jungle and mountains of the Malay Peninsula.

The Japanese aircraft industry is notably weaker than the Anglo-American. But with Hitler supplying the air force the whole Far Eastern stalemate could be broken overnight.

If Germany controlled Russia we might also, of course, expect trouble via Alaska, where we would then be like England, within eyesight of German bases. Russian fortifications in Bering Strait and a submarine base not far away have been reported.

The implications of a Russian collapse are that Germany could enter the Far East, putting pressure upon both China and Japan, perhaps taking China out of the war and galvanizing Japan into action against us.
